ENDOWMENT FUNDS CANNOT BE TAXED

When They Are Held By an Educational Institution.

Not Even If They Are Loaned on Farm Mortgages.

Sweeping Decision By Supreme Court In Rice County Case.

St. Paul, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—By a decision filed today, the supreme court declares that the Bishop Seabury mission endowment fund is exempt from taxation. No similar case has ever been before the court previously and the decision also affects other educational institutions in the state. It is the case of Rice county, appellant, against the Bishop Seabury mission, an attempt to collect taxes to the amount of $55,000, an amount sufficient to have forced the Seabury divinity school out of existence. The decision of the lower court in favor of the school is affirmed, the supreme court holding that the endowment fund is exempt from taxation. The court says the exemption cannot be limited to real property under the language of the constitution, but is extended to the institution and not to specific property.

The appellant claimed that the exemption applies only to such property as is directly connected with the institution and not to a fund loaned out on farm property and other security. The court says this is not the spirit of the constitution.

It is held that an endowment is a portion of the institution as essential to it as furniture or other personal property. Justice Brown writes the opinion. The syllabus is:

"Defendant, a corporation organized under and pursuant to the statutes of this state as an education institution, and a 'seminary of learning' within the meaning of section 3, article 9, of the state constitution, has certain endowments, aggregating something like $275,000, which are invested in farm mortgages, the income from which is devoted exclusively to its maintenance and support. Held that the endowment fund is exempt from taxation, within section 3, article 9, of the constitution."

WILL APPEAL TO CONGRESS

Judge McMillan Is Feeling Sore Over His Removal.

Denver, June 26.—The Rocky Mountain News prints a statement from Judge McMillan of New Mexico regarding his removal from office. He said. "I am surprised at the outcome of my case. When it was submitted in April I was satisfied I had established a complete vindication. I never had charge of a matter where every point in controversy had been more thoroughly met and answered."

The judge bitterly attacked the character of some of the witnesses against him, and declared that disappointed ambition had much to do with the charges against him. He said: "I believe Attorney General Knox intended to be eminently fair and just, but the assistants in the department were filled with prejudice against me by one of my opponents."

The judge declared that he would not allow the smirch upon his character to stand, adding: "When congress convenes I shall ask the senate to send for the record to pass upon the question whether it contains anything to justify the decision."

ROBBER ARRESTED.

William Baer Is Captured By Chicago Police.

Chicago, June 26.—William Baer, who is said to have planned the robbery of the Melrose hotel, Los Angeles, Cal., in which gems valued at $15,000 were stolen, was arrested today at his apartments in a downtown hotel, three hours after his arrival from San Francisco. With two other men, John Engvhal and Charles Reinlein, already under arrest here, and a strong clew as to the mystery which has enveloped the robbery apparently is solved. Baer is charged by the other prisoners with having escaped with most of the booty. He is said to have made a trip to Europe on the proceeds of the theft.

MASTER MECHANICS.

Saratoga, June 26.—At today's session of the American Railway Master Mechanics' association special reports were presented on piston valves, locomotive performances and revision of standards. Discussion on technical points by Mr. Garston, of Indianapolis; A. E. Mitchell, of St. Paul, and C. A. Telley, of Chicago.

DALTON REARRESTED.

Chicago, June 26.—Capt. J. H. Dalton, who, in February last, was convicted of fraudulent use of the mails and conducting a lottery scheme, was last night arrested on the same charge. Since his conviction he has been allowed his liberty in bonds of $10,000, the case having been appealed to the United States supreme court.

CHAMBERLAIN THE GUEST OF HONOR

Of Constitutional Club---His Services to Nation Are Recognized.

London, June 26.—The Constitutional club today entertained Colonial Secretary Chamberlain at luncheon and presented him with an address enclosed in a casket in recognition of his services to the nation. Premier Balfour made the presentation speech.

Referring to Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal proposals, he said it would be absolute folly for the Conservative-Unionist party to make opinion on economic questions a test of party loyalty. The present economic position of the country demanded the most careful consideration. The country was now in the position of an aeronaut who kept his balloon in the air by throwing out sand bags. That was a very proper course so long as he possessed a sufficiency of sand bags, but when these were exhausted it was time to reconsider the position. It must not be supposed that, because self-government had been given to the colonies, they could be regarded as separate political entities. On the contrary, they were integral portions of the British empire. The question at issue was not new, but Mr. Chamberlain, more than any other man, dead or living, had given life to the expression of the idea of imperial unity.

Mr. Chamberlain received a remarkable ovation when he rose to reply. His hosts sang "For he's a jolly good fellow" and then cheered Mrs. Chamberlain, who was among the spectators. The colonial secretary opened his remarks with repudiating the suggestions of personal competition between himself and Mr. Balfour, remarking that he could not conceive any occurrence that could shake the political association and friendship existing between them. He desired, on the eve of a great controversy, to publicly state that he believed the leadership of Mr. Balfour was essential to the success of the Unionist party. If the Unionist alliance was dissolved or weakened, the "home rule snake," which was only scotched and not killed," would again come to the front.

Turning to the problem occupying the center of the field, Mr. Chamberlain declared that the commercial union of the colonies would be far more profitable than their political union. It was not true that he had raised the cry of preferential tariffs for the benefit of himself or of the party, but it was because there was no alternative to a man holding his position, and he believed that only thereby could the empire be held together.

In the inquiry about to occur, he continued, all questions should be argued on their merits. A policy of retaliation could be better described as a policy of negotiation. The ministers would endeavor to break down the existing wall of hostile tariffs, and if they failed in these negotiations they would endeavor to retain for their own country the vast possibilities for production and opportunity for employment, the lack of which was now driving British subjects to foreign lands. Great Britain wanted someone to bargain with. During a long business and political career he (Mr. Chamberlain) had never been able to make a satisfactory deal unless he had something to give as well as to receive. The time was surely drawing near when a decision must be reached on this question, but he was not speaking for himself alone, and did not ask anyone to commit himself to the acceptance of his views.

RIVAL FACTIONS AT OYSTER BAY CLASH OVER RECEPTION

An Anniversary Is to Be Celebrated on Same Day of President's Return and the Oysterites Fear That Two Bands Will Play at Once.

Oyster Bay, June 26.—An unseemly clash has been feared between rival committees of citizens on the occasion of the reception to President Roosevelt on Saturday, but it is now hoped everything will be smoothed over and the celebration attending the president's home coming will not be marred by the dissentions of rival parties.

The original intention was to have a joint celebration of the president's return and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the settlement of the village. This was abandoned because President Roosevelt found it would be impossible to return on June 23, the date set. Not satisfied with the abandonment of the double celebration, big posters have been put out by the committee, calling on the citizens to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary Saturday morning. Both committees will have a brass band at the station to meet the president. It is hoped one will be prevailed upon not to play. President Roosevelt is a member of the board of trustees, and it is generally thought proper that the board should have charge of the reception.

KICKED A FORTUNE ABOUT DOCK

Newport, R. I., June 26.—Despite the delightful farewell that members of the British embassy gave Lady Herbert, wife of the British ambassador, upon her departure from Newport for New York, whence she sails for England shortly, her journey was greatly disturbed by the loss of a satchel containing jewels worth $15,000. A servant, in whose care the satchel had been placed, laid it beside the steps of a restaurant on the dock. The employes about the dock and restaurant supposed some one would claim the bag, never dreaming it contained anything of value. Finally the ticket agent carried it to the freight room and threw it into a corner. When an agent of the ambassador rushed up and demanded the return of the grip, several hours later, and told what it contained, there was consternation among the men that had been kicking a fortune about the platform.

FREIGHT HANDLERS' STRIKE FAILS

Chicago, June 26.—The Freight Handlers' unions involved in the Chicago & Alton strike sought a peaceable settlement of the trouble today through the agency of the teamsters' joint council, taking the direction of the strike out of the hands of President L. J. Curran. A committee of three from the local unions, appointed at a meeting last night, met a committee of the teamsters to arrange plans for ending the strike, which they now concede will end in a victory for the railroad. Desultory efforts were made at the freight sheds by the pickets to prevent the delivery of freight, but owing to the vigilance of the business agents of the teamsters, no drivers were turned back, and all freight was received and handled as usual.

PRINCIPAL WITNESS DISAPPEARS

Jackson, Ky., June 26.—There is considerable anxiety over the disappearance of G. Ray Haddick, who testified to seeing Crawford and Tharp, teamsters for Hargis, coming away from Ewen's hotel, just before it was burned. Following an assault on the bridge one night, and threats to burn him out, guards were placed around Haddick's house, but the guards have been removed and Haddick is missing. He was the principal witness for the arson cases to be considered by the grand jury on July 20.

A SHOCKING MURDER.

A New Iberia, La., Woman Roasts Step Child.

Chicago, June 26.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from New Orleans, says: Mrs. Mary Patterson is under arrest at New Iberia, charged with murder. The woman became enraged at her step-child, a little girl of 10 years, and after beating her, tied her in a corn sack and suspended her to a limb of a tree. She then made a fire beneath the tree and piled on a lot of paper to intensify the heat and smoke. The sack caught fire and the body, falling out, burned to a crisp.

CARDINAL VAUGHAN BURIED.

London, June 26.—The body of Cardinal Vaughan was transferred today from the cathedral at Westminster, where it had been lying in state to St. Joseph's college. There it was received by the priests and students and after the celebration of a high requiem mass, was interred in the presence of a large gathering.

GREAT STRIKE ENDED.

Bedford, Ind., June 26.—The great strike in the stone quarries which has been on since May 1, and which crippled the building industry in many cities, ended today, when hundreds of men returned to work.

FINNS PARDONED.

St. Petersburg, June 26.—The czar has pardoned seventy-nine Finlanders who evaded military service in 1902, and has granted their petition to be allowed now to join the colors.

SMITH IS TO REPLY

Former Postmaster General To Answer Charges Of Bristow.

Sickness Alone Can Cause the Retirement of Payne.

Washington, June 26.—The last meeting of the cabinet before the president's departure from Washington tomorrow was held today. Postmaster General Payne was among the first to reach the cabinet room. Shortly after the members had assembled Former Postmaster General Smith, who took breakfast with the president, appeared at the executive building and was ushered into the cabinet room.

Upon leaving the White House Mr. Smith, when asked if he had anything to say concerning the post office inquiry, replied that his statement in response to the references to himself in the Bristow report would be given to the public tomorrow morning.

The cabinet meeting was devoted chiefly to the clearing up of routine departmental matters in anticipation of the president's departure, although Postmaster General Payne occupied much time not only in presenting the current situation as developed by the investigation now in progress in the postoffice department, but in discussing his future plans relative to the investigation.

In this connection it can be stated authoritatively that the reports that Postmaster General Payne contemplates retiring from the cabinet, are untrue. It is well known that his health is not good and there is, of course, a possibility that he might suffer a complete breakdown or that he might be forced by the imperative orders of his physician to give up his work. But at this time, the idea of retirement is not entertained by him. He has platted out his future work in connection with the investigation of his department and is anxious to finish it. The president, it is said, has given expression to his own feeling in the matter by saying that he would permit him to resign only in the event that it became a matter of life or death.

DRILLING AND WRESTLING.

Results of Contests at the Ishpeming Celebration.

Ishpeming, Mich., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The results of the drilling contest at the Lake Superior Iron company's celebration were as follows:

Down hole—First, John Hodge, James Trengenza and James Clemo, employed at the Lake Superior hematite mine, depth, 15⅝ inches; second, William Heard, James Kitt and Edward Corry, at Lake Angeline mine, 15 1-16 inches.

The Steel officials leave today for their homes.

Upper hole—First, James Kitt, William Heard and Ed Comy, of Lake Angeline mine, 8⅝ inches deep; second, John Quine, William Drew and John Stephens, of Lake Angeline mine, 7¼ inches deep.

The wrestling contest resulted: First prize, $60, William Gill, Ishpeming; second, $40, Reuben Chapman, Trimountain, Mich.; third, $25, Ed Johns, Ishpeming; fourth, $15, William Matthews, Ishpeming.

GREEK STAYS OUT.

Wealthy Young Emigrant Cannot Enter United States.

New York, June 26.—Judge Lacombe, in the United States circuit court, has handed down an adverse opinion in the case of Charlamabis, a young Greek, who was recently prevented from landing by the immigration authorities. The intending immigrant is a member of a wealthy and influential family in Greece, and came here to look after the interests of a Greek fruit company. He was refused permission to land, the immigration officials declaring that his doing so would violate the contract labor law. Judge Lacombe sustains the board.

STEEL RAIL RECORD

Broken By Day's Work at South Chicago Plant.

Chicago, June 26.—The South Chicago plant of the Illinois Steel company yesterday turned out 1804 tons of steel rails, breaking the world's record, which has been 1772 for a day's work. In celebration of the successful day the company presented every man in the rail department with a box of cigars.

BODIES DETAINED.

Remain In Brooklyn For Lack of Formalities.

New York, June 26.—Formalities connected with the issuance of a permit by the health department for the removal of corpses may force the detention of three bodies on the transport Glacier, which has just returned from Manila. Officers of the ship applied to the Brooklyn health bureau for the permit to ship the bodies of Dr. Frederick A. Hesler, and two seamen to different parts of the country. They had no papers regarding the history of the cases and the permit was refused. It probably will be necessary to send to Manila for the papers unless the authorities there have forwarded them by mail. If they have not done so, the bodies may be held at the navy yard several weeks.

HEAVY LOSS

Caused By Burning of Cincinnati Abbatoir Plant.

Cincinnati, June 26.—Almost the entire plant of the Cincinnati Abbatoir company, one of the largest in this section, was destroyed by fire today. The fire was caused by an explosion in the engine room. The loss is estimated by the captain of the salvage corps at $300,000 although President Ryan makes the estimat much less. The insurance is $15,000. Four hundred head of cattle and 800 hogs were slaughtered yesterday. These are all consumed. The ice plant which cost $90,000 is either destroyed or rendered unfit for use. The engineer nearly lost his life from the effect of ammonia fumes escaping.

DELAWARE WILL NOT PROSECUTE LYNCHERS

CORNELL FAVORITE IN 'VARSITY RACE

Columbia Has Not Lost Hope, But Wisconsin Seems Discouraged.

Poughkeepsie, June 26.—When the 130 college oarsmen looked out of their windows this morning, they were surprised to find their race day opening with clear skies and to see the sun for the first time in twenty days. The wind from the south was hardly more than a zephyr. While the conditions this morning are exceedingly favorable there is no assurance that they will continue so propitious, for the wind is in a naturally bad quarter, the majority of storms along the Hudson valley being heralded by south winds.

Never in the history of Poughkeepsie has there been such a light attendance of college sympathizers and followers as appeared in the hotels and on the streets this morning. This may be due to the fact that the races are held late in the afternoon and there is plenty of time for the people in the cities up and down the river to get here by special trains before the first race is rowed.

The flotilla of yachts and pleasure boats of all kinds began to arrive this morning, some of them coming from New London, where the owners had witnessed the Yale-Harvard races yesterday. Among them was the Governor Flower, the state quarantine boat, carrying Governor Odell and party. The governor affects the colors of Columbia, his alma mater.

Cornell is still the favorite. Coach O'Dea, of Wisconsin, said today:

"I have been trying to instill in my men the idea that they win the race on their merits and not merely on a chance accident to the Cornell crew, but the public press and the people surrounding the men are continually pounding into them that they have no chance and I am afraid that this affects the men's minds and thus the chances of winning. But a race is won by the men at the oars and not by the people making the bets in the hotel lobbies."

Hanlon, of Columbia, is next to Courtney, of Cornell, the most confident of all the coaches here this morning. He says that his men, especially in the 'varsity crew, have a good chance to win and that it is anybody's race. The Syracuse coach is confident that his youngsters in the freshmen race will give the other crews a good fight and stand a chance to land first. Cornell puts the heaviest crews on the river this afternoon and Syracuse the lightest. The fact that Cornell has the heaviest crews shows a decided change of sentiment on the part of Coach Courtney as to the weight of the men behind the oars. Some years ago when Yale and Harvard were rowing with Cornell, Courtney contended that a light crew was better than a heavy one and, in fact, he won two races from very heavy Yale crews.

The program for the day is as follows:

4 p. m.—Four-oard race.
4:45 p. m.—Freshmen.
6 p. m.—'Varsity race.

At noon the wind had shifted around to the southwest, with indications of a further shift westward. This, if maintained, would be good for the course and make smooth water, for the highlands along the west bank shield the course from westerly winds. All indications at noon favored ideal weather for the contest.

There was no practice this morning of any account, the principal work scheduled for the oarsmen being the moving of their shells from the respective boat houses to the ice house at the two-mile mark, which is the rendezvous for all.

They are required to have their boats placed in the ice house at least two hours before the race to insure all hands being promptly at the starting line on time.

The Cornell boats were first at the rendezvous at 10 o'clock. Wisconsin was a close second, and Georgetown, Syracuse, Columbia and Pennsylvania arrived at a seasonable hour, so that there was no likelihood of any delay in starting the races through failure of any of the participants.

"GET RICH QUICK" CONCERN DOING A FOREIGN BUSINESS

A Gang of New York Grafters Which Has Been Advertising Extensively Abroad and Doing an Excellent Business, Is Being Investigated.

New York, June 26.—An investigation has been ordered by the authorities at Washington of an alleged gold mining concern with offices in this city. For three months past, it is said, the concern has been advertising freely in all the foreign newspapers. One of the advertisements, translated from a Greek paper published here, reads:

"Have you five dollars? Do you wish to make them ten within a month, one hundred within a year and one thousand within a short time?"

The board of managers named in the advertisement, composed of men asserted to be filling high public positions, such as "senator of the state of Ohio," "comptroller of the United States treasury," "treasurer of the United States," etc. There also appears the name of a member asserted to have been "formerly secretary of the treasury."

None of the names given, however, is known at all in public life in this country.

It is alleged that the company has disposed of considerable stock to foreigners, and the affair will be thoroughly investigated by agents of the treasury department.

The man whose name appears as president of the mining company declares that the advertisements are "brimful of typographical errors," and that the person named as "comptroller of the treasury is in reality a New York custom house official."

KING EDWARD'S BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED IN LONDON

The Principal Function of the Day Was the Trooping of the Colors Which Was Witnessed By a Most Distinguished Gathering.

London, June 26.—King Edward's birthday was officially celebrated today in London and at all the home naval and military stations. All the government buildings were decorated with flags, salutes were fired, the warships at all the ports dressed ship and the troops were reviewed. The main function was the trooping of the colors on the Horse Guards parade here, which the king attended on horseback. This was the first time he had ridden since his last illness. The parade ground presented a highly picturesque scene. Queen Alexandra, the princess of Wales, the duchess of Albany, the duke and duchess of Fife, the duchess of Connaught, Princess Henry of Battenberg, and their children, and the khedive of Egypt, occupied seats in the central window of the Horse Guards building, while all the other vantage points were occupied by smartly dressed women, cabinet ministers, members of the house of lords and house of commons and others. Many Americans were present, including the staff of the United States embassy, and the American rifle team, who were under the guidance of Maj. eGn. Lord Cheylemore.

The king, who wore the uniform of colonel of the Grenadier Guards, rode into the grounds surrounded by a brilliant staff and an nusually large gathering of foreign military attaches. As the king halted at the saluting base, the massed bands played the national anthem. After an inspection of the troops the ceremony of trooping the colors was carried out.

Their majesties returned to Buckingham palace heartily cheered by the crowds along the route.

JAPAN IS BECOMING IMPATIENT

London, June 26.—The Tokio correspondent of the Times says public patience in Japan with regard to the Manchurian question is increasing daily. The most sober journals declare that the nation would support the government in taking strong measures if the negotiations at Pekin are "brimful of typographical errors," and that the person named as "comptroller of the treasury is in reality a New York custom house official."

Other information, which may be considered as more reliable, says that the Japanese government is awaiting the outcome of the negotiations at Pekin and if they prove injurious to the interests and rights of Japan the government will not shrink from the necessary measures. The gravity of the situation, concludes the Times correspondent, is fully recognized in official circles.

Corwell, Arrested For White's Murder, Has Been Released.

No Evidence Was Presented Against Him at Hearing.

There Has Been Considerable Rioting at Wilmington.

Wilmington, Del., June 26.—As a result of last night's riot, William Cramer, a negro, who was shot during a disturbance in the negro district, known as the "Coast," died today. There was considerable disorder in the district and the rioting reached its climax in a fight among the negroes themselves. This occurred about midnight. William Simms has been arrested on the charge of murder. He is alleged to have shot Cramer. If there is any further rioting tonight, the police authorities say the militia will be asked for. All is quiet today.

In the municipal court today the two negroes who were arrested for shooting Police Sergeant McDermott and Officer Green, during the disturbances last night, were arraigned and charged with inciting to riot. They were adjudged guilty and Moore was given a year in jail and Shockley was fined $50.

John Joyce, a young white man, who struck a colored woman on Market street during the excitement of Wednesday night was given six months in the county workhouse.

After a hearing before Magistrate Hollis today, Arthur Corwell, arrested on a charge of murder in connection with the White lynching was dismissed, there being no evidence against him.

EXPENSES AT YALE.

Students Expended From $100 to $11,000 a Year.

New Haven, Conn., June 26.—A chapter on the finances of the class of '03 at Yale is disclosed in the publication of a table giving expenses of the individual members during the four years. The lowest cost for a single year was $100 by a man who spent only $650 during his whole course. The highest individual expenditure in a single year was $11,000. The maximum cost for four years was $25,000. These figures show an increase per man of $425 over 1902, when expenses were rather above preceding years.

LARGE GAINS

In New York's Real and Personal Estate.

New York, June 26.—New York's real estate assessments this year amount to $4,750,000,000, an increase of $1,400,000,000 over last year. The personal assessments are $678,000,000, an increase of $153,000,000. The total increase in assessed values is $1,553,000,000. The estimated tax rate this year is $1.40 against $2.27 last year.

CANADIAN SORE

Because United States Cattle Are Bought For Boers.

Ottawa, Ont., June 26.—Mr. Pope, Conservative, moved in the house last night a vote of censure upon the government because the imperial government was buying cattle in the United States for restocking the Boer farms. Sir William Mullock, postmaster general, and Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture, said the government had made all the representations possible in the matter and therefore they regarded the resolution as an attack upon the home authorities. The resolution was defeated.

FIRST IN FORTY YEARS.

Five Cotton Gins Shipped to Porto Rico.

San Juan, P. R., June 26.—Five cotton gins haven rrived here from the United States and will be immediately installed. They are the first ghis to reach Porto Rico in forty years.

The cotton plantations of the island now cover 11,000 acres and the area is being increased weekly. San Juan has been chosen as the center of this trade.

Willis Sweet, of Idaho, was sworn in today as attorney general of Porti Rico.

COLOMBIAN CONGRESS

Has Organized and Will Consider Treaty Soon.

New York, June 26.—The Colombian congress, which convened Saturday last, has organized, according to a Herald dispatch from Bogota. In the senate, J. A. Velez, said to be a vigorous opponent of the canal treaty, was elected president. J. M. Calderon was chosen president of the house. The new officers are declared, however, to be stanch supporters of President Marroquin and his government.

It is thought to be unlikely that the treaty will be submitted to the congress until after the arrival of the remainder of the Panama deputies, who started June 12. They are due in Bogota about June 30. The first few sessions on the treaty will be secret.

INVITED TO ALDERSHOT.

WILL CUT RATES

Railroad Commission Will Act on Minnesota Coal Rates.

Unofficially Announced a Cut Will Be 15 Per Cent.

The mistake or negligence of some one on the Great Northern railroad in making a rate on coal to Litchfield, where only a few tons a year are carried, bids fair to cost the railroads doing business out of Duluth into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has decided and unofficially announced that a reduction of 15 per cent on all tonnage freight rates out of Duluth to Minnesota points would be ordered July 1.

The freight men on the roads other than the Great Northern, are blaming that road for the near-sightedness and poor policy, for if the Litchfield case had been settled by compromise at the start, it would have saved the railroads hauling coal out of Duluth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

As it is the consumers in the state, the state itself, will get a portion of that 15 per cent cut, and coal may be a little cheaper in this state this winter.

Last year the amount of coal received at the head of the lakes was 2,700,000 and over. The tonnage shipped out is something immense. In fact, the heaviest shipments out of Superior and Duluth are of coal. One agent said this morning that the lumber business was heavy, but the money was in coal.

The trouble all started with a complaint from one Glauser, a merchant at Litchfield, who filed a bill with the railroad commission, asking that the exorbitant rate of $2.20 a ton from Duluth to Litchfield be ordered reduced.

When the matter came before the commission, some one brought in a lot of comparative figures, among which were some showing that the rate from Duluth to Litchfield was practically the same as from Streator, Ill., to Litchfield, a distance in the latter case of over 400 miles and in the former of less than half that distance.

This set the newspapers talking, and there was produced before the commission a list of coal and lumber rates in the Dakotas, Iowa and Wisconsin, and even Michigan, which showed that the rates in Minnesota were fully one-third higher, all round, than in the other states. The general protest against such discrimination directed at Minnesota had the effect of a defense being put up by the railroads.

The defense in effect was that supply and demand, the base of the coal supply, the location of competitive points and many other things governed the price of coal shipments. For instance, Litchfield not being a heavy buyer, it could get Illinois or Pennsylvania coal at about the same price, the one coming by boat and rail and the other by rail alone.

Within the week there has been a lot of conferring between heads of the railroads and the commission. The commission sent word that the railroads would have to submit a basis of agreement or there would be an agreement arrived at by the commission and the rate made for them.

After conferences yesterday at Minneapolis, there was an official statement made to the effect that a 15 per cent reduction would be made. The most vitally affected point will be Duluth and Superior, as the coal for the state, excepting some soft coal in the southern part, comes through the head of the lakes.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad carried out of Duluth the coal for Southwestern Minnesota and Southern Dakota. The Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads carry the coal into the country directly west from here. The Omaha carries out immense quantities to Wisconsin and Minnesota points. The principal carriers are now blaming the Great Northern.

"If the road had only taken care of those small towns where the prices were really autrageous," said a freight man who handles coal largely today, "this thing would have been averted. The roads are going to lose immense amounts of money. The coal traffic is going to be heavier this year than last, and it will be great after the first of July. I have no official information from headquarters, but believe that such a reduction is entirely probable.

"The aggravating part of it all to the railroad is that every road taking coal out of Duluth and Superior today is so congested with coal business that their car shortages are from 200 cars a day upwards. The cars are being centered on Duluth, and every effort is being made to get all the coal out of here that is possible, and at the old rates. Now along comes the reduction, and we are going to sustain great losses on account of it.

"The fact that the rate to the Twin Cities remains at $1.25 will make little difference, as a large volume of the coal going there is shipped out again.

"As I understand it there will be a fixed rate of eight mills per ton per mile on coal. It is far greater than that today in hundreds of specific cases, and larger in some measure everywhere."

Whether there will be any change in the method of shipment, and the central point will become the Twin Cities through the order, cannot be told. The railroad men are waiting developments and official notification.

No matter what others advertise, the real bargains in clothing, hats and shoes will be found tomorrow at the store of M. S. Burrows.

CONTEST IN SIGHT.

In Carrying Steerage Passengers For the Continent.

New York, June 26.—While no cutting of rates on trans-Atlantic liners is generally expected as the result of the Cunard lines' withdrawal from the so-called rate-pool, the first step in a fight for passenger traffic has been taken, according to the Journal of Commerce, by the announcement on the part of the line mentioned that they will, beginning July 2, book steerage passengers for the continent. Booking of steerage passengers from the continent has already been begun on the other side, and there seems no doubt but what it is in the direction of the continent steerage business that the first signs of the coming contest will be shown.

The Missouri synod elected the following officers: President, Prof. A. W. Meyer, of St. John's college, Winfield, Kas.; vice president, Rev. W. Dalman, New York; secretary, Rev. W. Wenchel, Boston; treasurer, A. E. Succop, Pittsburg.

RACE FOR THE AMERICAN CUP

Emperor's Yacht Meteor In Contest For Morgan Trophy.

Kiel, June 26.—The starters for the American cup, presented by J. P. Morgan, were the emperor's American-built schooner yacht Meteor, the empress' Iduna and the Hamburg. The emperor, with Rear Admiral Cotton, Commander McCrea of the Machias, Capt. Walker of the San Francisco and Capt. Cornwell of the Chicago on board as his guests, sailed the Meteor, steering her much of the time. The empress was visible most of the time standing aft on the Iduna, with a lady-in-waiting.

The start took place at 10:10 a. m., in an 8 to 10-knot breeze.

R. W. Goelet's American 30-footer Swan was first over the line in the start of the race for the commodore's cup, offered by the emperor. The other starters for this prize were Gustav Stinne's Glueckauf, Herr Mendelssohn's Johnny and Robert E. Leosner and Von Strumm's Betty VI.

ANXIETY IN PERU.

MACADAM LOWEST

Submits Best Bid For Paving of East Superior Street.

Bids Submitted With and Without Ten Year Guaranty.

A victory for bituminous macadam was scored in the East Superior street paving bids opened this morning.

A contract is to be let for paving the street between Third and Eighth avenues east. The bids, with a ten-year guarantee, were as follows:

| | |
| Bituminous macadam..... | $33,353 |
| Vitrified brick... ..... | 35,923 |
| Asphalt..... ..... | 40,838 |
| Sandstone.... ..... | 41,378 |

Bidding, without the ten-year guarantee, the figures submitted were as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Vitrified brick. ..... | 34,923 |
| Sandstone..... ..... | 40,378 |

The board of public works will not award the contract until Monday, but from present indications the award is between the bituminous macadam and vitrified brick. The Warren Bros. company, of Boston, bid for the bitulithic paving and P. McDonnell, of this city, was the sole bidder on brick and sandstone.

It was expected that the asphalt trust would make an unusually low bid for this contract, but the bid submitted was only at the rate of $2.06 a square yard. The same company got the contract between Eighth and Sixteenth avenues at $2.45 a square yard.

Bituminous macadam is said to be strongly favored by some of the petitioners for the improvement while others have expressed a preference to have the vitrified brick paving extended from Third out to Eighth.

J. B. Robbins, of the Barber Asphalt company, is in the city today inspecting the East Superior street work, and says that the block between Fifteenth and Sixteenth avenues ripped up by a horse's caulks, is anything but a failure. In fact, he is of the opinion that the mixture is just right for the Duluth climate and that while the horses may cut into it for a year or two, traffic will eventually iron out the surface and make it a good street.

The city is powerless to dictate a change in the mixing of material as the Barber company is under a ten-year guarantee and any interference on the part of the city as to the quality of asphalt to be put down would have a tendency to invalidate the guarantee. However, the city will refuse to accept the work unless satisfied with it.

WAS A GREAT CELEBRATION

Steel Trust Officials Return From Their Ishpeming Trip.

Back from the $10,000 celebration day.

The members of the Steel corporation officials' party which went to Ishpeming Monday night returned this afternoon.

The special train from Ishpeming arrived over the South Shore road at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon. Several of the members of the party went to the Wolvin building to see if it were still there.

Auditor William Jeffrey said, when he stepped off the elevator at the third floor, that he was sure it was still in existence.

"We had a great time. It was the biggest kind of a day, and there could not have been a better arranged celebration, nor one of better quality and feeling," said he.

All who attended bring back glowing accounts of the great celebration in honor of the half-century old mining company.

The larger part of the membership of the celebration went to their homes. Several of the gentlemen were accompanied by their wives.

President T. F. Cole of the Minnesota and Oliver companies did not return with the crowd, but continued the inspection trip with Vice President Gailey and party over the eastern ranges.

TOOK HIS OWN LIFE

West Superior Candy Merchant Blows Out His Brains.

Chris. Peterson, proprietor of a confectionery store at 711 Tower avenue, West Superior, committed suicide this afternoon in his place of business.

He had just finished waiting on a customer that had stepped outside, when the proprietor took a revolver and, pointing it close to his head, sent the bullet into the right side of the skull. It penetrated the brain and he died almost instantly.

The suicide was a man of considerable prominence in West Superior, having been a member of one of the oldest families and an owner of much property left him from the estate of his father. It is supposed that he was temporarily insane.

Mr. Peterson was 29 years of age and unmarried. It is said that he was cheerful and apparently content with life until a few moments before shooting himself.

Andrew Peterson, the suicide's late father, was one of Duluth's early settlers.

COMBINE BEATEN

City Wins Its Fight Against Cement Walk Combine.

The Fourth Trial For Bids Brings In an Unknown.

The city has apparently won out in its fight against the cement walk combine.

After rejecting the combine's bids on three different occasions as being excessive and confusing a bid of 15 cents per square foot was obtained this morning.

This is only one-fourth of a cent higher than the cement walk prices of last year and it is claimed that if the anti-combine bid is found to be in proper form and reliable the annual contract for cement and tile walks will be let at 15 cents.

The bidder was Oscar H. Anderson, a mysterious unknown in the field of city contract bidders. His only competitor was Alex Sang, who put in bids of 17½ and 18 cents for the work.

When the bids were opened by the board of public works Mr. Anderson informed the members that he was fully prepared to handle the work if his figures were acceptable to the city.

The fight for lower prices between the city and the combine has tied up the cement walk building throughout the city except when individual property owners have been building under private contract.

Low Rates to New England and Canadian Points.

The North-Western Line will sell excursion tickets, June 15 to 26th inclusive, to all points in New England states, and to points in Canada, at one fare for the round trip. Tickets good for return up to Sept. 1st, 1903. City Ticket Office, 405 West Superior street.

HARD TO GET STEEL WORK

Government Finds Difficulty In Getting Orders Quickly Filled.

The Duluth Iron & Metal company has been awarded the contract to furnish about forty tons of steel rails for the government work at the south pier of Superior entry. There were three bidders on the contract, the successful company giving a price of $37.50 per ton for new rails and $33 per ton for old rails. The Marshall-Wells Hardware company and the Kelley-Haw-Thomson Hardware company each bid $39.

Out of a large number of competitors the Peteler Portable Manufacturing company of Minneapolis has secured the contract for twenty small cars to be used in the transportation work at the new pier. The cost is about $220. The cars are for immediate delivery.

Bids will be opened tomorrow for five hoisting engines, 10,000 pounds of steel castings and a sand pump with accessories.

The government is finding difficulty in securing bidders for manufactured steel products of any nature at the present time owing to the big demand on orders which manufacturers all over the country have booked ahead. The locomotive which was recently purchased new from an Eastern concern cannot be delivered until about September. A number of large concerns to whom plans and specifications have been sent at various times have acknowledged the same but claimed that the time limit would bar them out of the competition as they had all the work ahead they could tend to for months to come.

THEY LAUGHED.

Now They All Laugh.

"To think of scientific food helping me out of trouble seemed ridiculous," said a St. Louis woman.

"I used to read the published statements about Grape-Nuts in a cynical way hardly believing they were true. One day a neighbor who was calling while I was lying down as usual (and feeling terribly) said: 'I believe you eat entirely too much rich food and especially too much meat. I wish you would change your diet and use Grape-Nuts.' I laughed heartily and said: 'I see you have been reading the newspapers, too.' 'Yes,' she replied, 'and I have become a convert, for my husband, who, you know, is busy in the office all day, and whose nervous system was completely run down, has got so well and hearty by giving up the heavy meat breakfast and living on a diet of cooked fruit, Grape-Nuts and cream and Postum Food Coffee for breakfast. He is a new man and has not been near a physician for two months.'

"I did not wonder that she was enthusiastic, so I began that evening to use Grape-Nuts, eating nothing else for my 7 o'clock supper. I felt entirely satisfied and rested better that night than I had for months.

"The family all laughed at me, but the next morning I ate my Grape-Nuts and cream, some stewed fruit and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. That day I felt amiable with myself and the whole world at large, and my feelings were so good and comfortable that I concluded to keep on with my new food.

"After about two weeks on this kind of diet my family began to see the change in me. I had lost my nervous, cross, irritable manner and I could sleep all night soundly. My face was round and my complexion was quite clear with a tinge of rosy color in my cheeks. In about a month I had gained ten pounds and my family all became converts to Grape-Nuts, which we have used now for some time. We are all in perfect health and my grocery bill is nothing like as large as it used to be.

"I am now so well and strong that I feel able to do anything I want to. Husband says the food should be called 'Gold-Nuts.' I notice a marked change in my mental capacity. Formerly I could not concentrate my mind on any book or any one thing. Now that is all changed. I can read steadily and think logically from premise to conclusion, an excellent evidence, to my mind, of the brain-building power of Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Desserts for the whole year told in the recipe book in each package of Grape-Nuts.

WOULD BE A SCRUB GIRL

Peculiar Ambition That Lost Apolonia Warzynck's Her Job.

Care not I for a month's pay—
Let me be a scrub girl, if but for a day.
Exquisite bliss of scrubbing floors;
Graceful position, down on all fours!
Washing silver no longer for me.
A scrubster girl I must—will be.
—Trans. from Alponia Warzynck.

Sad tale!

Alponia Waczynck can't talk English, but she knows she'd rather be a scrub girl at the Spalding hotel than to occupy a great many other honorary or remunerative positions.

In fact she would rather be a scrub person for a few hours than the cleaner of mine host's silver in the kitchen, with regular salary, for a year.

It is a common wish among small boys for circus day; it is a common wish among the unsuccessful for $100,000; it is a common wish of the afflicted to be restored to health; it is a common wish of the dutiful and godly to wish for eternal rest!

But Apolonia must needs be a scrub lady. For weeks she has been drudging at the silver tables in the kitchen of the Spalding hotel, washing the knives, forks and spoons, without a plaint.

For weeks she has watched the scrub crew march out of the quarters with pails and brush, at an early hour in the morning. She had heard their unintelligible chatter with understanding; she had listened to the clink of the soapine and the rattle and swish of brush and water on the hard, tiled floor with envy and pain.

Wednesday she went to Mrs. Brady, the housekeeper, with tears in her eyes and pleaded to be allowed to be a member of the scrubbing crew. Mrs. Brady said she had all the scrub women she needed; that the girl was doing nicely at the silver table, and as her salary was more than that of the scrub women, it would be wise and more satisfying all around if she staid there.

Apolonia wept bitter tears, and in her mind determined to shake off the fetters bound upon her by servitude, and that for once she would indulge herself in the greatest ambition of her life—to be a scrub woman.

Cunningly she retired to her room at night, but did not sleep. When the scrub crew marched out with their pails and brushes, she arose and dressed. Stealthily she waited till they were all at work and then she started to carry out her nefarious plot.

She walked into the dining room, where the scrubbing was in progress, and told one of the girls that Mrs. Brady had told her to convey the information that the scrub girl was no longer wanted in the hotel by the housekeeper and had engaged her, Apolonia, to take her place. The girl demurred, but they talked some Polish and Finnish mixed, and the girl retired red-eyed. Apolonia had accomplished her end.

She worked with the scrub crew all night and was not at her silver table in the morning. Then Mrs. Brady discovered the discharged one in her room sobbing. Mrs. Brady investigated and found out what had happened during the night.

Apolonia is no more employed at the hotel.

"It was a funny mix up," said Manager Emery this morning, "and what on earth the attraction could be in a scrubbing crew is more than I can conceive. The girl was discharged for her presumption. She couldn't have expected to remain after such an audacious act, especially when she made no provision for her own work to be done. It was one of the most peculiar forms of desire that has ever come under my notice around a hotel."

QUICK WITH HIS GUN.

The Diamond Salesman Made an Important Capture.

"I reached my room in the San Francisco hotel at which I was stopping along toward midnight one night last month," said a traveling diamond salesman who dropped off in Washington on his return to New York to the Star. "Before entering the room I was surprised to see through the transom that there was a light in my room, but I supposed that the chambermaid had turned on the electric light in distributing towels and had forgotten to turn the light off. I didn't entertain that idea very long. When I entered the room—I had inadvertently left the key in the door in starting for the theater that evening—I saw a tall man standing by my bureau. He had his back to me when I pushed open the door, but he quickly wheeled and regarded me with a sort of stunned expression. On account of the gems which I occasionally have on my person I have to pack a gun around with me, and it didn't take me long to put this intruder under the gun.

"'You might as well put your hands up,' I said to him, entering the room and closing the door after me.

"'It looks that way,' the man replied, pointing upward with both his hands.

"I was tired, so I sat down in a rocking chair near the door, keeping the gun pointed at the interloper all the time.

"'Been here long?' I asked the man.

"'Only a few moments,' he replied coolly.

"'Find anything worth while yet?' I asked him.

"'Haven't had time to search yet,' said the chap, and a smile flickered around the corners of his mouth.

"'You take things pretty easy, don't you?' said I to him—I was a bit nettled over the fellow's imperturbability.

"'So-so,' he replied. 'Say, can't I let my arms down and rest 'em? I haven't got my shooting iron on me.'

"'Well, you stand right by that window overlooking the court, with your arms close to your sides,' I said to him, 'but if you make a move I'm going to put a ball through you.'

"'O. K.,' said this cool customer, and he lowered his arms, stepped over to the window I indicated and pressed his arms to his sides. He was a good-looking and exceedingly well-dressed man. I had heard of the coolness of first-rate professional crooks when corraled, but the benign way this fellow smiled upon me was both puzzling and irritating.

"'Been in the business long?' I asked him.

"'Quite a spell,' he answered, looking me straight in the eye and the smile playing around his lips.

"'Done much time?' I inquired.

"'Oh,' he replied, chuckling in his mystifying fashion, 'I've served several terms.'

"'Been mugged frequently, I suppose?' said I.

"'I've had quite a few pictures taken,' said the man. 'Say, how about my sitting down in this chair here—d'ye mind?'

"'Not if you behave,' said I still keeping the gun on him. 'But you'll have plenty of time to sit down—on a long bench—where I'm going to send you.'

"'Well, you might give a fellow a show for his white alley,' said the man, depositing himself in an easy chair and placing his hands behind his head. 'I haven't swiped anything. What's the use of railroading me?'

"'I have a citizen's duty to perform toward society, my friend,' I said to him, solemnly, and blamed if he didn't laugh in my face.

"'You'll be laughing on the other side of your mouth presently,' said I, severely, at that, but he went right on haw-hawing in the most hearty and good-natured fashion imaginable.

"'Say, look here,' he said, when he could control his laughter, 'what is the number of this room, any way?

"'This is 168,' I replied. 'Why do you ask that?'

"'Oh, I just wanted to know—I imagined something of the sort when you came in,' the man replied, and then he exploded into another fit of laughter.

"I got up from my chair, still pointing the gun at him in case he might make some quick move and get the bulge on me, and backed toward the call button. I touched the button with my free hand.

"'I'm sorry, but it's going to be a pinch for you, my friend,' I said to him.

"'Well, I suppose it can't be helped,' he replied, continuing his chuckling.

"When the bellboy came I told him to send the house detective to my room at once. While waiting for the appearance of the house detective I asked my prisoner a good many questions about his way of life, how he had happened to drift into the profession of a hotel sneak, if he had ever succeeded in making any big hauls, and so on. He replied to my questions with the most perfect frankness and amiability, but he laughed so much all the time that I feared he had become sort of hysterical over the suddenness with which I had nailed him.

"I was standing in the middle of the room, with my gun still pointing at my prisoner, when the house detective rapped on the door and came in when I gave the 'Enter.' The house detective stared at the situation with an extremely blank face.

"'Hey, what's coming off here, Charley?' he said to the man on whom I had the bead—and it was my turn to feel blank if I didn't look it.

"'Oh, nothing, Jack,' replied the man addressed as 'Charley' by the house detective, 'except that I've been doing a little hall sneaking, and I'm under the gun—that's all,' and he burst into a roar of laughter.

"'Got into the wrong room, I suppose,' said the house detective, grinning. 'All the rooms along this row are just alike—that's it, Charley?'

"'Well, my number is 166, and it seems this is 168,' said the tall man whom I had held up.

"'Pull down your popper, pal,' said the house detective to me with a still broader grin, and then he introduced me to State Senator Charles Blank—I won't mention his name—one of the wealthiest land owners and fruit raisers in California.

"I had to clean up my San Francisco business and leave there in a hurry—I couldn't stand for the enormous amount of buying when the story got around among the gang."

FOX HUNTING TO DATE.

Long Island sound was glorious in the light o fthe big, round moon that night, and I could not resist the temptation to say so. I might even have gone further and gushed more, but the only passenger remaining on deck with me was a man who did not look as if he had a remnant of enthusiasm left in him, writes Willis Brooks in the Brooklyn Eagle. The stamp of prosperity was on his rather stern visage—that commanding expression which men at the head of great financial institutions are so apt to acquire. I had set him down as a prominent banker, and was pretty sure he would not stand for a great deal of poetic moonshine. Still, I was so full of it I just had to let a little escape.

"It is indeed glorious," he responded. After a moment he added: "I was just wishing I were up at my brother's place, in the hills, tonight. They are probably out on a moonlight fox hunt. Did you ever attend one?"

I said I had not. I might have added that I would not attend one if I could. Of all inexcusable brutality, that of a lot of grown men turning a pack of great hounds loose to tear one poor little fov to pieces always seemed to me the least "sportsmanlike." But I had invited conversation, and I could not very well meet his first response with an implied censure of his taste.

"There is no form of sport on earth equal to it," he said, positively. Then he went on to describe it.

"My brother retired from business several years ago," he began, "and bought a large tract of hilly woodland, where he might indulge his passion for fox hunting. He promised the farmers for miles around that if they would not kill the foxes he would pay all damages done by the sly little creatures. He gets some outrageous bills (it is never an ordinary chicken that the foxes kill; it is always one of an expensive, fancy breed), but he pays the accounts without question or complaint. He has devoted himself to gathering the finest pack of hounds that money could buy, always having a goodly number of puppies, since half the fun is to see the old dogs teach the young ones. Every night like this my brother has a party of men and women to witness a chase. After dinner they go in automobiles to the cleared crest of a tall hill and there set the dogs free."

In automobiles! Here was something new in fox hunting, to be sure.

"Yes," said my companion. "It beats hunting on horseback all hollow."

I was soon convinced that I had misjudged him. He was not the calm, severe man he seemed to be. He was an enthusiast. His eye sparkled. He leaned forward with intense eagerness, as if even now his fancy saw the shadowy hounds racing up and down the moonlit hills; as if he heard that wondrous chorus of barks and bays, now swelling near, now coming faint from the echoing distance—a chorus which, he declared, was never equaled on the operatic stage. I myself was working up to a wish that I might see and hear what he so graphically described. Yet ever I had the poor little fox in mind.

"And the beauty of the whole thing is," said he, "we always feel that the fox is having as much fun as the hounds. I honestly believe he purposely invites the chase. I have known one fox to keep the whole pack running here and there, far and near, up and down, over and across, for an hour at a stretch, when he might at almost any minute dart into a place of safety."

"It seems too bad," I at last put in, "that the little fellow's frolic should end in his torturesome death."

"Ah, but it doesn't," my companion answered, joyously. "That would spoil it all. No; when the fox has had his fun he pops into a crevice in a rock. My brother has had many of these made, in all conceivable places, large enough to admit the fox, but too small for a hound. We can always tell when the fov has had enough of the chase. The peculiar baying of the baffled hounds indicates it. Then my brother has the dogs leashed, and the hunt is at an end. He has been chasing foxes this way for five years now, and the hounds have never yet caught one of the little cusses."

"Your brother is a brick," I exclaimed.

"I think he has the true idea of sport," said my companion.

WILL MAKE TROUBLE

Superintendent Park Expects New School Laws to Create Confusion.

Change of Election Regulations That Will Affect This County.

County Superintendent of Schools A. T. Park says that he anticipates trouble and confusion in the common school districts of St. Louis county because of the amendment to the state law relative to school meetings, which was passed by the last legislature.

The amendment makes several important changes, one of them being the lengthening of the hours for voting from 4 o'clock to 8 o'clock in the afternoon on the annual school meeting day, which occurs the third Saturday in July. The date of the school meeting has not been changed by the amendment, but under the original provision the ballot box was open only from 7 to 8 o'clock in the evening.

This amendment, it is claimed, is a beneficial one and will make it more convenient for the settlers living in outlying districts.

The most important amendment and the one which Mr. Park believes will cause confusion is that which provides for a voting precinct in common school districts for every 300 voters, or major fraction thereof. The amendment applies to counties having a population of not less than 50,000 and not more than 150,000.

The law says that the school board shall establish the voting precincts.

This provision will give the towns of Ely, Hibbing, Virginia, Tower and Soudan several voting precincts on school meeting day, where formerly each district had but one place of meeting.

The danger of confusion is said to lie in the fact that there are many matters, such as voting for the length of term, money to be appropriated for teachers' salaries and for general expenses, that properly come before the voters of a school district in a mass meeting, and which will not now be practicable unless each item is so stated on the ballots in each voting precinct, and this Superintendent Park does not believe will be done.

The establishment of new voting precincts in school districts will also make places for additional clerks of election, and no amendment was made to the old law providing for the appointment of these clerks or for their payment.

Mr. Park argues that the law as amended will work out very unsatisfactorily next month when the school meetings are held, and says that he can see no relief unless the next legislature passes an amendment providing for a general ballot, so the districts can have converted action by its voters.

The amendments are given in chapter 385 of the laws of 1903.

NO CHANGES IN THE FEES

Proposed Reduction For Initiation Into Odd Fellowship Defeated.

St. Paul, June 26.—There will be no reduction in fees by the Minnesota Odd Fellows this year.

The great question of this session was fought out at yesterday's meeting, and by a most decisive vote the entire matter was laid over for one year.

At present the constitution imposes a minimum fee of $5 for initiation and $5 for each of the three degrees. Many members of the order have agitated the reduction of the minimum fee to $2. It was asserted that the lodge would lose membership from the fact that other lodges charge much lower fees, and therefore the Odd Fellows were placed at a disadvantage in the competition.

A vigorous fight against the proposition was made. C. A. Fossness, of Montevideo, past grand master, declared that the fees were not too high now for the good of the order. "We cannot expect to compete with societies, however good, having for their primary object the insurance of its members. These could well afford to receive them free."

It was argued also that if the fee was made too low it would result in letting in many undesirable people. Secretary Bolton maintained, however, that the opposite would be the effect. When the fee was high the unscrupulous man could pay it when the deserving poor man could not.

Ed A. Stevens, of Minneapolis, declared that he could get more members at $20 than at $10 each, and he said the minimum fees in the Twin Cities should be at least $25.

An ther constitutional amendment proposition was taken up, discussed and defeated. It was the proposition to change the method of electing officers. At the present time officers are elected by a vote of subordinate lodges. The system is in effect a primary election system. The proposed amendment provided that the election of officers should be made by the grand lodge at its annual session. This amendment was overwhelmingly beaten.

A third amendment, proposing to change the date of annual meeting from June to March, was also defeated.

The per capita tax for the ensuing year was fixed at 80 cents.

Two thousand dollars was voted to the home endowment fund.

The following directors were elected for the Odd Feilows' home:

A. W. Norton, Northfield; T. W. Hugo, Duluth; May E. Davis, Minneapolis; Mary Anderson, Rochester.

The detailed report of the secretary shows that in the past fifty years the lodge has paid out almost half a million dollars in relief; has had 33,247 initiations; 46,330 admissions, 8572 withdrawals, 17,898 suspensions, 3168 deaths.

MORMON CHIEFS ARE DEFIED

By 600 Youths, Who Are Threatened With Excommunication.

Salt Lake, Utah, June 26.—Because they disobeyed an order of the local church authorities nearly 600 young Mormons of both sexes in Brigham City, Utah, have been threatened with excommunication. Their offense was patronizing a dancing pavilion run in opposition to one owned by the church. Brigham City is a strong Mormon town, and the church recently bought the Opera house there. The authorities ordered the orchestra cut down and salaries lowered. The musicians succeeded in getting a rival pavilion erected and a grand opening dance was advertised.

The church authorities came back with the announcement of a ball at the Opera house. The young people were told to keep away from the pavilion dance. When a number signified their intention of going anyhow the announcement was publicly made that any person attending the dance at the pavilion would be cut off from the church.

The fact that conditions have changed since the days of Brigham Young was demonstrated by the organization of an open revolt.

When the night of the dance came there were 300 couples at the tabooed pavilion and twelve at the church Opera house. At the pavilion were a number of the faithful taking down names so that the church authorities should know on whom to carry out their threat. The insurgents, however, have taken the wind out of the staid president's sails by staying away from meeting, and now there are indications that the efforts will be to get them back into the church instead of cutting them off. This incident comes on top of the withdrawal of a large body of Swedes all over the state from the church on account of a clash with the presidency.

ROWLEY RETURNS.

CHICAGO DIAMOND FIELD.

New Treasure Fields Near the Windy City.

Chicago, June 26.—Every cow pasture a diamond field, every trout stream a thesaurus; for, strange as it may seem, between Chicago and Milwaukee are spots where the precious stones are said to be hidden, deposited there by glaciers in the ages before history began.

Alja Robinson Crook, professor of geology of Northwestern university, is the sponsor for these north shore diamonds. He has issued a pamphlet entitled "The Mineralogy of the Chicago Area," and in it he tells of the new treasure fields.

"Some seventeen specimens, weighing together about seventy carats, have been found," he says. "The largest weighed 2¼ carats. They are most commonly white or faintly green or yellow in color. They were found in the sand and gravel of the Kettle moraine, or in the beds of streams.

"The diamonds have been found in seven localities north of Chicago."

The discovery of the common mother lode, in which the diamonds would be much more plentiful is held to be a possibility.

HOOSIER ATTORNEY

Talks Madman Out of His Murderous Purpose.

Logansport, Ind., June 26.—Lawyer Michael F. Mahoney had to put up the greatest argument of his life when he went to his stable and found his hostler, John OBringer, a raving maniac, armed to the teeth and determined to make Mahoney over into a monument that would hereafter grace Glington park, near the city.

When Mahoney stepped into the stable the man showed him two pistols and a knife, declaring himself to be Mahoney's friend, so much so, in fact, that he wanted Mahoney transformed into a stone that could be placed in the park.

Mahoney began his argument, which brought out great beads of sweat on his brow. He was finally allowed to go for tools with which to do the transforming and immediately called the police.

MARKET IN THE ORIENT.

Canadian Pacific Looks For an Increasing Trade.

Montreal, June 28.—W. R. MacInness, freight traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific says:

"We expect very shortly to be in a position to make ever-increasing shipments of grain and flour to China, Japan and Australia. That result, it is expected, will accrue from amendments to the grain act now before the house of commons at Ottawa.

"Our shipments of Manitoba flour to Australia are even now very considerable, both the Ogilvie Milling company and the Lake of the Woods Milling company sending large quantities forward on our Australian steamers, but flour which goes to China and Japan has thus far been wholly derived from British Columbia and is much lighter in quality than that obtained farther east.

"The Osaka exposition this year gave a very pronounced impetus to the demand for all classes of Canadian grain and flour, both the Chinese and Japanese having come to like their quality."

MEXICAN PEON

Has $60,000,000 In Gold and Silver Bars.

Parel, Mexico, June 26.—The phenomenal richness of the Palemilie mine, which was discovered about four years ago by Pedro Alvarado, a Mexican peon, is attracting attention. He still owns the Palemilie and is probably one of the wealthiest men in the world, as the property is believed to be the richest mine in the world.

The American melting and Refining company has just made an unsuccessful effort to open negotiations with Alvarado to purchase his mine. At the Palemilie mine he has a steel cage in which are bars of gold and silver to the estimated value of $60,000,000.

THE STAGE

The production of Auber's tuneful opera "Fra Diavolo" by the Northwestern Opera company last evening at the Lyceum delighted a large audience.

George Lyding, the popular tenor of the company made a hit by his excellent work in the title role. He was in good voice and his acting was especially clever.

Sylvan Langlois as Lorenzo was all that could be desired and was given a double encore for his baritone solo in the second act.

Miss Eleanor Jenkins filled the part of Zerlina in a very clever and artistic manner and was warmly aplauded for her excellent work in several difficult solos.

Sylvester Cornish, the good-natured, who has made a hit in every production in which she has appeared, was seen last night in the role of Lady Allcash much to the delight of her many friends.

Miss Bertha Hayden introduced another clever specialty, assisted by six of the chorus. Repeated encores greeted the effort and she was compelled to repeat the number, which was "My Sunbeam Lu," a number of times. She filled the part of Roberta in a charming manner.

Charles Drew took the role of Lord Allcash and as usual made a hit with the audience.

The comedy work of Stanley Felch and Dan Young as the bandits Beppo and Giacomo was fully up to their usual standard.

The minor roles of Matteo and Francesco were sung by Harry Keough and Paul Anderson and were in good hands.

The work of the chorus was fine and despite the high excellence shown from the very start, it is steadily improving. Rarely is a better chorus heard. The new musical director, Arthur C. Pell, is a thorough musician and trainer. The orchestra is also especially fine, numbering twelve pieces and having a very complete orchestration.

The opera will be produced again tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

• • •

The sale of seats for the concert to be given Sunday afternoon by the artists who will compose the companies of Alfred Davies during the season opening September 1, is large and a fine audience is assured. The appearance of the local artists, Mrs. James McAuliffe, Miss Elizabeth Bailey and Miss Antoinette West, is of much interest to local musicians and their friends will all be there to hear them.

LOWER FREIGHT RATES

Insisted Upon By Railroad and Warehouse Commission.

St. Paul, June 26.—The railroad and warehouse commission held an all-day session yesterday with the traffic officials of all Minnesota lines in an endeavor to reach an agreement over reductions in coal and lumber rates. No agreement was reached, and a further conference will be held. The attitude of the commission is considered as already fixed.

Unless the railroads agree to fix a new and lower basis, the commission will order a reduction.

The railroads have not shown the willingness to compromise that was expected. The knowledge that a reduction in coal and lumber rates in Minnesota would cause a general reduction in joint rates and through rates has alarmed the common carriers.

It is still an unsettled point whether or not the commission has jurisdiction to order the reduction of a joint rate, and the railroads are making the most of that point in their arguments.

San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Digo $57.90.

FISHING FEVER

Nothing Like It Ever Heard of Around Here Before.

Dealers In Tackle Have the Best Trade In Years.

"The existent epidemic of fishing," said a well-known local angler yesterday evening, "referred to in The Herald tonight, certainly lays over anything I ever saw in this neck of the woods before. It is due, largely, to the reports that good fishing was to be found in the little streams rigat in the heart of the city, such as Chester creek and Miller's creek.

"There was good fishing in these streams earlier in the season, but the supply was not inexhaustible, and the trout have been pretty well fished out.

"But it served to get a lot of people into the fishing fever that had not had it before for years. Many a man that had not touched a rod since he was a lot younger than he is now, was attracted by the prospect of good fishing so close at hand, and borrowed a rod and reel and set out. Most of these fellows came a little late, and either got none or only a few fish. But the mischief was done. Their long latent passion for fishing was awakened, and the result is that many of them have purchased fishing outfits and are getting out at every opportunity.

"Dealers in fishing outfits tell me that they never had such a business before as they have had this spring. A peculiar thing about it, too, was that a large proportion of it was entirely new outfits, thus indicating that a lot of people were fishing who had not fished before for some time. Usually, while a few people start in the spring and buy new fishing outfits, most of the business consists in replenishing old outfits with new lines, new hooks, new flies and, perhaps, new rods and reels. This year the number that bought complete new outfits, according to the dealers I have talked with, is far in excess of anything they have experienced before.

"It is all due, I believe, to the revival of fishing in the old streams in the city limits, which most people had supposed to be fished out years ago. They had been fished out, of course, but either through planting or through the propagation of a few fish that wandered up stream from the lake during the spring high water, a limited supply of fish has gradually returned. In Chester creek, which used to be good fishing years ago, but which was cleaned out a decade ago or more, some very good fish have been caught, from six inches up to seventeen inches. One of the latter size was caught by a small boy the other day. These stories have attracted old anglers, and with this start they have been led on and on by the fatal attraction that angling has for is votaries. The outcome has been the creation of about 1000 new fishing fiends, who have supplied themselves with outfits and are constantly trying to entice their friends out on fishing trips.

"It is a good thing, too, for it is good exercise and a lot of these old codgers who have experienced the unexpected revival of long dormant sporting blood in their veins need exercise badly. It is a serious outlook for the unlucky fish that have wandered too close to town, however."

Inflammation of the eyes is often caused by using poisonous creams. Satin-Skin Cream will not hurt the eyes. 25c.

AN INDIAN IS MADE A PRIEST

Cornelius Hill, Chief of the Oneida Tribe, Is Ordained.

Oneida, Wis., June 26.—Cornelius Hill, chief of the Oneida tribe, was ordained a priest of the Episcopal church with a ceremony in which the stately ritual of the high church was mingled with the more picturesque features of Indian worship.

Hill is the last chief of the tribe that migrated to the West under the leadership of Bleazer Williams, the hero of Mary Hartwell Catherwood's historical romance, "Lazarre." He is the first Oneida chief to be ordained a priest.

Early in the morning the Oneidas began to assemble at the mission church. They came with squaws and papooses, most of them clad in the garments of civilization. One lone brave appeared in the blanket and feathers of aboriginal days. But for the most part the Indians came in up-to-date carriages, for many of them are wealthy.

There were present Coadjutor Weller, of the Fond du Lac diocese, and a score of other Wisconsin church dignitaries.

All the ceremony of the church was used. Every now and then the services would be stopped for a few minutes while the English words were interpreted into the Oneida tongue by Joel Archiquette, the famous football player of the Carlisle team.

Rev. B. Talbot Hall, of Fond du Lac, acted as master of ceremonies. The sermon was by Rev. William B. Thorne, rector of St. Paul's church at Marinette. It was interpreted into the Indian tongue by Archiquette.

Rev. Walter D. Gardner, of Algoma, made the presentation, and the litany was read by Rev. Henry S. Foster, of Green Bay.

An impressive Indian chant was used, after which an epistle was read by Rev. F. A. Mingay, missionary to the old Catholics. Rev. Henry B. Smith, of Fond du Lac, read the gospel. During the ordination proper, a hymn of several verses, with choruses, was sung in the Oneida language. The final hymn was also in the language of the Oneidas.

At the close of the ceremonies, the newly-ordained priest received the tribe, as did the bishop sitting in a chair before the chancel. The first celebration of the holy Eucharist in the Oneida language took place yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, the chief and priest being the celebrant.

GUESTS OF THE PRESIDENT.

Butte Men Who Will Represent Organized Labor.

Butte, Mont., June 26.—Six representatives of organized labor in Butte will leave on July 2 for Washington on a visit to President Roosevelt as his guests. The representatives are Malcolm G. W. Dempster, of the Mill and Smeltermen's union; N. R. Dempsey, of the Miners' union; J. McNally, of the Carpenters' union; Frank Doyle, of the Workingmen's union, and Harry Heimerdinger, of the Clerks' union.

They acted upon the reception committee to President Roosevelt when he visited Butte, representing the unions, and the president was so much impressed with the organized labor of Butte that he extended an invitation to the men to visit Washington and be his guests. The invitation has been accepted and the trip just arranged, through Secretary Loeb.

BISHOP OF THE M. E. CHURCH

Dr. G. H. Bridgman of Hamline University May Be Promoted.

St. Paul, June 26.—Rev. Dr. George H. Bridgman, president of the university of Hamline for many years, is said to be a possibility of bishop of the M. E. church.

Dr. Bridgman is not understood to have formally announced that he is a candidate for this high honor, but among the people of the suburb in which Hamline university is situated it is currently reported that he would not only accept the honor, should it be tendered him, but that he has allowed his friends to exert themselves toward securing the high position for him. These friends, with many who have known the doctor through his successful presidency of Hamline, see in him the material for an able bishop, a man worthy so distinguished a place at the hands of so great a church.

At the close of school at Hamline early this month it was understood that Dr. Bridgman would go abroad, all his plans having been made with such a trip in view. Then came the report that the doctor's trip had been delayed, because he had been detained in the East in connection with matters relating to his possible candidacy.

It is possible that rumor may have connected Dr. Bridgman's candidacy for a high position on a general conference board with the Episcopacy, and that instead of the Episcopal honors, he is really to receive some other form of promtion. However, there seems to be no doubt whatever that Hamline may lose its president to some high position in the Methodist church's broader work.

ELEVATIONS TO PEERAGE

Honors In Connection With Birthday of King Edward.

London, June 26.—The list of honors in connection with King Edward's birthday which was issued last night, the eve of the day set for its observance, includes four peerages, three privy councillors, six baronets, a large number of knights and promotions to the orders of the bath and St. Michael and St. George. The admiralty announces that the Prince of Wales has been promoted to the rank of vice admiral.

Eleveations to the peerage include Sir Edward Levy Lawson, past proprietor of the Daily Telegraph; Michael Biddulph, the banker and former liberal member of parliament for a Herfordshire division; H. A. F. Watson—Armstrong, the present head of the well known ordnance firm and nephew to the late Baron Armstrong to whose peerage he virtually succeeds and George T. Sothern-Escort, a large land owner in Gloucestershire and Wiltshire.

The lord mayor of London, Sir Marcus Samuel, is created a baronet, Lord Tennyson is made knight of the Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George, while Sir Anthony McDonnall is appointed a privy councillor in recognition of his work in drawing up the Irish land bill.

HELD FOR BIGAMY.

Son of an Iowa Minister In Trouble.

Lincoln, Neb., June 26.—With the two women whom he had betrayed facing him in court and testifying as to his guilt, Rev. C. Smith, alias Harris De Far, was bound over for bigamy and held for trial under heavy bail. Smith is the son of a prominent Methodist preacher living in Ames, Iowa. The first wife, one Miss Della Wolgamott, of Creston and Greenfield, Iowa, served notice upon Smith that she would apply at once for divorce.

After Smith was led back to a cell the two women were the actors in a tearful scene, embracing each other and venting their sorrow in piteous sobs. Leaving the station, they walked down the street hand in hand, with the 4-year-old son of the first wife toddling along between them.

The first Mrs. Smith will depart for her home in Greenfield, Iowa, where she has been supporting her child by clerking in a store, but will return to prosecute Smith when his case is called in September. Smith has sent for his father and will endeavor to secure bail.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentonville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had bronchitis for three years and doctored all the times without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all lung and throat troubles, consumption, pneumonia and grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c, and $1.00.

Pupils' Concert.

The Bradbury school of music announces a recital by the pupils of the junior class, assisted by pupils of the vocal department, Tuesday evening, June 30, at the High School Assembly hall. A number of seats have been set aside for the general public, as it is impossible to reach all by invitation. These tickets are free and can be had for the asking at the office of the school, No. 10 Columbus building.

THE DEMOCRATIC IOWA IDEA.

The result of the Democratic state convention in Iowa is of far greater importance than appears directly on the surface. It is an indication of the union of the Democratic factions which is taking place throughout the whole country, and presages the opening of a brighter future to Democracy. A reorganized and united party is in sight, standing on a platform that deals not with past issues, but with the new questions that are before the people. Very wisely, the convention refused to reaffirm the Kansas City platform with its silver plank, recognizing the fact that the silver question is no longer an issue and that an attempt to again drag it to the front would prevent that harmony which is essential to Democratic success at the polls and would accomplish no good purpose. The convention also refused to endorse the socialistic plank, which was submitted by one of the candidates for governor, favoring government ownership of railways, sensibly deciding that such a declaration would alienate the support of many men who believe in true Democratic principles and are unalterably opposed to socialism in any form.

The result is a platform upon which any true Democrat can take his stand without sacrificing his views on issues that are dead and buried. That the predictions of a bolt by the minority were not fulfilled and the ticket was unanimously nominated shows the spirit of harmony which prevailed, despite the strong fight made by the advocates of reaffirmation. When they found they were beaten, they quietly accepted the result and joined with the victorious element in selecting a strong state ticket.

Briefly stated, the platform condemns the evils which come from trusts, made possible by discriminating transportation privileges and by monopoly of original sources of supply of natural products, and calls for the removal of the tariff from all goods produced as cheaply here as abroad and for limiting the tariff on all other classes of goods to the differences between the cost of production at home and abroad; asks for changes in the law so as to limit the charges by railroads to reasonable amounts, and to render it impossible for transportation favors to be granted to anyone; insists that the integrity of the money of the nation be guarded with jealous care, and demands that it shall be of sufficient volume to meet the needs of the business interests of the country, and further demands "that it shall be safeguarded by careful legislation so as to prevent the gamblers of Wall street from cornering the money market, thus inflicting untold injuries upon the smaller business men, the farmers and the laborers of the land." This is a declaration that should receive the support of everyone who believes in Democratic principles.

THE WEALTH OF THE YUKON.

That the wealth of the Yukon is by no means exhausted, is shown conclusively by the results from the use of modern methods of mining, which are being utilized over the very ground which was apparently worked out by primitive methods. Large areas which were hitherto considered unprofitable are being worked to advantage. The Engineering and Mining Journal gives some details as to the cost of hydraulic operations on Bonanza creek, showing that the gravel can be worked for about 35 cents a cubic yard, or $1.14 for every square yard of bed rock, including the cost of machinery. A claim purchased for $30,000, after 80 per cent of it had been worked over by the drifting process, yielded a good return above all expenses and outlays. One of the richest claims on Eldorado creek, which was thought to have yielded $1,500,000 by the old method, was sold, after having been "worked out," for $75,000. The dredging company who purchased it also bought other property in the neighborhood. It is believed that all the claims on Eldorado creek, which have been worked over will be worked again by modern methods. The success that has attended the introduction of steam shovels and dredges has opened up many new districts. Claims formerly regarded as worthless have become capable of yielding good returns. Over 50,000 acres of gravel has been located in the Klondike country, and as much in the Forty-mile and Seventy-mile country. During the past year a large amount of ground has been taken up in Alaska in extensive areas. The introduction of capital and the working of large claims on an extensive scale will change the nature of the mining industry, and at the same time impart to it a stability that was unknown under more primitive conditions. The change gives an assurance that the trade of the Yukon will be an important factor for the coast cities for many years.

It has always been the case in mining countries that, after the prospectors were through, solid business enterprise was able to work at a handsome profit. History is simply repeating itself in the Klondike.

It is said that the Kentucky mountain feudists have no sense of humor. This may open the way for redeeming the district from lawlessness. Let some jokesmiths be sent there to cultivate a sense of humor in the natives, they may become law-abiding, peaceable citizens—or shoot the jokesmiths.

---

King Peter I of Servia is taking hold of his duties in an admirable way. He is said to be a gentleman of culture and liberal ideas, and he may prove an excellent ruler for the Servians.

Who says that justice cannot be obtained in Kentucky? A jury has just awarded a Kentuckian 45 cents who sued for the value of a pint of turnip seed.

RECLAIMING ALKALI LANDS.

The question of treating alkali lands has long been one of great interest, for the reason that there are thousands of acres in the United States, for many years considered worthless. Arid lands are one thing and alkali lands are another, although it has been found, so far as experiments have gone that about 13 per cent of the irrigated lands of the country contain alkali in sufficient quantities to be either harmful to the growth of crops, or to entirely prevent profitable cultivation. If this ratio holds over the entire area that it is proposed to eventually bring into subjection by means of irrigation, then there are over 9,000,000 acres which contain an excess of alkali salts.

So great is the interest in alkali lands that Thomas Means of the bureau of soils was sent to Egypt to learn the treatment of the lands in that country. Although the people of the United States are supposed to lead the world in new ideas it was found necessary to send abroad to borrow the suggestions of a foreign country. There is much alkali land in this country at present, valued at about $10 per acre. Placing the average cost of reclamation at $20 an acre, it is estimated that the profit in reclaiming would be $40, or if the 940,000 acres of alkali land now lying below existing irrigation canals were reclaimed the profit would be $37,600,000, a sum which begins to seem attractive and more nearly to correspond to the big figures in which the world, or this portion of it, is now accustomed to deal.

There are three methods of alkali-land reclamation employed in Egypt, each of which is successful under different conditions and all worthy of being tried in America, it is said. The first is warping, which consists simply in flooding land with muddy water long enough to permit the mud to settle, after which the clear water is drawn off and more muddy water run on. Little attention is paid to draining, except to carry off the clear water. Flooding with open drains is another method. The land is levelled, and open ditches to the depth of 32 inches are dug at intervals of 150 to 450 feet, when the land is banked up and flooded to a depth of four inches until sufficiently bleached of alkali or salt to permit plant growth. Flooding with tile drains 35 feet apart and 30 inches deep promises to be the most rapid and effective way of reclaiming the land and would appeal more surely to American farmers who have a well-grounded dislike to open ditches in fields. Tile drains take up no room, render no land unavailable for cropping, require few repairs if properly laid at the start, and are efficient for years. This may seem like a somewhat vague and remote interest, but until recently we have felt that way about all arid lands, entertaining a kind of lordly contempt for the consevation of land when we had so much of it; but the far-sighted man can see that this state of things is not going to contnue much longer.

It will not be many years before all the soil of the United States will have its value and it will be a good one.

THE MANCHURIAN MARKETS.

It is evident from cabled reports that Russia has a cinch on Manchuria, all stories to the contrary notwithstanding. The treaty between the United States and China is held up on account of Manchurian markets, and it becomes evident that concessions to Russia are the reason. Trade with Manchuria is most desirable. Scarcely a section of the earth has shown a larger increase in business than this northeast portion of the Chinese empire. In addition to her agricultural resources, Manchuria is known to be rich in many kinds of minerals, particularly coal, gold and iron. Precious stones have been found in many places, which suggests that if better appliances were employed than the primitive ones now in use the returns might be much more satisfactory and more surely determine the wealth that may be secured from the added attention given to prospecting the virgin territory. Like most large areas of country, portions are mountainous and some of the snow-capped peaks rise to 10,000 or 12,000 feet in height. The scenery among them has long been celebrated for its grandeur and with the advent of transportation, there is the probability that Manchuria will become one of the interesting tourist resorts of the world, equal, perhaps, to the Alps of Switzerland or the Yellowstone Park of the United States. The changed conditions which have already taken place, and which promise to become more certain during the years of the immediate future, open up opportunities for American trade that can hardly be estimated in the absence of a careful study of conditions as they exist. Manchuria is much nearer to the United States than to any other producing nation.

The United States, Japan and England are especially importunate in the matter of the open door in this section of China. There is no reason why it should not be obtained and it seems that, with united action, it should be.

The new Italian census which has recently been published, shows that little advance has been made in the education of the masses. Ten years ago 61.9 per cent of Italians could neither read nor write; this figure has now been reduced to 48.5 per cent. In the South it now stands between 85 and 90 per cent, while in the North compulsory education and prosperity have reduced the number of illiterates to 14 per cent. According to the new census the population of the peninsula is composed of 16,155,130 males and 16,320,123 females. The falling off in the number of males is attributed to excessive emigration.

Of course the St. Louis exposition will have its series of postage stamps, as the Chicago and Buffalo shows had. It is expected that portraits for the stamps will be supplied by those who led in the negotiations which resulted in the Louisiana purchase—Thomas Jefferson, then president; Robert R. Livingston, minister to France, and Napoleon Bonaparte. Some objections have been raised to having the face of a foreigner on one of Uncle Sam's stamps, but one of the Columbian series bore the portrait of Queen Isabella of Spain.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

T. E. Dorr, of Saginaw, arrived in Duluth yesterday morning, and in the hurry and excitement of arriving and eating he had his baggage checked.

Mr. Dorr, who is the man who moved Eveleth from one spot to another, which is quite a distinction in its way, is a guest, while at the Spalding, at the "Saginaw table" presided over by L. M. Richardson of Saginaw and another pioneer from some place east of the Alleghanies.

To make the table complete, "George" stands behind your chair, in rebellious mood, but displaying his white row of teeth occasionally. "George" is not a particular individual. "George" has been there for years in the same place. Sometimes "George" was a large dark man, sometimes a paler, short man; sometimes an old man, sometimes a young one.

But a table has to have a "George," and the "Saginaw table" is no exception. At Captain Christy's table "George" is "Earl," and has been for years.

At the "Saginaw table" there have been a choice collection of spirits—not intoxicating spirits—at times. Mr. Avery and in fact most of those who have the Saginaw interests at heart or are connected with the place in any way come over.

A few outsiders get in occasionally. Mr. Hollenbeck sits in now and then, but he comes on the ground of his timber relation—but Mr. Dorr came to the table last evening, after a day hustling about.

As was said he had been very busy arriving and eating, and incidentally he went around the city and transacted some business, so he forgot about his baggage until evening. The door man had given him checks after taking Mr. Dorr's baggage as he arrived, and these he felt in his pocket as he took the elevator to come up to dinner last evening.

He stepped back to the desk and asked for a bell boy. He gave him the checks for the hand baggage and said:

"Have these taken up to my room," and gave the number.

The bell boy said "yes sir," and started away.

On coming down from dinner Mr. Dorr went to his room to get something out of his grips.

He appeared in the office one minute and twenty seconds afterwards with his checks.

The boy had followed his suggestion literally, and when he had asked the boy to take the checks to his room, the boy did and put them on the dresser.

"And the worst of it was," he said some later, "when I did finally get it through the head of the boy that I wanted the baggage for the checks and got it from the check room, the boy turned to me and said: 'Are you going up now?' as if he intended to let me carry the baggage if I were."

Mr. Dorr is all over it now.

Col. Thomas is the man who throws books away in the streets and sells them for a cent and when he is selling a book at auction, if the bidding goes up starts to get low bids, and when it is started at 50 cents works it down to a cent.

Governor Peck, of Milwaukee, heard of him around the Spalding hotel the other day and heard that he was throwing away "Peck's Bad Boy" and others of the governor's works, which he doesn't like to have thrown around the streets.

If an ax were used and the book destroyed it would be far more acceptable, for then the publisher could publish so many more, but the books are so well bound and put together that a fling in the street does not hurt them and they may remain in families for years.

At any rate the governor was passing the other day, and he stopped to view this extraordinary work, of which he had heard.

After seeing the volumes abused and thrown around, the governor's humane instincts refused to stand it longer.

He stepped to the carriage and said:

"My name is Peck."

The colonel is the man who tells the story.

"How are you," with accent on the "you" the colonel said. "It's a great honor, my name is Thomas. I have here a $12.50 dictionary I will sell for $2.50. You look like an intelligent man. Why don't you buy one?"

The governor looked sharply at the bookseller.

He acted as if he believed he were being strung.

"Where did you get those books," said the governor, pointing to a pile of his own works.

It struck me right there. I knew I had heard the name before, but I didn't place him till he pointed out the pile of books," said the colonel telling about it afterwards."

So the colonel told the governor that he had sold 2,000 copies of his book and had a real old hat to hat talk, and the colonel was sorry that the governor had not stopped long enough to trip up a local judge on spelling "need, to need bread." The judge spelled it "knead," which is the dough operation.

It was a hard blow to the colonel to lose the governor's company until that happened, because he only can do that once in each town.

THOUGHTS BY PEASE.

Anoka Union: The consumer is made to dance to the music of the political trusts.

If Bob Dunn will only say the word he can skin all the others to a finish.

Apparently Frank Eddy is putting up fences. He is an expert in this line.

The third term for Van Sant got hit on the head right smart, early in the game.

The Union as it may have said in the past, deprecates the custom of selecting United States senators as delegates to the Republican national convention. These positions should be given to stanch Republicans, who are not holding the most prominent offices in Minnesota. Already there is a trend of sentiment being manufactured to honor Senators Nelson and Clapp in this way, and so far, the loudest advocates for their choice comes from those who wear collars around their necks.

When Rhyme Fails.

New York Press: It doesn't pay to trifle with a business man through the medium of rhyme. One of the long-haired boys who earns his pie writing mystical verse for the magazines sent on a new one the other day. With his verses he sent this mad little thing to the publisher:

Of all glad words of tongue or pen
Are those I hope will bring me ten.

But the cold calculathing publisher could also do a thing or two at rhyming, so he sent back the poem with this inclosure:

Of all sad words of tongue or pen
Are these, my boy, "try not again."

But the boy did try again, so the story goes, and the return mail brought him this:

Of all sad words, written or wired,
Try never more, for you are fired.

All of which goes to show that it doesn't pay to trifle with the man who signs the checks.

A TAR'S DIPLOMACY

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The schooner Emma Louise having discharged her cargo and taken on ballast for another coastwise trip, Mr. Cross, chief officer, temporarily free from the cares of office, leaned over the port rail, gazed at the sun-lit harbor and chewed meditatively.

Capt. Snow, emerging from the cabin, gazed wistfully at his mate, and filling his pipe in a nervous and distraught manner, walked over and leaned beside him.

"I wont your advice and your assistance, George," said the captain. "You're good at arrangin' things. You know Mrs. Bland?"

"The red-haired widow of Water street?" asked Mr. Cross.

"Golden hair, not red," corrected Capt. Snow. "Yes; she is the lady. I've been visitin' her for three years, and I want to sign charter papers with her for a life's voyage."

"I don't favor marryin'," put in Mr. Cross.

"I know you don't," replied the captain, "and from what you've told me, I don't blame you, but for that reason your experience is valyble. Some people don't know women."

"I do," said Mr. Cross, viciously.

"All women ain't alike," urged the captain.

"In respect to makin' their husbands uncomfortable with fussin' all are alike in my eyes," retorted Mr. Cross, firmly.

Without contesting this pessimistic position, Capt. Snow hurried on:

"I want your advice, George, about askin' her to consent."

"Haven't you asked her?" inquired Mr. Cross, with surprise.

"I haven't," admitted the captain. "I don't just see my way. I've a rival, George."

"Ah," said the mate.

"A fellow named Brent has been visitin' her regular for the past two weeks, and he seems to draw a deal of water. He's one of those dressy chaps, somewhat younger than I am."

"I guess he is," remarked Mr. Cross, abstractedly.

Capt. Snow gazed resentfully at his head officer a moment, then smothering his wrath, continued:

"I want to know how to shut the wind out of his sails?"

"Lick him," replied the mate, tersely.

"That wouldn't do. If I beat him up bad, she'd be sure to pity him, and that's next to lovin'."

"Let him latter you up, then," advised Mr. Cross.

But Capt. Snow objected to this plan and asked for some other idea.

Mr. Cross spat out his quid, looked his commander in the face and said, with earnestness: "This calls for diplomacy."

"What sort of a rig is that?" inquired Capt. Snow.

"Yes," continued the mate. "I can make this lady hoist her colors so we can tell just how she feels towards you, and she won't know what we are doin'."

Capt. Snow expressed a desire to hear the plan.

"Women," said Mr. Cross, "go crazy over bravery. In all the stories they fall in love with the fellow, what rescoos them from a bull of a fire, no matter what sort of a lubber he is. My plan is this: You ask Mrs. Bland to tea on this schooner tomorrow evenin.' When we're all moored at the table I'll get Tommy, the cabin boy, to fall overboard. He can swim like a duck, and the weather's so warm he won't mind it. Then I'll call 'man overboard,' and you'll jump up and pile overboard—"

"Who'll pile overboard?" interrupted the captain.

"You will," replied Mr. Cross, calmly. "You'll pile overboard and save the lad. When she sees you over in the river, if she loves you she'll squeal out for you to save yourself for her sake, if she don't, it's best you should know how she feels."

"It might work," muttered the captain.

"Might work—it will work," said Mr. Cross. "I can hear her now cryin' out for you not to get drowned."

Capt. Snow was plainly moved by the picture.

"Well," ald he, "I don't mind trying it."

"All right," exclaimed the diplomatist, "I'll be handy with a line and if a man-eatin' shark is coming after you I'll jump over with my knife."

Capt. Snow looked searchingly at his mate, but that gentleman's face being unruffled, he sighed and went below.

The invitations to the feast, embracing Mrs. Bland and her married sister, were sent out, and on the appointed afternoon the two officers, both intensely uncomfortable in their best clothes, directed impatient glances up the wharf.

"Here she comes," announced the captain, in tones tremulous with nervousness.

"Who's that tall chap with her?" asked Mr. Cross.

"By crickey," exclaimed Capt. Snow, "that's Brent. That'll shiver our plans all to pieces."

"Not a bit of it," retorted the optimistic Mr. Cross. "Diplomacy isn't stopped by one Brent or a thousand.

The visitors being assisted on board, Mrs. Bland explained that, as her sister could not come, she had impressed Mr. Brent as an escort.

"Glad to see him," said the captain, mendaciously, and then the solemnity of introducing the visitors to Mr. Cross was performed, after which they all sat down to the table. Tea, cold tongue, biscuits and cake were being partaken of and Mr. Cross came out most wonderfully as a conversationalist, when Tommy, in obedience to a wink from the mate, strolled forward with a most expansive grin on his freckled face. Just as he reached the heel of the bowsprit he suddenly disappeared, and Mr. Cross, who had been watching him out of the corner of his eye, sprang to his feet and rushed forward, crying in a stentorian voice: "Man overboard!"

"Whereaway?" shoted the captain, springing to his feet and rushing amidships.

"On the port bow," yelled the mate, and Mrs. Bland and Mr. Brent, both pale with excitement, hurried towards the bow.

Capt. Snow threw off his coat and sprang to the rail. He intended grasping the rigging, but in his hurry his hand slipped and in a moment he was floundering in the water.

"Mercy on us," creamed Mrs. Bland; "he'll drown. Save him somebody."

"Works like a charm," muttered Mr. Cross, who, like a true scientist, was so absorbed in watching the result of his plan that he overlooked the plight of his commander, who was beating the water with his hands and sending forth intermittent mouthfuls of water and shouts for help.

"Won't somebody do something!" cried Mrs. Bland. "Mr. Brent, try save the captain; that other man seems turned to stone."

Thus adjured Mr. Brent seized a rope and hurled it recklessly in the direction of the floundering mariner. By a lucky chance, the end of the line struck Capt. Snow on the head, and he managed to grasp it. Then, with the assistance of the mate, who had awakened from his scientific trance, the captain was dragged on board.

"Run below and change your clothes," cried Mrs. Bland. "You'll catch your death of cold."

"At your age, too," put in Mr. Brent.

The captain scowled at Mr. Brent and hurled a most malevolent glance in the direction of Mr. Cross, then he hurried to the cabin, leaving a trail of moisture behind him.

When he disappeared down the ladder, Tommy climbed up the bobstay, where he had been squatting, and in a perfect spasm of grins, fled into the forecastle.

When Capt Snow, in dry raiment, returned to the deck, he accepted congratulations in a melancholy manner, and drawing Mr. Brent to one side, whispered:

"I'm much obliged to you, you saved my life, for that lubber of a mate don't know enough to cast a line to a drawning man. I'm great on gratitood, and I give you the right o' way."

"Give me what?" asked the astonished Mr. Brent.

"Why," said the captain. "I take it we are both steerin' for the same port—Mrs. Bland. I now drop anchor in your favor."

"I don't egzactly understand you, captain," said Mr. Brent.

"You are courtin Mrs. Bland," replied the captain, "so am I. You saved my life. I retire from the race."

"Capt. Snow," said Mr. Brent, solemnly, "I have been married five years to Mrs. Bland's cousin. I was merely paying a few visits at her house while in the city."

"I have made a mistake in my observations," said the captain. "I beg your pardon, sir."

"I expect she helped you make the mistake," said he. "She's a bit of a flirt and may be she wanted to hurry you on."

"Do you think so?" asked the captain, eagerly.

"She's down in the cabin now," replied Mr. Brent. "If I was you, I'd go down there and ask her."

"I'll do it," said the captain, and, pressing the hand of Mr. Brent with fervor he hurried into the cabin.

After a short lapse of time he reappeared with Mrs. Bland leaning bashfully on his arm.

"The launch takes place just two weeks from today," announced the captain, beaming with victory.

ADVICE TO OFFICEHOLDERS.

Boston Transcript: It would be a "useful and salutary" act for all cabinet officers to insist that their subordinates should give all their time and talent to the service of the United States. In this way their attention could not be diverted from their proper duties to the formation of mining or other companies. Of course, it is possible that investment companies so organized may prove very profitable to other government employes than their organizers. Solicitations to subscribe for stock may not be equivalent to commands, but there could be suspicion of unwilling investment made to avoid trouble if the organization of such enterprises were forbidden and the prohibition rigidly insisted upon. Of course, what is true of subordinates is even truer of department heads. Members of the cabinet ought to refrain from allowing corporations the use of their names, for they cannot, to the public, separate themselves from their offices. There may be nothing in the slightest degree immoral or illegal in a cabinet officer organizing an investment enterprise, but it is, to say the least, indelicate for him to identify himself with solicitations for subscriptions to its stock. The enterprise may be perfectly legitimate and its prospects most favorable, still it is better for a high public functionary not to allow it the use of his name.

A man wants to know if a woman loves him: a woman why he loves her.

After a woman has told a story of what happened to her for the second time she can't recognize it herself.

The only thing that causes more unhappiness than telling lies when they ought not to be told is not telling them when they ought to be.

When a girl is sitting in a hammock on a dark night and a man starts toward her and then sits down somewhere else it makes her feel just the way a man feels when the horse he has bet on bolts right in the middle of the race.

Cardinals Cannot Shake Off Hoodoo Which Is After Them.

Lose to Winnipeg—Kennally Now Captain of the Team.

And the hoodoo still pursued them!

A few loud wallops at the outset and everything was declared off, the Champions winning 7 to 5.

The bombarding occurred in the first three rounds. McGaughey, the left hand curve promoter recently secured from Kansas City was put in to negotiate the game for the Cardinals. Five smashes, one batter hit by a pitched ball and two sent to first by the Big Four route, caused him to make a quiet sneak for the mourners' bench in the third.

Mueller dashed to the rescue of the Cardinals and had he been on deck earlier in the fray it would have been a sad afternoon for Canada. He choked the Champions off with three small hits in six rounds. He certainly had such swatters as O'Dea, Sullivan and Kelly looking foolish.

Duluth simply hammered Bartos all over the lot. The last time he twirled against them the Cardinals were only able to get two hits, but yesterday it was ten hits for a total of fourteen bases. Shepard distinguished himself by making a double and three singles out of four times up. Kennally managed to get in a triple and had not less than two doubles cut off by fast fielding.

It is claimed that Umpire Cusick gave Duluth a little the worst of it in the eighth. With two men out Murphy tried to steal home on the celebrated Rogers. There are Winnipeg fans that say he succeeded and tied the score but Mr. Cusick claimed he was out by a couple of inches.

The score:

Sessions pitched nearly as good a game against Crookston yesterday as Shaw did the day before and with different results. Grand Forks won the game handily.

Crookston has a new pitcher named Rorke who is said to be a "phenom" traveling "incog." He was traveling in hard luck yesterday for Grand Forks hit him hard and often. The score:

"Butch" Kennally, the hard hitting first baseman is now captain of the Cardinals.

* * *

Cox and Glendon have been released, both players arriving here last evening from Crookston instead of going to Winnipeg with the team.

* * *

A new catcher is expected to report here this evening. His name is Crippen and he comes strongly recommended.

* * *

If the Duluth management talks any more of trading Mueller it will hurt the game. The big twirler is easily one of the best in the league and so is Shaw. Both have been pitching winning ball right along.

* * *

McCoy who has been suspended for the season is getting all kinds of offers to pitch for strong amateur teams. He will probably pitch for Hibbing Sunday. Several teams have applied for him for July 4.

* * *

Drill, of the University of Georgetown, has been signed by Crookston.

* * *

Ex-Manager Reynolds of the Fargo team has been signed by Terre Haute and is playing first base.

* * *

Fargo has played nine games with Winnipeg and only won one.

* * *

Umpire Bray is determined to break up rowdyism in the Superior team and Cusick will do well to follow his example. He ordered Cassibone out of the game for the same trick that Cusick let the Superior second baseman spring on him last Saturday.

* * *

Roy Patterson, the former Duluth twirler, has only lost three out of nine games pitched this season for the Chicago White Sox. That is a wonderful record for a losing team.

* * *

Joe Wilks, a crack infielder from the Southwestern Iowa league will probably be in the Duluth line-up at Winnipeg tomorrow.

DISAPPOINTED IN HORSES.

Thomas Will Sell His Stable of Thoroughbreds.

New York, June 26.—E. R. Thomas will dispose of his stable of thoroughbred racers at public auction at Sheepshead Bay next week, according to the Herald. Disappointment followed the continued defeat of the great $60,000 Hermis, which has lost in each of the four races in which he started, is said to be the cause. Among the thoroughbreds in the string are Yardarm, Buttons, Onatas, Pentecost, Vagary, Dimple and St. Valentine. He also owns a half interest with J. E. Madden in Pulse, a 2-year-old.

ASKS NEW TRIAL.

Alger-Smith & Co. Would Upset a Verdict.

Alger, Smith & Co. has filed notice in district court of a motion to set aside the verdict and for the granting of a new trial in the personal injury action brought against it by Andrew Sturminski. The case was tried last March, the defendant suing for $12,000 damages for injuries received by his minor son, William, who had an arm and shoulder crushed and mangled in the defendant's mill on Rice's Point. The plaintiff was awarded a verdict, and his damages were assessed at $5500.

The stay of proceedings will expire next Monday, and the motion for a new trial will likely come up before the special term of district court tomorrow.

ADJUDGED INSANE.

William Searle of Eveleth Must Go to Asylum.

William Searle, a miner, formerly of Eveleth, was adjudged insane, before Probate Judge Middlecoff yesterday afternoon, and an order has been issued committing him to the state asylum at Fergus Falls. Searle has been serving a four-months' sentence in the county jail for assaulting his 16-year-old niece with a knife, and the authorities claim he has been threatening her life since he was released from jail.

Searle brought his niece from an orphans' home in the South to his home in Eveleth last summer and placed her in a boarding house. Soon afterward he began to make charges that she was not behaving herself, and finally made an attack on her in the streets of Eveleth. The girl is very much afraid of him, and testified in court that she dared not go out on the street unprotected. The authorities investigated the case and pronounced many of Searle's Stories to be fabrications. When left alone Searle acts strangely and talks to himself. He has been in the habit of wandering about the streets at night.

HAS BAD SINKHOLE.

The Hines Lumber Company Strikes a Bad Stop.

The Hines lumber company has an engine and a number of cars of logs firmly imbedded in a sinkhole on its new track, between Amnicon lake and Hines station, in Douglas county. The road was completed recently and the company was attempting to haul out its first trainload of logs, when the locomotive came to a stop about midway of the points above mentioned. An investigation showed that ninety feet of the new road had disappeared. Over 200 carloads of gravel were dumped in the sinkhole when the line was built, and it was supposed to be filled up. All efforts to recover the locomotive and cars have thus far been of no avail.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

Second Record Complete But For One Game.

But one match remains to be played in the second round of the tournament at the Endion Tennis club. Hopkins is to meet Bagley this afternoon.

Three interesting matches were played yesterday afternoon. Dash was put out of the race by Ingalls in two straight sets, 6-1 and 6-0. Dash slipped and wrenched his knee during the early part of the match, and was unable to put up his usual game.

Peck won in two straight sets over Stone by the score of 6-0 and 6-3.

Palmer easily defeated Bunn in two straight love sets.

Grady again won by default and goes into the third round of the tournament without having served a ball.

The following are the names of those who have survived the thinning-out process and are entered in the third round, together with the result of the drawing for that round:

Peck vs. winner of Hopkins and Bagley.

Palmer vs. Grady.

Ingalls vs. Graff.

Ames vs. Gridley.

Play in the third round will commence this afternoon.

The matches hitherto have not been closely contested, two set matches being the rule, but closer games may be looked for during the remainder of the week.

The tournament will likely be brought to a close before Saturday night.

LOVE AFFAIR

Said to Have Caused Kansas Range Feud.

Topeka, Kas., June 26.—Chauncey Dewey, millionaire cattle ranch owner, and his two cowboys, W. J. McBride and Clyde Wilson, charged with the murder of Farmer Berry and his two sons, are alleged to have been brought into the feud with the Berrys by a romantic love affair, in which the chief figure is Bessie Berry Veprona, daughter of Daniel Berry and wife of her cousin, Albert Veprona.

According to the current rumor, she was wedded against her will, having been in love with Chauncey Dewey and he with her. The other members of her family, angry at the aggressions of the young Chicago ranchman, opposed her marriage to him. The story goes that when the girl was forced into the marriage with her cousin she wept throughout the ceremony. She is educated and refined, a daring equestrienne and handsome.

It was when Dewey was forbidden the Berry house that he began his scheme of revenge, using the increasing poverty of the Berrys as a weapon with which to push them close to the wall. The shooting affray, which resulted in the loss of the three lives, was the outcome of this situation.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Mismated Couple Is Enjoying Life In a Shack.

Menominee—There lives in Menominee county, in Rideau township, a couple whose affection for each other has led them to unusual lengths. They reside in a little shack in the woods, devoid of any windows and furnished in the most primitive manner. Instead of glass in the windows, mosquito netting has been put up, and boughs nailed over this to keep out the sun. The furniture consists of a bed made from rough timber, a bench and an oil stove. The only bedclothes are a couple of pillows and a quilt, boughs doing the duty of a mattress. The couple came from Virginia some time ago, having walked 400 miles, doing their own cooking and sleeping by the roadside.

The man is about 22 years of age, while the happy housewife has seen 54 summers. It was a runaway match, the youth's parents having objected to the marriage of the couple on account of the age of the bride-to-be. But this objection had no effect on the lovers, and they decided to set out for themselves and began their long tramp to a country where in nature's solitude they would enjoy each other's company without fear of encountering protesting parents.

The young husband is cutting wood, while the wife is busy making the poor surroundings as cheerful as possible under the adverse circumstances. Both, however, seem to be entirely satisfied with their lot and are happy.

L'Anse—"Dick" Smith, of L'Anse, is serving a sentence in the Baraga county jail for brutally assaulting Rebecca Marksman, of the M. E. mission. He was tried in justice court before a jury and was found guilty. He was given a sentence of ninety days in the county jail and a fine of $50. The discoloration of the Marksman woman's optics was a sight to behold when she appeared in court. According to the evidence of three witnesses, Smith sneaked up behind the woman while she was walking along the Mission road and grabbed her and threw her down, striking her in the face three times. The prisoner has an unenviable court record.

Ontonagon—The Diamond Match company is now working one gang on the night shift at its hoist at Ontonagon, and about eighty cars of logs are being loaded daily. This will be increased to 100 as soon as the electric light plant, now being put in on the bank of the river, goes into commission. The logs are going to the company's sawmill at Green Bay. There are still 25,000,000 feet of them in the river, and every effort is being made to clean them up before cold weather sets in.

Gatesville—Andrew Fountain, of Gatesville, Chippewa county, the other day was in De Tour, and while there came near losing his life. He was driving a horse attached to a buggy, in which himself and several children were riding. While on Watson's dock the horse began to back, and before he could be stopped the rig, the horse, Mr. Fountain and one child were struggling in the water. It was with the greatest difficulty that Fountain and the child were rescued, while the horse was drowned.

Newberry—The Newberry furnace established a new record for itself last week by turning out an average of eighty tons of pig iron for each day's run. The furnace has only been in operation a little over four months, and as it takes several months for a furnace to reach its full capacity after being blown in the present record is pleasing to the management. Superintendent Johnston states that as soon as the kilns now building are completed and an adequate supply of charcoal is available, the output will be still further increased.

Indiana Physician Tells of His Substitute For Blood.

Reduces Fluid to Powder and Secures Wonderful Results.

Indianapolis, June 26.—The annual meeting of the Indiana Association of Homeopathic Physicians in this city last week called together a number of well-known physicians of the state, among them and in whom interest chiefly centered was Dr. Charles W. Littlefield, of Alexandria, who has recently come into prominence by reason of long and patient efforts to discover what is termed the "life principle." Dr. Littlefield was on the program for an address, and when it was announced that he would give some of the results of his fifteen years' investigation, and would recount some of his experiments in the search for "the spirit of life," the hall proved inadequate for the crowd of interested persons who came to hear him.

The speaker did not profess to have found the object of his search, but he declared that his experiments proved that he would eventually reach the goal toward which he has so long striven. He said he had taken a course in physiological chemistry and had thus become thoroughly acquainted with the composition of every tissue of the human body and the various transformations of organic structure.

Early in his practice he had noticed that it was the common everyday experience of men to undergo changes of feeling without any apparent cause for them. One day a man would feel depressed and the next he would be elated; or, to adopt the usual expression, he would feel good one day and feel bad the next, and yet there was nothing to account for these changes.

As these feelings were not confined to any one class, it did not follow that the depression necessarily came from an expenditure of energy in the pursuit of a given object, and investigation showed that persons who were sick experienced these changes to a greater degree than those in robust health. After extended observation and many experiments, based upon these conditions, he reached the conclusion that the mysterious influence was in the atmosphere and he entered upon a series of experiments to determine whether this something that possesses such vitalizing power could be artificially prepared. He said:

Obviously such critical study could not be accomplished in the living body, but necessitated a resort to artificially prepared compounds, which parallel, as nearly as possible, those known to exist in the body and vital to its functions. The known compounds resolve themselves into two general classes—the organic, represented by sugar, fats, oils and albumen, and the inorganic, consisting of the salts of soda, potash, lime, magnesia, iron and silicon. While one class is just as essential to growth and development as the other, and cannot be separated in the work of building tissue, yet each performs a work and fills a place in the animal economy that the other cannot fill.

It is with the inorganic or mineral compounds that we must have to do in dealing with life, for it is these compounds that not only retain the life principle in the tissues, but they must be present whenever new cells are to be generated, for they are known to determine the kind of tissue to be built, while the organic form simply the physical basis of the cells.

In the course of time, but only after many failures, I succeeded in forming a compound which very closely resembles the blood plasms or intercellular fluid, which is the only compound in the animal body really endowed with life. I can best describe this as an albuminous compound, containing in its composition all the elements, organic and inorganic, necessary for the upbuilding of blood, muscle, nerves, glands and other organs of the animal body.

But in and of itself it contains no life, but at the same time proved to be very susceptible to atmospheric conditions. Having made the compound and noted the changes which it underwent in certain atmospheric conditions, I set myself to the task of determining what these conditions were that so affected it. After many failures and consequent discouragement, I tried a saline solution, saturated with an oleoresin, which was allowed to stand for several hours in an atmosphere of free ammonia, a condition which very closely resembles the environment of cell building in the human body. When I placed a drop of this liquid under a magnifying glass, I discovered that it possessed peculiar magnetic properties, the center of the drop representing one pole of the magnet and the periphery the other, so that any solid substance placed in the solution would be driven back and forth from center to circumference exactly as a piece of steel filing might dart back and forth between two magnetic poles. It made no difference how much fluid was in the bottle, for each drop exhibited these magnetic poles.

By placing minute drops of the artificially prepared protoplasm or blood plasma in a drop of this magnetic fluid, the plasma would be torn to pieces and reunited again in organized structure, very much resembling transverse sections of animal tissue. This convinced me that this volatile magnetism is the power that uses the various elements and compounds normal to the human body to build organized tissue. Taking this as a starting point, it was but a step to the conclusion that the magnetic force might have some power over animal bodies that for a time had been deprived of life, or over persons whose tissues had been impaired or destroyed by disease. To demonstrate the truth of this proposition I made numerous experiments, and it proved to be true.

My experiments were confined to insects, and I found that, by reducing the fluid to a powder and sprinkling it over an insect that had been dead for several hours, it reanimated it in a few minutes. This was equally true of cats and dogs, though they do not respond as readily as do insects, a fact which I attribute to my having only a limited amount of the powder, and yet being able to cover them completely.

I have tried the powder but once on a dead human being. A boy named Price was drowned by breaking through the ice. He was under water for a half hour, and it was more than an hour after he was rescued that he showed any signs of life. Rubbing vigorously with the powder, together with artificial respiration, restored him to life. I have used the fluid in my practice, and believe that many of the permanent cures effected were due solely to it.

Dr. Littlefield advances three propositions as the results of his experiments, as follows:

1. Volatile magnetism is abundantly diffused throughout nature and is not generated by chemical action or friction or in any way dependent upon the various functions or manifestations of matter for its existence. It is everywhere ready to be taken into the animal body by the act of respiration, and retained in the tissues by the inorganic compounds normal to them.

2. Life is not as a principle dependent on cell action or physiological functions, but may be infused into organisms after the vital organs have ceased to perform their legitimate functions.

3. An animal organism is not necessarily past revivification when it has ceased to manifest the ordinary phenomena of life—respiration—even for hours.

LITTLE GIRL

Swept Two Hundred Feet Through a Sewer.

Monongahela, Pa., June 26.—As Joseph Gladden, a carpenter, was watching the great volume of water pouring out of a sewer that empties into the Monongahela river, he saw the form of a little girl shoot from the opening. He ran to the spot and rescued the child before she was carried out by the current.

The little one proved to be the daughter of William Gabrish, 6 years old. She had been playing along a small stream that runs into the sewer. The stream was swollen by the rain. The child was caught by the rush of water and swept into the sewer, through which she was borne 200 feet. After the child recovered from the shock and freight she was found to be unhurt.

IS WOMAN'S TOWN

Female Blacksmiths, Teamsters, Butchers and Watchmen In Chicago.

Two Brick and Tile Makers and Two Woodchoppers.

Chicago, Ill., June 26.—There are a few trades, professions and general occupations in Chicago which women have not yet invaded. Or, at least, there were in 1900, when the United States census takers had such a hard time finding out what these uninvaded fields were. That they will be immeasurably fewer the next time the national government takes up the task, however, is a superfluous prophecy.

With one blacksmith in petticoats, two stovemakers, two woodchoppers, one hostleress, and one lumber lady and raftslady already in competition with coarse, loud men who chew tobacco and wear red flannel shirts on the outside, it looks as if the "O, woman, in her hours of ease," as described by the poet, is to be obsolete within ten years.

For in Chicago at the present time, considering all the lines of endeavor undertaken by the 565,515 males at work, only ten of these occupations have not been seized upon by one or more of the 149,867 women who may enter competition in looking for jobs with penciled eyebrows, frizzled hair and all the art suggested by the Squee Gee pages of the daily press.

That which the Chicago woman has done may be best suggested by what she has not taken off the industrial bush.

There are no women in the list of United States soldiers, sailors and marines appertaining to this city. This is not to say that when it comes to fighting these branches of the government service might not be the better for their presence, for in the police annals of Chicago woman's records in the capturing of burglars and hold-up men rank with those of the men. There are no women soldiers, seemingly, for the same reason that there are no women in the United States senate or on the bench of the supreme court. But as to sailors, by the same token, there are three of them, not in the service of their country, but shipping before the mast as a means to a livelihood.

So far, no women have applied for position as telegraph and telephone linemen. Few Chicago women, indeed, will precede a man up a staircase, unless the stairs lead to an elevated railroad station. For the same reason of modesty, no doubt, no women work as roofers and slaters.

Plastering has not appealed to the Chicago woman. New York has five women adept in the use of the trowel, all of whom are courteous to their hodcarriers; but plastering is hard on the hands and on face bleach, so much so that the Chicago hodcarrier may have to wait several years for a smiling mortar slinger in petticoats.

Boiler-making is beside the ambitions of the Chicago woman. She can get as much sound out of the plane or in a soprano rendition of "The Holy City," and until these have failed her as a recourse to noise she will probably leave boiler-making to the other sex.

There are no fishers and oysterers here among the women; no miners and quarrymen; no coke and lime burners; no wheelwrights and no coopers. But aside from these ten exceptions, every other occupation canvassed by the enumerators in Chicago have had their female advocates, working acceptably to their employers and to their trade. In some of these occupations originally taken over by the sale sex as belonging peculiarly to it, it is remarkable how completely women have usurped them. In the great aggregate for the city there are only three times as many men employed as there are of women; in the professions and professional services there are 12,340 women to only 30,301 men.

In the list of bookkeepers and accountants there is one woman to every two men; of stenographers and typewriters, only 1662 men are left to the 8113 women who have invaded the field and carried it off in their note books. As bookbinders there are 1012 women and only 1253 men. The paper box makers number 1036 women, as against 311 men, and as teachers in schools and colleges there are 7209 women to only 1593 men.

Regarding some of the occupations and professions represented by women in Chicago the average reader will find some startling numbers and some startling anomalies. One woman is making a living as a blacksmith, working at the forge and the anvil. Another is a hostler, and still another is a lumber woman, adept in rafting logs and lumber in the north country.

Two women in the city are brick and tile makers; two are potters, making stoneware; two are woodchoppers; three are boatmen and soilers; two are stovemakers; two are distillers and rectifiers; seven are maisters and brewers; four are millers, and three are cabinet makers.

In great numbers, and in some cases in quite as unexpected occupations as those already listed, the Chicago woman is found as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Stock raisers, herders and drivers | 73 |
| Butchers | 86 |
| Draymen, hackmen and teamsters | 29 |
| Livery stable keepers | 9 |
| Laborers | 1,441 |
| Paper hangers | 3 |
| Harness and saddle makers | 27 |
| Sawmill and planing mill employes | 5 |
| Engineers and firemen, stationary | 3 |
| Marble and stone cutters | 5 |
| Glass Workers | 25 |
| Iron and steel workers | 183 |
| Plumbers, gas and steam fitters | 3 |
| Machinists | 25 |
| Architects, designers, draughtsmen | 56 |
| Electricians | 38 |
| Janitors and sextons | 333 |
| Watchmen, policemen and firemen | 37 |
| Undertakers | 11 |
| Bartenders | 25 |
| Saloon keepers | 129 |
| Commercial travelers | 37 |
| Bankers and brokers | 8 |
| Officials of banks and companies | 70 |
| Dentists | 19 |
| Journalists | 142 |
| Lawyers | 65 |
| Clergymen | 165 |
| Physicians and surgeons | 548 |
| Barbers and hairdressers | 475 |
| Photographers | 136 |

Here, in tabular form, are some of the startling representations of the manner in which woman in Chicago has infringed upon the occupations that, thirty years ago, so far they existed at all, were the perquisites of men. In contrast with this, the showing which man has made in evening up the score by invading the occupations that primarily were woman's is a pitiful exhibit. It shows:

| | Men. | Women. |
|---|---|---|
| Launderers and laundresses | 2,663 | 6,630 |
| Nurses and midwives | 263 | 3,782 |
| Dressmakers | 124 | 13,205 |
| Milliners | 118 | 3,482 |
| Seamstresses | 184 | 7,878 |

One may read in these figures and comparisons that literally as well as gallantly this is the age of woman in Chicago. She may not be voting the city ticket this spring, but with the literal hammer and tongs in her hands, she probably is getting in a few knocks where they will do some good.

Not knocking anybody, of course.

Both are women in the work of the Methodist deaconesses and have been traveling for nearly a year in the missionary work throughout the country. Miss Corbin has been working at the Immigrant home in New York, and Miss Mahon is a Buffalo woman. They have been traveling since September organizing missionary societies and renewing the enthusiasm in those already established.

The meeting opened with a devotional session, led by Miss Corbin, and reports from the societies in Duluth were heard. Reports were given from the First Methodist, the Grace, Oneota and Lester Park, by Mrs. Carson, Mrs. Cora Pinto, Mrs. W. S. Albertson and Miss Mahon.

The officers elected for the district for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. John W. Powell, Jr.; recording secretary, Mrs. F. D. # AT WEST DULUTH

The mill business in West Duluth is showing greater activity at present than at any time during the present year.

Two of the mills added night shifts this week. The St. Louis mill started up Monday night, running the band alone, but last night the gang was started and the mill is now running with a full force on the two shifts.

The Lesure mill is running with two full shifts for the first time in two years. The night shift was added during the early part of the week.

The Merrill & Ring mill has been running with two shifts since a short time after the opening of the season, an dthe Alger & Smith mill also has the night and day crew.

With the four large mills in this part of the city running night and day with full crews there is a brisk demand for labor and there are few mill hands who are desirous of work unable to secure it. The effect of the demand for men is seen in the streets, which are almost free of idle men and police report they have not had a case of drunkenness or vagrancy for weeks.

Over 1100 men are at present employed in the various mills and from 2000 to 3000 people are dependent for their living on this industry.

TO PLAY SUPERIOR.

The West Duluth baseball team will line up against one of the Superior amateur aggregations Sunday afternoon. The boys are in good shape, having had a lay-off for two weeks and are prepared to show the Bugville nine some of the fine points of the game. Either Young or Larson will pitch for the home players and the remainder of the team will line up as follows:

Catcher.. ... .....T. Robinson
First base... ... .....Young or Larson
Second base..... .....Ed. Robinson
Shortstop.. ..... .....Coughlan
Third base..... .. .... ....Williams
Outfield..... ..... ..... .....
..Carey, Faubister and Brotherton.

GIRL'S COURAGE

Failed and She Abandoned Her Elopement Plans.

Chicago, June 26.—After all plans for an elopement had been made, courage failed Miss Vera Ball, 19 years old, of Evanston. She confessed to her mother, Mrs. M. J. Ball, 2122 Sherman avenue, and instead of the storm of parental wrath usual in such cases, Mrs. Ball withdrew the objections she previously held to the marriage.

The young man in the case is Elmer F. Smith, of Chicago, who is 20 years old. The couple were to have run away Wednesday night, to be married in South Bend, Ind., yesterday. Instead of this romantic denouement to their courtship the ceremony was performed last night along regulation lines at the residence of the bride's mother.

The first notice Mr. Smith received of the change in plans came in the following telegram from Miss Ball:

"Have told mamma all. Will be married at home Thursday night. Come at once."

FASCINATED BY THE SNAKES

Little Girl Had to Be Taken From a Circus Tent.

Dubuque, Ia., June 26.—The 12-year-old daughter of Charles Hansen, who was formerly a fireman at the Central engine house, had to be taken out of the circus tent of Ruby Bros', circus by a policeman during the evening performance in this city.

The child was fascinated by a snake charmer and by the snakes, and refused to leave the tent, but wanted to accompany the show on its travels. The parents of the child had gone to the circus and did not miss her from the home until about 10 o'clock when they became uneasy of her whereabouts. A search of the neighborhood was instituted, but the child could not be found. The parents then notified the police.

Officer Raesle, on notification, hurried to the circus grounds, which was the first place he suspected of the whereabouts. When he arrived the child was sitting beside a snake charmer and amid a number of reptiles, crawling about her feet.

The officer attempted to coax the child to go home, but she sternly refused, and, clinging to the woman who represented herself as a snake charmer, she held to her tightly. She said she wanted to accompany the circus and did not care to go home. She said she loved the snake charmer and liked the snakes.

The officer finally compelled her to go with him, and she was brought home to her parents.

While she was being taken home she cried piteously and made every effort to break away.

The snake charmer appeared to be fascinated with the child and she seemed to dislike the idea of her being taken away.

The parents, upon investigating, found that the little girl had taken all her clothes from the house, which showed that her intentions were to leave her parents to accompany the circus.

It was also learned that the little girl had given a gold ring to the woman, and an officer was sent to the show car to get it. It was given up without an argument.

The girl was found a short time before the performances were over, and had she not been taken away when she was she would undoubtedly have accomplished her desires

Her actions cannot be accounted for by the parents, and they are bewildered to know why she had made up her mind so suddenly to join a circus. She has never before spoken of following that mode of living, and, in fact, she has seldom witnessed performances.

The girl now seems to be contented with being at home and speaks but little of her experience.

A WILL PROBLEM.

Legatee Who Is Figuring What to Do.

Chicago, June 26.—He who is left one-fourth of an estate of $65,000 might well consider himself in luck, but Nicholas Cline can't figure it that way, for if he avails himself of the legacy he will be just $22,250 loser. Here is the way it would come about:

George T. Cline, brother of the doubting beneficiary, left the estate of $65,000, the will being filed for probate yesterday. One fourth of the estate is to go to Nicholas, but before he can touch a penny of the money he must pay into the estate $50,000, which amount George Cline is declared to have lost through real estate operations on the part of Nicholas' son.

Here is the way Nicholas' prospects look when reduced to figures:

Present value of estate .....$ 65,000
Nicholas' contribution ..... 50,000

Prospective total .....$115,000
Nicholas' one-fourth ..... 28,750

And subtracting $28,750 from $50,000 we have the $22,250 which Nicholas wouldn't have.

A WONDERFUL ILLUSION.

Statue Turning to Life at the Coming Carnival.

The statute turning to life and the girl from up there were the sensations and chief attractions of the great pan-American exposition as well as that at Charleston.

They are the most beautiful and cleverly worked presentations of the illusionist's and electrician's art that has ever been seen in this country. The exhibition opens with a beautiful light projecting picture of a beautiful calla lily, which slowly opens and discloses a magnificent formed girl in the most graceful of all living pictures, the "poses plastique." The splendid electrical lighting effects, the grace of the contour, and the ease of action makes a series of pictures by a living Venus most fascinating. Following are the illustrated songs, each brilliantly illuminated in realization of the verses as they are sung, and then the marvelous fire dances, where a handsome lady dancing seems wrapped in folds of the most brilliant vary-colored flame, until fading, rising, diming, brightening, in the marvelous effects, it seems consuming the fair dancer with its dazzling bright colors. The next is a large marble statue, standing in the center of the stage, and the professor strikes it with a mallet and the statue turns into a beautiful young lady. All too soon it is over, but the memory of it lasts while the spectator's life does.

The idea is that of Professor Montgomery, who has given it a life-time study. He has succeeded beyond his fondest expectations. It will be here at the Duluth July fair and carnival, July 6 to 11 inclusive.

Evidence is ample to prove that the most beautiful women in the world are Americans; 90 per cent owe their beauty to the use of Rocky Mountain Tea. S. F. BOYCE.

MELONS BY THE CAR

First Shipment In Large Lot Arrives In Duluth From Florida.

Strawberry Season Closing and Other Berries Coming In.

The first car of watermelons has been received on the Duluth market. They come from Florida and are of excellent quality. Hitherto all of the shipments have been local from Chicago and but small quantities have been received.

Oregon cherries are coming in freely. A few small shipments of Iowa and Illinois cherries have been received on the market, but the price of these has been high and the demand did not warrant larger shipments. It will be several weeks before the local cherries are received.

The strawberry season is drawing to a close. The time for large shipments has passed and only a few smaller shipments are being received. The berries that are coming in now are not as high a grade as has been received on the local market during the past week. They are for the most part the last picking.

Gooseberries and blueberries were seen on the local market for the first time this week. The gooseberries come from Illinois and the blueberries from Wisconsin. The shipments as yet have been but local from Chicago, but larger lots are expected next week.

The wholesale fruit dealers are making great preparations for the Fourth of July trade, and extra shipments of bananas and oranges have been received. The Fitzsimmons-Derrig company imported three carloads of Port Limon bananas this week, and the other houses have had shipments of a similar kind.

Raspberries continue to come in in small shipments. No carload lots have been received yet, all of the local shipments coming from Chicago. The Wisconsin and Illinois berries are expected in next week.

The fine weather and the approach of the national holiday has had a beneficial effect on the trade this week, and all of the dealers report a very heavy week's business.

Large shipments of poultry, including spring chickens, have been received in Duluth during the past week, and the prices have taken a drop. The crop of spring chickens, while late in coming on the market, is expected to be a large one. At present springs are selling for $4 and $4.50 per dozen.

The drop in poultry prices from the high mark which has been maintained throughout the winter has had a good effect on the trade, which has been much brisker during the past week than for several months.

The wholesale meat dealers report a busy week, with both the ranges and the local retailers buying freely. The prices remain unchanged from the high mark which was reported last week.

CORBETT DEFEATS MURPHY.

Boston, June 26.—"Young" Corbett, of Denver, last night knocked out Hughey Murphy, of New York, in six rounds at catch weights at the Tammany Athletic club. Corbett nearly finished his man in the first round, flooring him twice in quick successsion. Corbett's inlighting was superb, and he slashed away with both hands with telling effect. In the fourth round only did Murphy outpoint Corbett, and then he made things look a little doubtful. Jack Smith, of Boston, was referee.

In the ladder climbing Main street Bemidji won first and second prizes with S. Halverson and Earl Gell.

The Firemen's association business meeting was held in the Germania hall and Grand Rapids was selected as the place of meeting next year. # WANT NAMES OF ACCUSERS

Union Pacific Railroad Officials Object to Secret Information.

Chicago, June 26.—The practice of the interstate commerce commission of investigating charges against railroads where the inquiry is based on secret information furnished by business competitors, was criticized today by J. C. Stubbs, traffic director for the Harriman system.

Mr. Stubbs appeared before the commission to defend the Union Pacific Railroad company on a charge that the corporation has been allowing Peavey & Co., grain dealers at Omaha and Kansas City, special favors in the form of elevator service. The information against the Union Pacific railroad is said to have been furnished the interstate commerce commission by a big official of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, who declares he cannot compete unless permitted to grant similar rebates to grain shippers.

General Counsel Baldwin, of the Union Pacific, asked to see the complaint filed against the company, and Chairman Knapp explained that no formal complaint had been filed. He said the commission was acting upon information obtained secretly.

"The commission is making this investigation for its own information," said Chairman Knapp. "We are frequently compelled to pursue this course where the person supplying us with information has insufficient evidence to warrant the filing of formal charges. We do not know that this company has violated the law, but we feel it our duty to inquire into the matter in the interests of public policy. If the practice of your company is legal, then other roads may desire to do the same thing."

J. C. Stubbs then said: "Are we not to be given an opportunity to face our accusers? If we are charged with anything, we want to see the complaint, and present our defense in the regular manner. It is possible for an officer of a competing road, even the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, to go to Washington, take the commission into a closet, make charges against this road, and then have this commission order an investigation and place the burden of proving our innocence upon us. I protest against this method of doing business. We have all the information you desire, and are prepared to give it, but we would prefer to have our accuser come out and fight in the open."

Chairman Knapp relied that, in the absence of written charges, the commission would appear as complainant. He then ordered the inquiry to proceed, and J. A. Monroe, freight traffic manager of the Union Pacific railroad, was called as the first witness. The inquiry is being continued today.

TAXING RAILROADS.

Arrangements Made In Wisconsin to Secure Valuation.

Madison, Wis., June 26.—The valuation of the physical property of railroads, which is to be assessed under the ad valorem system provided by the act passed by the recent session of the legislature, is to be made by the chief engineers of teh various roads, and then verified by Professor W. D. Taylor, expert engineer in the employ of the state board of assessment, which is the state tax commission.

This was the understanding reached here yesterday afternoon at a conference of the state board, and Professor Taylor, on the one side, and representatives of three of the principal roads of the state on the other. The representatives of the railroads also agree to accept the board's general basis of assessment.

Under the law the preliminary assessment of the railroads must be made by Dec. 1 next, and the roads are given until Jan. 15 followign, to appear before the board and make objection to any features of the assesmetn with which they are not satisfied. The final assessment is not to be made until after Jan. 15. It will then be certified on or before May 15, 1904 and 1905, to the state treasurer, who will thereupon proceed to the collection of the taxes under it.

PIGTAILS ARE SACRIFICED

Result of Great Reform Among New York Chinamen.

New York, June 26.—A complimentary dinner was tendered to the American friends of Chinese last night at Delmonico's by the New York section of the Chinese Reform association, and nearly 100 Chinese appeared in dress suits in a body and without queues.

Dr. Walter Brooks Brouner, toastmaster, made the extraordinary announcement that 500 "pigtails" had fallen in Chinatown in the last month as the result of the propaganda of reform. This, he said, was "sanctioned by the Chinese emperor, upon whom Chinamen look as a second George Washington."

J. M. Singleton, president of the New York section, delivered an address of welcome. Bow Choe, of Australia, gave a historical sketch of the reform association. Lian Kee Cheo, of Canton, spoke on "China, Its Past, Present and Future;" Yip Yen, of Vancouver, B. C., on "What the Reform Association Has Accomplished;" Waung Yhy See, of Japan, on "The Work of the Reform Association as Viewed by the Japanese;" Chow King, of Canton, on "Why China Believes in the Open Door;" Jesse Lord Newman, on "America and China, Why They Should Be Close Friends;" Dr. Ernest J. Lederle, on "China's Opportunity Viewed from an American Standpoint;" Dr. Yung Wing, of Hartford, Conn., on "The Chinese in America," and Robert W. De Forest on "Why China Must Become Americanized to Prosper."

Lian Koe Cheo, in his address, said his ambition was to see his country Americanized. He said he wanted to see all over China postoffices, trolley cars, public schools and all the institutions which make this country great in promoting communication, civilization and progress. He said the Americanization was necessary for the welfare of the nation.

DELAWARE IS HUMILIATED

Governor Says Effect of Lynching Has Been Disastrous.

Wilmington, Del., June 26.—The excitement and disorder following the lynching of George F. White for the murder of Miss Helen Bishop has entirely disappeared, and Wilmington and surrounding country is now quiet. The police force, which has been called upon frequently to put down incipient riots, had little to do today. No arrests were made and the police give no intimation that any would occur.

At the hearing of Corwell the charge of murder will be changed to that of manslaughter. Corwell's bond of $5000 was renewed, Thomas McHugh, a wealthy wholesale liquor dealer of this city, and Col. James P. McComb, a capitalist of Claymont, going bail.

In an interview yesterday Governor Hunt said: "Conditions at Wilmington are a great humiliation to the entire state. I have come here against my physician's orders to get a grasp of the situation. The way the things have progressed is most serious. What has been done so far by mobs I do not think could have been prevented by the authorities, but a halt must be called instantly.

"After hearing of the mob's work last night in forcing the release of a prisoner, I felt that I could not stand back any longer. The fair name of Delaware has been dragged in the mire. It was no ordinary mob that released the man who murdered Miss Bishop. The crowd seems to have been composed of good citizens. The effect of their work has been disastrous. The law must now be sustained at any cost. I have not yet decided whether or not troops will be called out. I trust that will not be necessary, but the whole power of the state will be used to protect its officers in the discharge of their duties."

Referring to the fact that George White had a criminal record of over four years in a Pennsylvania state penitentiary for criminal assault, the Rev. Dr. E. A. Bishop, father of the murdered girl, last night authorized the following statement: "I notice that a Pennsylvania newspaper holds up its hands in horror and says such a deed as this (the lynching) would not have happened in Pennsylvania. It should remember that if White had received the same treatment in Pennsylvania for his first offense of this kind, as he would have received under the Deleware law (hanging), he would never have lived to commit the second offense."

Five of Dr. Bishop's cows were poisoned by some one unknown at present.

ELECTRIC SAFE

The Government's Latest Plan to Circumvent the Burglar.

Screens of Wire Charged With Alternating Electrical Currents.

Washington, June 26.—Just now the government admits defeat and the professional burglar and safe cracker is on top. The confession is to be made in a practical way immediately after July 1, the first day of the fiscal year. The old style immense swinging doors, cunningly devised locks and massive walls of masonry and steel are to be abandoned as defenses for government funds. Instead the subtle electric current is to be called into play. A first step has already been taken at the government mint in San Francisco. There the coin room has been supplied with a vault whose walls are only of the usual strength and thickness of masonry in ordinary fireproof construction. About the vault, however, has been thrown the protecting screen of a mild electric current. The same plan is to be followed with the silver vault under the central court of the treasury building in Washington, also the smaller gold vault in the northwest corner and the bond currency vaults on the floor above. The solid structures of these vaults, although admitted to be vulnerable to the assault of the professional cracksman, are not to be disturbed; the new device is to be applied to the present structures. It is simple and ingenious and interesting. The government is unable to secure exclusive control of it and do its own construction work. It is obliged to contract with the private corporation owning the patents and pay an annual rental for the protection provided.

First of all, the present vaults are to be lined with hard wood tightly joined at every corner. Inside this lining will be laid a thin coating of tin foil. On this tin foil will be placed what will look like strong netting or the ordinary solid sheets of fly screen, except that the small wires of which it is composed will be most carefully joined and will be sandwiched between great wooden boxes. The meshes in the screen of wires will be hardly more than an eighth of an inch apart. The wires will run continuously in every strand from the floor up the sides and will join corresponding wires at the ceiling of the vault. At a point on top there will be a feed wire which will connect with the wires of the netting and form complete circuits. This feed wire will lead off from the vault to a central electric station, at which a mild current of electricity will be generated. The current will be alternating. Three times every five minutes the current will be varied in strength and intensity. The machine will offer fifteen different currents every twenty minutes, so that no succeeding five minutes with its three currents will correspond with another five minutes. A peculiar and intricate mechanical contrivance will be located in the top of the vault, which will automatically give notification at a central station if the electric apparatus fails to work, or if the currents fail to charge all of the wires in alternating shocks. The device will be in operation night and day, and can be so arranged that the opening of the vault door in the day time will not disturb it. If the walls or ceiling or floor of the vault is tampered with in the day an alarm will be rung at a central station. If the same thing occurs at night, or the vault door is touched, then the alarm will be sounded. It is the intention to have the central station within a half block of the treasury building, where the alarms will ring, and also to have connection with the central police station of the city.

Government officials point out that if such a device had been in operation in the Chicago postoffice last winter the $70,000 worth of stamps which were secured by the burglars who tunneled up through the floor of the vault, could never have been taken. Presuming that a burglar could get up to the floor or the ceiling, or one of the walls of the treasury vaults, he would be sure to be detected in trying to drill or force his way through at the point of attack. Even if he should be fully aware of the existence of the charged wire netting his task would be an impossible one. It is true that he could have with him an electric battery with which he could attempt to charge the wires after he had temporarily detached a square from the rest of the netting. But he would have no means of knowing when the strength of the current would change and to what degree of intensity it would be altered. At any time in each five minutes the change of current would indicate the distubrbance of wire, because of the break in connections, and the guards would come tumbling in after him.

Treasury officials have witnessed some wonderful tests with the appliance and have come to the conclusion that so far human ingenuity has not discovered a means of circumventing it. It will cost the company owning the patents something like $20,000 to install the netting and make the necessary electrical apparatus. When compared to replacing the great vaults, the largest of which is 50 by 90 feet on the floor and 11 feet in height, with the approved vault construction of massive steel or chilled iron, the expense is not great. The only objectionable feature of the apparatus is the inability of the government to obtain exclusive control of it.

The conclusion to adopt this new means of protecting the government funds in Washington was reached only after mature deliberation and an inquiry which has been in course since 1894. In that year a commission, appointed under authority of congress, investigated the different methods of vault construction and made an elaborate report. It included not only an extensive study of every form of vault construction, but it gave details of experiments in forcing open vaults and safes. It contains diagrams and plans and the names and a discussion of the character of the most effective explosives. The report is illustrated with photogravures. It was printed as a public document, formally numbered and given out for distribution. Immediately there was a great hue and cry from conservative members of both houses. The document was dubbed "The Government Guide to Successful Burglary," and the clamor was so great that its further distribution was prohibited.

The commission which prepared the report and succeeding experts who have made a study of the question reached the conclusion that no vault or safe in this or any other country could resist the skilled professional cracksman. Every advance made by the safemaker was met by a new scheme or device by the safe cracker. Improvements in the character of the metal used was met by improved instruments for drilling and boring or forcing by hydraulic pressure. Apparently perfect joints and the absence of noticeable cracks or holes in doors were met by the use of liquid explosives, which could be used effectively wherever air could be forced. The most perfectly constructed safes were opened by cracksmen who carried no other appliances than a common bicycle pump and a bottle of nitro-glycerine, which could be concealed in a vest pocket.

The average business man feels content with his books, securities and cash inclosed in the ordinary safe with a combination lock. His peace of mind would be much disturbed if he could see any one of half a dozen government experts who can open any known safe or vault after five minutes' manipulation and without a hint as to the combination. The touch of one of them is so delicate that he can open a combination which is in working order in three minutes with his hand turned to the safe and his hand and arm brought around in a necessarily cramped position behind him.

How the professional burglar has kept pace with the safemaker was strikingly shown the other day in the office of the secretary of the treasury. The agent of the electrical device already described made the declaration that there was no substance of steel or iron that he could not pierce in half wan hour. The supervising architect of the treasury, J. Knox Taylor, and a number of the other experts of the department were present and looked skeptical. A vault manufacturer was also there. He had a sample of a new combination of metal used by his firm in the room, for which much had been claimed. He offered it for any experiment which might be made to test the assertion. He was warned that the metal would be ruined, but declared that it could not even be marred. The agent who had made the assertion took from his outside coat pocket a coil of wire, a socket and a carbon point of peculiar construction. He explained that it came from a captured kit of professional burglar tools. He stepped up to the electric light which was swinging over the desk of the secretary of the treasury and took from its socket one of the incandescent globes. In its place he slipped the socket he held in his hand. Then he turned on the current, and with the thumb and forefinger of his hand, and with apparently little pressure, he applied the carbon point to the face af the metal. Twenty minutes after he had a hole through which he was able to thrust his arm, while he handed the disk he had cut out to the vault manufacturer as a souvenir of the experiment.

AMERICAN FLOUR

In Growing Demand In China and Imports Are Increasing.

Its Popularity Attracting Attention on Both Sides of Globe.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The popularity of American flour in China is attracting attention on both sides of the globe. The British consul general at Canton, in a report sent from China to London and published in that city, states that the demand for flour among emigrants returned from the United States is so great that the quantity of flour imported in 1902 exceeded that of 1901 by 95,831,328 pounds, and was also some 70,400,000 pounds in excess of the average for the past five years.

These figures of increase in Chinese consumption of flour are justified by the figures of the treasury bureau of statistics showing exportations of flour to China and adjacent ports. Indeed, it is only when the shipments to the ports adjacent to China are considered that the rapidity of increase in exports of flour to that part of the world is realized. To China alone, the exports of American flour have grown from 13,718 barrels in 1892 to 99,624 barrels in 1902. This increase of 85,906 barrels is small, however, compared with the increase in the shipments to Hong Kong, from which point most of the flour there received is distributed to the various ports of China. The exports of American flour to Hong Kong in 1892 were 450,690 barrels, and in 1902, 1,398,893 barrels, an increase of 941,203 barrels. To Russian China, the exports of American flour, which began in 1900, were 16,587 barrels, and in 1902, 50,140 barrels. To British China e flour exports were 375 barrels. Group the flour exports were 875 barrels. Grouping the three statements of exports of flour from the United States to China, to Hong Kong and to Russian and British China, the total for 1892 stands at 471,408 barrels, and for 1902 1,549,032 barrels. This shows an increase of over 200 per cent in the exportation of American flour to China and to ports contributing to the consumption of China, while the total exportation of flour in the same years was, in 1892, 15,196,769 barrels, and in 1902, 17,759,263 barrels, an increase of about 15 per cent.

From the standpoint of dollars, if may be added that the value of American flour shipped to China grew from $57,441 in 1892 to $291,352 in 1902; to Hong Kong, from $2,149,071 in 1892 to $4,164,693 in 1902, while the shipments to Russian China in 1902 were $149,669 and to British China $1125, making the total value of flour shipped from the United States to China and contiguous ports $2,207,512 in 1892 and $4,606,739 in 1902; while the total value of all flour exported from the United States in the same period fell from $75,362,283 in 1892 to $65,661,974 in 1902.

The above figures cover simply the years 1892 and 1902, since the fiscal year 1903 is not yet sufficiently completed to enable a comparison of its figures with those of completed years of an earlier date. The bureau of statistics figures for ten months, however, show a slight reduction in the quantity of flour shipped to Russian China, while the total value for the year 1903 will considerably exceed that of 1902.

The exports of American flour to China, Hong Kong and Russian China in the ten months ending with April, 1902, amounted to 1,486,047 barrels, valued at $4,423,692, and in ten months of 1903, 1,437,472 barrels, valued at $4,676,491. This slight reduction in the total quantity shipped is apparently due to the fact that the shipments of 1902 were somewhat above the normal, by reason of the very light importations of flour in 1901 during the war period in China.

The following table shows the total quantity and value of flour exported from the United States to China and Hong Kong in each year from 1892 to 1902, including the shipments to Russian and British ports, which are respectively termed by the bureau of statistics, Russian China and British China:

| Year. | Barrels. | Dollars. |
|---|---|---|
| 1892 | 471,408 | 2,207,512 |
| 1893 | 566,181 | 2,126,270 |
| 1894 | 607,325 | 1,886,662 |
| 1895 | 823,562 | 2,199,046 |
| 1896 | 329,491 | 2,388,234 |
| 1897 | 940,532 | 3,394,641 |
| 1898 | 958,662 | 3,925,032 |
| 1899 | 1,249,340 | 4,135,540 |
| 1900 | 1,529,557 | 4,850,071 |
| 1901 | 1,436,209 | 4,202,812 |

HUSBAND AND WIFE UNITED

After Twenty-Seven Years By Applications For Pensions.

Springfield, O., June 27.—David Kizer and wife have been reunited after a separation of twenty-seven years. During all that time Mrs. Kizer has been making her home in this city and for the last twenty years she had mourned her husband as dead.

In 1876 Kizer went to the Black Hills to search for gold. In time his letters stopped and his wife came to the conclusion that he had been massacred by the Indians. She made application seven years ago for a pension as a widow of a soldier of the Rebellion. Eight months ago Kizer made an attempt on his own behalf to get a pension, and this brought out the fact that his wife was still living. He has been legally dead for twenty years, a provision of the pension law being that when the head of a family has not been heard from for seven years he is dead from a legal standpoint.

Kizer again applied for a pension on June 7, 1903, at Deadwood, N. D., and was again refused. These applications made to the pension department resulted in the reuniting of husband and wife. Kizer went to Denver, where he was taken ill and admitted to a sanitarium. His wife was notified and went there to meet him. As soon as he recovers they will return to this city.

REDUCTION OF RATES

By Railroads In the Northwest Forms Fascinating Story.

What Roads Have Done In General Treatment of People.

The story of the reduction of freight rates in the Northwest is fascinating. In view of the fact that railroad managers are obliged to bear the butt of many a political campaign when political managers deem it wise to attack railroads for the purpose of winning votes, it is of interest to turn to the record and see just what the railroads have done in their general treatment of the people, says the Commercial West.

The report of the railroad and warehouse commission of Minnesota for the year 1882 gives in full the report of the old Manitoba Railroad company for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882. In that year the Manitoba company—now owned by the Great Northern railway—had only 1005.8 miles of road, of which 733.5 were in Minnesota. The only lines in North Dakota were from Fargo to Grand Forks, Grand Forks to Grafton, Grand Forks to Larimore, Breckenridge to Portland, and Ripon to Hope. The freight revenue per ton per mile was 2.548 cents, and the Manitoba company hauled a total of 1,097,536 tons of freight. Ten years later, in 1892, the freight revenue had been reduced to 1.214 cents per ton per mile, or more than one-half. In 1902, or twenty years later, the freight revenue per ton per mile had been reduced to .859 cents, or a little more than one-third of what it was in 1882, and the tonnage hauled had increased to 13,237,363 tons, or over thirteen times.

FIFTY MILLIONS IN RATE REDUCTIONS.

Probably no one will claim that a railroad could do business as cheaply in 1902 as in 1882. Wages were a great deal more in 1902, and yet by increasing the volume of business thirteen times the Manitoba and its successor, the Great Northern management under James J. Hill reduced the rate two-thirds. Had the Great Northern received the same rate in 1902 as the parent did in 1882, the road would have collected $80,389,676.20, while it only collected as freight earnings that year $27,409,017.23, a saving of the enormous sum of $52,920,658.97 for somebody.

To bring about this great increase in business it became necessary for the Great Northern to build new lines to develop traffic. In 1882 the only through business the Great Northern had was via the Canadian Pacific at St. Vincent; otherwise the traffic was purely local. In 1892 the Great Northern had 3417.38 miles of road, of which 1492.99 was in Minnesota. In 1902 the Great Northern operated directly 6336.38 miles of road, of which 1955.28 was in Minnesota, and in addition owned 542.72 miles of road, which materially increased the earnings of the lines the company operated.

These figures show the wonderful work done by one railroad in developing the Northwest in the last twenty years. The reduction of freight charges in the twenty years by the Great Northern railroad alone saves the people an annual charge of $53,000,000 from the rate charged twenty years ago.

THE TAXATION FIGURES.

The figures pertaining to railroad taxation tell a similar story of development in the interest of the people. In 1882 the Manitoba's tax bill was $195,-091.44; in 1902 this tax had grown to $1,239,695.97.

In 1892 Minnesota's proportion of the Manitoba earnings was $6,102,179.89 on which the tax of 3 per cent amounted to $183,065.40.

For the year ending June 30, 1892, the Great Northern paid the state of Minnesota $272,263.63 as tax, and for the year ending June 30, 1902, it paid as tax $487,450.95; an increase over 1882 of $304,385.55, and the increase is growing yearly.

The benefit to the state is even greater than these figures indicate. Note what the state collects from interstate traffic, and how the development of that traffic has helped the state and everybody in it who pays taxes. The report of the railroad commission of 1882 states that the total revenue of Minnesota stations that year was $5,-279,455.05, which was purely local business. The tax on that at 3 per cent would be $158,382.99; therefore in 1882 Minnesota received $24,682.41 as a tax on interstate traffic.

In 1902 the earnings from traffic local to Minnesota was $6,619,186.91 and the tax at 3 per cent was $198,575.67. Therefore of the total tax of $487,450.95 paid the state in 1902 by the Great Northern, $288,875.88 came from interstate traffic. This shows the remarkable result that in twenty years the Great Northern built 1220 miles of railroad in the state and reduced the local rates so that the earnings from all classes of local traffic in Minnesota was but $1,340,000.00 more in 1902 than in 1882, while the taxes on interstate traffic was $264,000.00 more in 1902 than in 1882, or twelve times as great.

THE RESULT OF DEVELOPMENT.

What has been the result of this development by railroads? The Minnesota legislature in the session just closed enacted that the amount to be raised by general taxation to defray the expenses of the state for the fiscal year 1904 would be but $775,000, and for the fiscal year 1905 but $800,000, and that the tax should not exceed one mill on each dollar of taxable property. At the present rate of increase it will be only a few years before the general expenses of Minnesota will be paid by the railroads and the greater portion of the amount will come from interstate traffic that the railroads have created and developed, the local rates being steadily reduced.

In this view of the case it will be apparent to any fair minded citizen that the policy toward railroads should be broad, rather than political. Whenever a state interferes with or retards business only the development of traffic, or the building up of new lines of traffic, it prevents reduction in freight rates, because as the expense of doing business continues to increase, freight rates will have to be advanced to provide the necessary earnings to pay the increase, unless the railroads are permitted to develop through business to a volume that will not make it necessary to increase local rates.

Had the railroads been content to allow traffic in the last twenty years to take its course freight rates would have been much higher than they are. The way low rates have been secured during the twenty years is the result of applying to traffic this policy of developing it so as to reduce the cost by increasing the amount of work done by each train.

THE TRAIN EARNINGS.

The report of the Minnesota commission for 1882 throws light on this proposition. It shows that the Manitoba earned $2.70 per train mile, and that the cost of operation was $1.30 per train mile, leaving $1.34 per train mile for profit. The report of the Great Northern to the stockholders for 1902 shows that the road earned $2.94 per train mile; that it cost $1.45 per train mile, and the road earned net $1.49 per train mile; this in spite of the fact that rates have been reduced two-thirds, from 2.218 to .859 cents per ton per mile. This remarkable saving was brought about by increasing the train-load from 117 tons to 417 tons, or 300 tons per each train.

THE ORE TRAFFIC AND RESULT.

A good illustration of the building up of traffic is found in the ore region of Minnesota. In 1898 the Great Northern built a line from Fosston, Minn., to Duluth, using as a portion of it the old Duluth & Winnipeg road, which it bought. When the Great Northern acquired this road it was hauling ore from one mine, the Mahoning, and there was not very much being hauled. The Great Northern had the railroad and it could handle a lot more business over it than it had. Mr. Hill realized that the more the road handled the greater the earnings, and that if the company could increase the earnings from new business it could afford to make lower rates on other classes of traffic and increase the volume of that. To accomplish this the Great Northern bought a railroad from Swan River to Hibbing, and some of the allied interests purchased large tracts of land there. The Great Northern encouraged iron men to open mines. The royalties were low, much lower than expected by the state of Minnesota. People were anxious to buy or lease mines, and others who had mines to sell or lease were brought into business relations with the mine seekers. In other cases when parties controlled lands they thought contained iron ore, but did not know, the Great Northern explored the lands and if ore in paying quantities was found the company effected a sale or lease. In none of these cases did the Great Northern try to make a dollar; simply asking a contract to cover the transportation of the ore over its line. In that way it developed its business.

During the first ore shipping season, 1899, it hauled 879,000 tons; during 1900, 1,523,000 tons; 1901, 2,321,000 tons; 1902, 4,150,000 tons, and for 1903 the estimate is the haul will be 6,000,000 tons.

RATE REDUCTIONS MADE.

This development made a large increase in the earnings of the Great Northern road, but the stockholders did not benefit, their rate of dividend remaining unchanged. When the Great Northern found it was earning more money than it needed it reduced local rates.

For instance, when the Fosston line was opened it reduced wheat rates an average of 1.3 cents per bushel on this line, which made a reduction in Great Northern earnings for the year ending June 30, 1899, of $875,000 from wheat alone, and as the rates have not yet increased, there has been that saving to the farmers each year since.

In January, 1902, the rates on all classes of merchandise between stations in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota were reduced an average of about 15 per cent. In August, 1902, the rates on grain, grain products, potatoes, onions and hay from stations in the state of Washington to Puget sound were reduced an average of 10 per cent, and a like reduction was made in the same month in the rates on grain and grain products from stations in Minnesota and the Dakotas to the Eastern terminals of the road.

The road reduced rates to increase the volume of business, and it created or established new traffic, and as earnings increased through such development local rates were reduced. The merger was formed for the purpose of developing through business so that earnings would increase to a point that would make it possible to reduce local rates further, giving the stockholder only his regular dividend, the further benefits going to the people.

STUDIES IN ACTS

REVIEW FOR QUARTER ENDING WITH JUNE

International Sunday School Lesson For June 28, 1903.

Golden text for the quarter: The Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom." 2 Timothy, 4.18.

A review of the past quarter's lessons involves the story of the close of Paul's life and a study of selected passages from some of his letters. In lesson number one, we fell in with Paul at Miletus and tarried with him there while he sent to Ephesus to call the elders of the church to his side for a brief conference and for a final farewell before his journey to Jerusalem. When they came, he spoke to them affectionately of his work among them; how with humility and many tears and vexations he had faithfully made known to them the gospel of repentance and faith and had preached such things as were profitable for them to hear and obey, even if some of these things were unpleasant to speak and to hear. But now, said he, I go to Jerusalem, not knowing what shall befall me there, conscious, however, that forebodings of evil days warn against the journey. But he did not account his life dear unto himself. He had given it to Christ and was ready to yield it up at any moment that his death could be of more service to the Master than his life. He was sure that he would see the faces of his auditors no more. About this he may have been mistaken. But his conscience was clear that he had done his duty and that he had exerted himself to the utmost in trying to win men to the cross; he was "pure from the blood of all men." He had declared the whole counsel of God. He exhorted the elders to be faithful to their tasks, for God had appointed them to minister to the church which had been redeemed with the precious blood of Jesus, the Son of God. Enemies of the gospel would arise and try to draw away the chosen of God. The elders must watch vigilantly to protect the church from seducing doctrines and must maintain their fidelity to the pure gospel. With many such earnest exhortations and warnings Paul addressed them; then, commending all to the grace of God, he bade them a tearful farewell and sailed away toward the Holy City, where the voice of duty called him.

From Miletus the course of the journey lay in the usual line of such trips and is accurately described by Luke. At Tyre the ship put in to unload her cargo. There Paul found disciples, who urged him not to go to Jerusalem; but he was steadfast in his purpose. When the time had come for his ship to sail, the brethren accompanied him to the beach, with their wives and children. They showed him all honor. Together with them, he kneeled on the sand and prayed, before saying the good-byes that were made so heavy by the grim portents of death that had impressed all of them except the apostle himself. From Tyre it was only a short sail to Ptolemais, where Paul tarried but a night, hastening on to Cuesarea. His entertainment by Philip at Caesarea doubtless proved a delightful incident in a stormy life. For many days he lingered there, enjoying the spiritual fellowship of one whose work had been similar to his own. Here again he was warned against going up to Jerusalem, Agabus making an emblem prophesy similar to some of the preachments of Jeremiah or Ezekiel. The friends in general protested against his further proceeding upon his journey. But Paul was undeterred, and said: "What do ye, weeping and breaking my heart?" He declared that he was ready to be bound and even to die if need be for the name of Christ. With steadfast purpose he set out for Jerusalem.

A cordial reception was extended the apostle on his arrival; but a significant reservation was soon manifest. He was told that the Jews had certain ideas for which they were very zealous, and his advisers suggested that he ally himself with some men who were performing a vow, in order to assure the Jews that he was true to the faith of his fathers. To this he readily agreed; but the project served to lead him into trouble, for the Jews, seeing him in the temple with men whom they did not recognize, started the false report that he had brought into the sacred precincts of the temple uncircumcised Gentiles, whose presence in the court of the Israelites was deemed a pollution to the temple. The whole city was stirred up by the report; a mob quickly assembled and caught, Paul, dragging him out of the inner court of the temple. They would soon have killed him but for the timely appearance of the captain of the Roman military guard with soldiers, who rescued Paul and took him, bound him, and led him into the castle, thinking that he was some criminal, guilty of a heinous crime. The mob was too disorderly to give any clear information. Thus it happened that the first plot of the Jerusalem Jews against him was thwarted and he was given the chance of speaking in his own behalf, before the Jews made known their mad charge against him. While entering the castle he revealed his identity to the chief captain, who granted him permission to speak to the people from the stairs. The crowd listened to him until he mentioned the fact that God had bidden him depart from Jerusalem and go far hence unto the Gentiles. Then the crowd broke out in a torrent of denunciation, saying that he ought to be put to death, that it is not fit that such a person should live. Whereupon the captain took his prisoner within and ordered him examined by scourging to try to force a confession out of him. As they were binding him, Paul remonstrated against such treatment, appealing to the fact that he was a Roman and uncondemned; no Roman citizen could be lawfully beaten unless he had first had a trial and suffered condemnation. Of course he was not beaten, but was remanded to his prison guard to await such inquiry as could be made on the next day. The next day the Sanhedrin came together ostensibly to examine into the case, but really to trump up charges against Paul, who addressed them, until, after several interruptions, the meeting broke up in confusion, the Pharisees and the Sadducees pitted against each other in a debate on the possibility of a resurrection. Paul was in the toils of Jewish malice and sectarian enmity. But the following night the Lord stood by him and bade him be of good cheer, with the promise that he should bear witness of Christ at Rome.

A band of over forty Jews took an oath not to eat and drink until they had killed Paul. But Paul's nephew learned of the plot and made it known to Paul, who in turn revealed it to the captain of the guard. He inaugurated speedy measures to get his prisoner away from the reach of the assassins. Before the next day had dawned Paul had been led, under guard, beyond the reach of his detractors and had made the first stage of his long and eventful journey to Rome. Instead of having an easy victim, the plotters found that they held an empty cage when they sought to get Paul sent before the council.

At Caesarea Paul was under the authority of Felix, the governor, who proceeded to examine him as son as ye, weeping and breaking my heart?" He declared that he was ready to be bound and even to die if need be for the name of Christ. With steadfast purpose he set out for Jerusalem.

A band of over forty Jews took an oath not to eat and drink until they had killed Paul. But Paul's nephew learned of the plot and made it known to Paul, who in turn revealed it to the captain of the guard. He inaugurated speedy measures to get his prisoner away from the reach of the assassins. Before the next day had dawned Paul had been led, under guard, beyond the reach of his detractors and had made the first stage of his long and eventful journey to Rome. Instead of having an easy victim, the plotters found that they held an empty cage when they sought to get Paul sent before the council.

At Caesarea Paul was under the authority of Felix, the governor, who proceeded to examine him as soon as his accusers had come down from Jerusalem. Annanias, the high priest, was at their head, and Tertulls, a trained orator, accompanied them to plead their cause. Tertullus opened the case by stating what his clients had against Paul, who was declared to be a pestilent fellow, an insurrectonist, guilty of sedition, and withal a ringleader of the hated sect of Nazarenes and a profaner of the temple. The Jews present affirmed that all that Tertullus had said was true. Felix then directed Paul to speak for himself. He responded with a self-congratulation on having his case heard before a judge who had sat upon the bench for so many years. He denied that he had been troublesome, declared that there was no evidence that he had incited to insurrections, confessed with pride that he accepted Jesus as the Christ who had been promised by the ancvient Hebrew prophets, and denied that he had profaned the temple, especially at the time he was arrested. After this defense, Felix deferred a decision until the arrival of Capt. Lysias, and ordered that Paul should be held a prisoner with privileges. One day, while Paul waited, Felix thought to have his Jewish wife hear the eloquent prisoner. Perhaps he wished her advice. Before them Paul spoke with passionate earnestness of righteousness, temperance and the judgment to come. Felix trembled and deferred any further audience until another day. Soon Felix was superseded by Festus, who was besought by the chief priests to bring Paul to Jerusalem for trial, they hoping to waylay and kill him. But Festus ordered that they should come to Caesarea if they had any charge to lay against Paul. Accordingly they appeared in Caesarea and tried to secure a conviction of the apostle. But they could not prove their charges. Festus desired to indulge them as much as possible. Therefore he asked Paul if he was willing to have his trial transferred to Jerusalem under his protection. Thereupon Paul appealed to Caesar, for he despaired of getting justice done him in Jerusalem. Festus gave the only reply he could have made. He said, "Thou hast appealed unto Caesar: unto Caesar shalt thou go." But there was no charge against Paul that warranted an appeal to Caesar. Festus' position might have been imperiled by sending a prisoner to Rome on an appeal after he had been held for two years without any criminal charge against him, sustained by evidence, especially if it appeared that he had not given the prisoner a fair chance of liberty before his own tribunal.

It was therefore essential to formulate some sort of a plausible charge to forward with the prisoner. Agrippa II, who ruled over the tetriarchies of Philip and Lysanias, and was allowed the title of king, with his capital at Caesarea Philippi, came to pay Festus a congratulatory visit. It was too good a chance to let slip. Festus told him about his illustrious prisoner, giving an account of his own experience with him. Agrippa expressed a desire to hear Paul speak for himself. Accordingly, on the very next day Paul was brought before the royal gathering and, after a few words of introduction by Festus, was called upon to speak for himself. He made a lengthy address, which was occupied with a statement of his experience as a Pharisee persecuting the church, and then with the relation of his conversion and call to the Christian ministry, to which call he was not disobedient, because he felt that it was the voice of God. The Jews had persecuted him, but, in preaching Christ and him crucified and risen, he had been steadfastly following a course of obedience to the law of Moses and to the words of the prophets. With great earnestness he spoke these words, until he was interrupted by the loud voice of Festus, saying, "Paul, thou art mad; thy much learning doth turn thee to madness." The ensuing colloquy evoked Agrippa's words, "With but little persuasion thou wouldst fain make me a Christian," to which Paul replied, "I would to God that, whether with little or with much, not thou only, but also all that hear me this day, might become such as I am, except these bonds." After a consultation upon the case, Agrippa declared to Festus that if Paul had not appealed to Caesar, he might have been set at liberty. But it was in the providence of God that Roman authority should convey the herald of the gospel over the intervening sea to preach in the imperial city.

After waiting until arrangements could be made for a guard and until shipping could be secured, Paul was embarked, with other prisoners and some of his friends, on board a ship bound for the Aegean sea. At Myra, on the southern coast of Lycia, the party was transferred to a ship from Alexandria that was bound for Italy. From that point they drifted along on the current until they came off Cnidus, at which point unfavorable winds caused them to head for the lee or southerly side of Crete. They had no sooner left Fair Havens in Crete than a great storm came down on them and they were driven before it until they were cast upon the island of Malta at a place now called St. Paul's bay. The ship and its cargo were entirely lost and the crew and passengers barely escaped with their lives. They were kindly treated by the natives, and even the chief man of the island gave Paul a hearty welcome and supplied him with such comforts as needed. The winter was spent there, and in the spring time the party was taken northwards to Italy by a ship of the island. On the island Paul commended himself to the people and to the chief man by certain miraculous deeds. The rest of the journey to Rome was cheered by the fellowship of Christian brethren at Puteoli and by others who came from Rome to welcome him, meeting him at the Market of Appius and the Three Taverns.

Once in Rome, though a prisoner, Paul rejoiced at the opening thus made for him to preach the gospel. He had long prayed and hoped for it and was ready to use it to the limit as soon as it was presented to him. Exceptional privileges were accorded him. He was permitted to dwell in his own hired house under military guard. His first move was to send for the chief men of the Jewish faith in the city and relate to them the reasons for his being there. He avowed that he did not intend to prefer any charges against his fellow-countrymen. They said that they had heard nothing of the charges against him; but would be glad to hear him fully about his belief in Jesus and the doctrines he had been preaching that had given offense to the Jews. Accordingly, a day was appointed, on which a large company assembled in Paul's quarters to hear what he had to say. The meeting lasted from morning until evening while he expounded the whole matter to them as best he could in the comparatively brief time. The gathering broke up with a discussion among the audience, they not agreeing among themselves concerning the things Paul had said, some believing and others disbelieving. Thus was begun Paul's two years' imprisonment, which Luke summarizes in the brief words, "And he abode two whole years in his own hired dwelling, and received all that went in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness, none forbidding him."

During his long period of residence in Ephesus Paul wrote the first letter to the Corinthians, from which letter the Easter Sunday lesson was taken—that immortal chapter on the resurrection. Not long after this letter was written the apostle wrote another letter to the same church while he was on a journey through Macedonia. While on this same journey through Macedonia he wrote the great letter to the Romans, from which our studies have given us two lessons, the one on the "Law of Love" and the other on the "Life-Giving Spirit;" which lessons are well summed up in their respective golden texts, as follows: "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law," and "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

It seems quite well decided that the period of the first Roman imprisonment should be assigned the dates of writing the epistles to the Philippians, to Philemon, to the Colossians and to the Ephesians. After his first imprisonment Paul went back to the scenes of his greatest labors and there traveled and worked to establish the churches that had been planted. He was much concerned at this period about the men who were destined to assume the leadership in the church. This concern begot the pastoral epistles, two of which, I Timothy and Titus, were written while he was free, and the third one after he had been rearrested and taken back to Rome and only a short time before his death. From the second epistle to Timothy we studied Paul's final charge to the young man, and saw that it was full of fatherly interest in the pastor at Ephesus and the church under his care; it was retrospective, in that Paul recalled the long warfare for the cross through which he had passed; it was prophetic, in that it warned of dangers that would beset the church, and told of the great reward that awaits the faithful servant of Jesus Christ. It was the apostle's swan song, but was full of hope and cheer, its dominating note of triumph being, "There is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not only to me, but also to all them that have loved his appearing."

SCROFULA A DISEASE WE INHERIT.

Scrofula manifests itself in many ways. Swelling of the glands of the neck and throat, Catarrh, weak eyes, white swelling, offensive sores and abscesses, skin eruptions, loss of strength and weakness in muscles and joints.

It is a miserable disease and traceable in almost every instance to some family blood taint.

Scrofula is bred in the bone, is transmitted from parent to child, the seeds are planted in infancy and unless the blood is purged and purified and every atom of the taint removed Scrofula is sure to develop at some period in your life.

Scrofula appeared on the head of my little grandchild when only 18 months old, and spread rapidly over her body. The disease next attacked the eyes and we feared she would lose her sight. Eminent physicians were consulted, but could do nothing to relieve the little innocent. It was then that we decided to try S. S. S. That medicine at once made a speedy and complete cure. She is now a young lady, and has never had a sign of the disease to return.
MRS. RUTH BERKLY,
150 South 5th Street. Salina, Kan.

No remedy equals S. S. S. as a cure for Scrofula. It cleanses and builds up the blood, makes it rich and pure, and under the tonic effects of this great Blood Remedy, the general health improves, the digestive organs are strengthened, and there is a gradual but sure return to health. The deposit of tubercular matter in the joints and glands is carried off as soon as the blood is restored to a normal condition, and the sores, eruptions, and other symptoms of Scrofula disappear.

SSS

S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable and harmless; an ideal blood purifier and tonic that removes all blood taint and builds up weak constitutions. Our physicians will advise without charge, all who write us about their case. Book mailed free.

KANSAS IS SAFE

From Feeling Severe Loss on Account of the Floods.

Wonderful Change In the State In Last Ten Years.

Topeka, Kan., June 26.—It is no longer "Bleeding Kansas."

People of the Sunflower state resent the use of that term. The recent floods were a severe blow, which will be felt for months in parts of the state, but the prosperity of the commonwealth as a whole will be little affected by the expanse of rushing waters which ruined so many fields of wheat, corn and potatoes.

True, the waters swept a million or more acres of rich farming lands and submerged hundreds of towns, but there was so much of glorious Kansas left unharmed that the flooded district, after all, seems small in comparison. This flood may do its worst, and still Kansas has a chance to raise the biggest crop of wheat and corn in her history. There will be local distress for a time, and the helping hand of sister states may well be extended to the unfortunates, but, if the season henceforth be propitious, Kansas will be found in the autumn garnering a wondrous harvest and lifting her imperial head to the skies with a smile.

The Kansas of today is not the Kansas of former years. The grasshopper scourge is only a memory. Drouths are not worse in Kansas than they are in other states. Cyclones come sometimes, so do they come in Iowa, Ohio and Georgia. Somehow the thoughtless public has come to associate disasters with the name of Kansas, as if that state were the chosen object of the wrath of Providence. It is not fair, it is not right, say the people of Kansas. The average Kansan himself chanted miseries a few years ago. Today he is singing Te Deums, because he is prosperous and happy.

It is a wonderful change that has come over the state in the last decade. The temperament of the people has been metamorphosed. The farmers have solved the problem of success. They have studied scientifically the soil, the climate, the adaptability of crops. Experience—some of it bought at the price of despair—has taught them wisdom.

When one speaks of the corn belt, the wheat belt and the alfalfa districts of Kansas, he suggests a world of meaning. These terms signify that the day of haphazard farming has gone by. The Kansas farmer plants corn in a certain field today because he knows the soil of that field is peculiarly adapted to the raising of corn. He does not put a blind trust in nature and expect her to respond equally to every kind of a call. He sows his wheat where it will find congenial elements making for its growth.

If alfalfa is not the savior of agricultural Kansas, it is one of the chosen disciples of the god of victory. Since its introduction, a few years ago, a new era of prosperity has struck. It would be hard to reckon the sum that has been added to the wealth of Kansas by these great fields of alfalfa. When they came mortgages began to go and bank deposits began to swell. It has proved a mighty asset in the ledger of Kansas prosperity.

Kansans are a happy, proud people today. The man at the head of the state government, at Topeka, fairly radiates optimism. Governor W. J. Bailey will talk to you of the glory of Kansas until his face glows with enthusiasm. He forecasts for it a wonderful destiny. He points out over the fields and says: "Look at that field of wheat. Does that look like 'bleeding Kansas?' Over there you see this kind of alfalfa we raise here. There is nothing like it anywhere. You people in the East are prone to forget the magnitude of this state. Kansas is twice the size of Ohio. There are no lovelier valleys, no richer soil, no more contented people on the face of the earth.

"There used to be mortgages on the farms hereabout. That was in the days when conditions were not studied as they are today. It is wonderful what a change has been wrought in this state in the last decade. The gray days of Kansas are gone. You people of other states must reckon with us for what we are, not what we used to be. Do you know that the debt of the state is only $660,000, and the state owes that to itself? To the rest of the world it a debtor for not one cent. The municipal bonds of Kansas are gilt edge investments. There are no better anywhere.

"If you want to know the measure of Kansas prosperity study the bank deposits. There are in the banks of the state $60 for every man, woman and child in it. A round hundred million dollars of deposits will be reached before a great while. Sixty per cent of these deposits are the property of the farmers of the state. In 1895 the total deposits were $55,000,000. The growth in the last six years has been remarkable. There was an increase in the last fiscal year of nearly $10,000,000, according to state records.

"I venture to say that the value of real estate in Kansas has increased on an average 50 per cent since 1896. In many cases the value of realty has doubled in that time. Thousands and thousands of acres of land in Kansas are worth $75 against $25 and $30 a few years ago. I am a native of Illinois and I am struck with the similarity of parts of the two states. I am mightily proud of Kansas and her people. They are progressive, finely educated and up to date. I think I am all the more attached to Kansas because I have seen at close range its development in the last decade. I feel as if I had some part in that development. The people of this state are a clear headed, wholesome lot whom it does one good to know.

"Those who think this flood is going to break the spirit of Kansas are mistaken. The blow has fallen heavy on thousands of persons in the inundated district, but ultimately all they have lost will come back to them in one way or another. I wouldn't be surprised if 5 per cent of the wheat crop were destroyed by the rains and flood, but we expect with favorable conditions from this time on to raise a hundred million bushels of wheat. There will not be any 'bleeding Kansas' in that."

The fact is that the recent flood did not materially affect the star wheat counties of Kansas, except in a few states. Barton and Sumner, the leaders, are comparatively immune from high water. Barton felt the wrath of the Arkansas river to some extent, but thousands of acres on the uplands were unhurt. Reno, Sedgwick, Pratt, Harper, Stafford, Rice and McPherson counties, all big producers of wheat, came off with little damage. Dickinson, Saline and Ellsworth fared badly, but even in these there is a broad expanse of wheat territory which the high waters did not reach in damaging quantities.

The bulk of the harm to crops was done in the eastern half of the Kaw valley, and this is not primarily a wheat district, although considerable land is devoted to that crop. The counties in this region suffer most in the damage to potato fields and corn ground in the lowlands. Kansas has raised magnificent corn crops when the grain was planted as late at June 20. If the season be favorable this year there is no reason why that should not be true again, as there will at least be a good crop of forage in the flooded district.

SCANDAL AT DETROIT.

Public Works Commissioner Is Removed From Office.

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—The common council last evening, by a unanimous vote, deposed from office Public Works Commissioner D. W. Moreland. The commissioner had been under fire for several weeks and various charges had been preferred against him and investigated by a committee of the council.

As an outcome of the Moreland investigation and the flood of rumors it brought out, Prosecutor Hunt has decided to make a formal application to the circuit judges for a grand jury investigation of affairs of the municipal government of Detroit.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Young Girl Causes the Arrest of Courtenay Man.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown—Sheriff Eddy brought Zenith Payne over from Courtenay and lodged him in the county jail in default of $800 bonds. Payne was arrested on complaint of Rena May Pratt, a member of a prominent Courtenay family. Payne is a farm hand. The complainant is only 15 years old and a more serious charge may be preferred against Payne.

Company H entertained Company K of Dickinson, Company A of Blamarck, and Company G of Valley City last evening. All the companies, including Company M. of Ellendale, and the battery and band from Lisbon, left on a special train for Oberon and the encampment grounds.

Tracklaying on the McKenzie branch of the Northern Pacific has been progressing with much rapidity and twenty-four miles have been completed. The branch is forty-seven and one-half miles long and there is a great deal of heavy grading to be done near Linton.

Crews on the Dakota division of the Northern Pacific have been kept busy for several days with cattle shipments from Texas to Montana. The shipment of 350 cars of cattle is being rushed as rapidly as possible. The cattle arrive in Jamestown over the Oakes branch and, after being unloaded and fed, are transferred into Northern Pacific cars and sent West.

Pierre—For the first time in years there is no surplus in the permanent school fund of the state. Practically $500,000 have been placed since Jan. 1.

Ellendale—Sherman K. Wells, of Sargent county, was placed on trial in this county for the murder of Frank B. Carr, of Foreman, N. D., on or about Nov. 18, 1902. Sixty witnesses are here from Foreman.

Grafton—Fletcher Anderson, of Drayton, N. D., who left home mysteriously last Friday while his parents were absent, left a note which has just been found, saying he had gone into the country in search of work and would return in the fall. He cautioned his parents not to worry about him as he would take good care of himself.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Huron—The annual meeting of the South Dakota Sheep Breeders and Wool Growers' association closed here Wednesday night. The attendance was representative of the sheep industry of the state, and the papers read and topics discussed will tend to stimulate the efforts of the organization in bringing about the best results from South Dakota flocks. President Spurling of Brookings presided. Among the topics discussed was that of diseases and parasites, by Professor E. L. Moore of Brookings; W. W. Bell talked of rape hay, and Frank Sherwin and Professor Skinner spoke of feeding and marketing sheep. Sheep husbandry was discussed by J. W. Wilson, director of the experimental station at Brookings, following which the subject of fodder was given much attention. Col. John H. King of Huron gave the address of welcome, to which M. F. Greeley, of Aberdeen, responded, Mr. Greeley also gave some bright "gems from other pastures." The new officers of the association are Frank Sherwin, of Brookings, president; W. H. Harris, of Laurel, Sully county, vice president; Col. J. B. Geddis, of Huron, secretary; E. L. Spurling, of Brookings, treasurer; these officers, with F. M. Greeley, constitute the executive committee. The place of next meeting will be named later.

Rapid City—A meeting of citizens resulted in the Western South Dakota chamber of commerce being organized. The purpose is the promulgation of irrigation and the general upbuilding of all the industries of Meade, Pennington, Custer and Fall River counties. Officers were elected as follows: Chauncey Wood, Rapid City, president; James Halley, Rapid City, vice president; E. A. Cade, Rapid City, secretary, and George F. Schneider, Rapid City, treasurer. ## GOVERNMENT VS. UNIONS.

Organization of Postoffice Clerks Subject to Inquiry.

Chicago, June 26.—The investigation of the Chicago postoffice now being made by Inspector Stewart is largely directed toward the effort on the part of some of its employes to involve the service in labor troubles to the infinite embarrassment of the government. This information is offered by a postal authority of high rank. Some do not hesitate to put the case more definitely and more strongly and to say that the Chicago postoffice clerks' union which has affiliated itself with the Chicago Federation of Labor, has thereby initiated a movement which, if it should be tolerated and should spread to every department of the service, would leave it in its power seriously to embarrass the government.

It is said further that in every important city in the country the work of organizing the postoffice employes and securing their affiliation with labor organizations is going on.

The report that this organization is to be investigated and possibly suppressed coincides significantly with the proceedings of the postoffice clerks' entertainment Tuesday night at the Masonic Temple. On that occasion Leonard P. Straude, a prominent representative of organized labor, in compliance with an invitation to address the clerks on the subject of their affiliation with the Federation of Labor, delivered a powerful and memorable address in opposition to such a policy.

CAPT. DICKINS LEAVES.

Vallejo, Cal., June 26.—Capt. Dickins, U. S. N., late in command of the receiving ship Independence, has left Mare island. After a visit of a few days, accompanied by Mrs. Dickins to the Yosemite and Lake Tahoe, Capt. Dickins will leave for Washington where he will perform temporary duty before taking up the new assignment as commandant of the naval station at Pensacola, Fla.

TRAGEDY AT SITES, IDAHO.

Sites, Idaho, June 25.—Orin Price, a stage driver, shot and killed his 2-year-old baby, wounded his wife and Ed Leach, a sawmill hand, at the depot here last night. Jealousy is said to have caused the shooting. There were threats of mob violence after Price was taken to the county jail.

PORTER ARRESTED

On Suspicion of Stealing Japanese Woman's Jewels.

Cleveland, June 26.—Upon the request of the Buffalo police, George W. Bloom, a colored car porter, was arrested when he arrived here on a westbound Lake Shore train early today. He is suspected of having robbed a wealthy Japanese woman, who occupied a state room on his car, of $3000 worth of diamonds. The woman left the train at Buffalo and reported her loss to the police of that city. Bloom lives in Boston. He declares that he is innocent.

WOMAN SOLICITING

Fund In Chicago to Defend Caleb Powers.

Chicago, June 26.—A Kentucky woman is in Chicago engaged in an effort to raise a fund with which to defend Caleb Powers at his third trial for the murder of Governor Goebel. Mrs. Lulle Clay Brock is her name, and she declares herself "a Kentucky Democrat" who is engaged in a fight for "political liberty and life."

Mrs. Brock is the representative of the Prison Relief league, and was one of Caleb Powers' teachers in his boyhood days. She arrived in Chicago yesterday and is stopping at the Great Northern hotel. She insists that the better element of both parties are in sympathy with Powers and do not believe he is guilty of complicity in the crime with which he is charged.

"When it becomes known that Mr. Powers' father mortgaged his little mountain farm to secure money to defend his son, the object of my mission will be appreciated," said Mrs. Brock. "The elder Powers died June 14, and the poor old mother has not a cent in the world. Mr. Powers is without money, and the state has $100,000 at its disposal with which to prosecute the case. The third trial begins Aug. 3 at Georgetown, Ky., before a special judge appointed by Governor Beckham. The venire from which the jury will be selected was drawn by a jury commission composed of three Democrats selected by Governor Beckham.

"We have been securing subscriptions in Kentucky and Indiana and have met with some success. We urge the prosecution and conviction of the parties guilty of the murder, but we believe Mr. Powers innocent. All we ask for him is a fair and impartial trial, which he has not had, and which his enemies are planning to deny him."

OLD INSPECTOR REMOVED.

New York, June 26.—Dr. George W. Jewett, for forty years United States customs examiner at this port, hase received notice from thet reasury department of his removal from office. It could not be learned why Dr. Jewett was dismissed. He was employed as an examiner of drugs and similar articles.

HUMOROUS SIDE

Of the Postoffice Scandals Is Brought Out.

Washington, June 26.—There is a frivolous as well as a serious side to the present investigation of the postoffice scandals. A prominent officer of the postoffice department was talking shop when he stopped in the middle of a learned discourse on crooks, grafters, syndicates, combines, rings, organizations and the like, and began to laugh.

"What's the trouble?" asked a friend, with an anticipating grin.

"I was thinking," the official said, "of a certain occasion when I called on Superintendent Machen, of the free delivery service, a year or more ago, before the present investigation was instituted, and found him striding up and down the narrow confines of his private office, swearing fluently and shaking his fist in the air.

"'Well, Gus, I remarked (I called him Gus then, but it's Mr. Machen now), 'you seem to be excited over something. What is it?'

"'Excited?' he roared. 'Well, I guess you'd be excited, too. That man Beavers, of the salary and allowance division, is the limit. What do you suppose he wants me to do?'

"'Don't know,' I remarked, 'but it must be something fierce, from your expression.'

Machen shook his fist in the air again and swore some more.

"'Well,' he said, 'I'll be darned if he doesn't want me to buy an operating table for his friend, the postoffice physician, and charge it up to the rural free delivery. What the d—— do you think of that? Ain't that the limit?'"

TO MEET NEXT AT ST. LOUIS.

Chicago, June 26.—Members of the Independent Telephone association of the United States have closed their seventh annual convention, after deciding to hold their next annual session in St. Louis. Hugh Dougherty, of Bluffton, Ind., was made president, and Frank G. Jones, of Chicago, secretary.

PALLIUMS CONFERRED

On the New Archbishops and Bishops.

Rome, June 26.—The ceremony of conferring palliums on the new archbishops and bishops took place today in the private chapel at the residence of Cardinal Luigi Macchi, dean of the cardinal deacons and secretary of apostolic briefs. Mgr. Farrelly, secretary of the American college and privy chamberlain to the pope, the postulant for archbishop Farrelly of New York, took in the archbishop's name the prescribed oath and then Cardinal Macchi placed a pallium on Mgr. Farrelly's shoulders. The same ceremony took place in the case of Mgr. Jacquemin, who was postulant for Archbishop Quigley, of Chicago, and Father Deseuffl, of the propaganda, the postulant for Archbishop Orth of Vancauver.

WORST OF EXPERIENCES.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last? Such was the experience of Mrs. S. E. Newson, Decatur, Ala. "For three years" she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For liver, kidney, stomach and bowel troubles Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed by all druggists.

Piano Prices Sliced Fine

Never before in the history of the Duluth Music Co. have we been in position to offer such reductions in price of world-famous pianos. In our yearly piano campaign we always seek the lowest ebb of the piano manufacturers' prices by making tremendously heavy contracts with the celebrated manufacturers we represent—any of which would establish the reputation of any retail piano house. According to our contracts we must, during the course of the year, sell thousands of pianos. Our sales this year have so far been phenomenal—but we are nevertheless overcrowded in our immense salesroom, due to the almost daily arrivals of carload after carload of the season's most artistically designed instruments. Therefore, we have decided to place on special sale the most magnificent collection of pianos ever shown by one house. Remember, our pianos are as staple in value as diamonds. Sale opens at 9 a. m. tomorrow and includes every piano on our floors. All new regular line pianos 10 per cent from regular prices. Special purchase of 10 pianos, made by a Eastern factory $167.00—Remember, these will last but a few hours. Terms—We will sell any piano on our floors on easy payments—as low as $10 down and $5 monthly, or for cash. Prices the same.

CANDIDATE IS HE

Joel P. Heatwole Likely to Run For Governorship.

Rumor Definitely Announces That He Wants the Nomination.

Joel P. Heatwole, of Northfield, Minn., was expected in Duluth today. He had not arrived up to a late hour this afternoon, and his coming was looked for tonight.

Mr. Heatwole has several points about him that makes him an individual of public interest.

He was congressman from the Northfield district for several terms, when he concluded that he had had enough and would not run again, when he pulled out and let another man get his place.

He was also famed as one of the handsomest congressmen in Washington.

He is a newspaper man, and once was engaged in that business in Duluth.

He is regarded as one of the most astute and brainiest politicians in the state.

Last, but not least, it comes very straight that he is going to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next year.

He is not an announced candidate as yet, but there have been rumors of his candidacy that have been becoming more and more pronounced all the time. It is now becoming one of the assured things of the coming campaign that he will be a seeker for the Republican nomination for the highest office in the state in 1904.

There are a number of things that make him a very formidable candidate. He is a remarkably clever political general, and can do more stunts at lining up forces than almost any other man in Minnesota. He has built up in his home congressional district a Heatwole machine that runs smoothly and easily, without the least friction, and that is dominated thoroughly and completely, though gently and judiciously, by himself. There are going to be a number of fights for places on the Republican ticket next year. With the votes of the Third district back of him, together with many others that he will be able to line-up outside of his own county, he will have a trading force that will be of great advantage to him in the contest.

Should he announce his candidacy, he and Former State Auditor Robert C. Dunn will no doubt be the leading contestants, with ex-Congressman Frank Eddy, Governor Van Sant and a few others in the also ran class.

* * *

Congressman J. Adam Bede is likely to land in Duluth almost any day. He was booked to make a speech at Annandale, Wright county, today, and was expected to come on to Duluth shortly. He is likely to stop over Sunday at his home in Pine City and come to Duluth Monday.

Mr. Bede is getting a lot of press notices over his work in landing Henry F. Greene, of Duluth, for civil service commissioner, without the approval of the senators and with an opposition candidate backed by Congressman James A. Tawney, a much older hand at Washington politics.

IS A VERY SAD STORY

Tale of the Death of a Lady Golf Champion.

The lady moose golf champion is dead!

After winning a mixed lonesome over the Northland links early Wednesday morning, Marguerite de Spotted Heifer wended her way wearily to the lake shore and took the all-water route to the spirit world.

Her dainty, petite little 1000 pounds of avordupois now lies in state at a West End soap factory. The corpse was found on the Minnesota Point beach, near the ship canal, yesterday.

Many believe that Marguerite did not commit suicide. They suspect foul play, claiming that after she finished her lonesome Wednesday morning she went to the lakeshore to bathe, got too far out and was assassinated by some anarchist on a passing vessel.

Others think she died of a broken heart after listening to the expressions of the golf ground keeper when she knocked down the flags at the four and seven holes.

While she put up a fast game, it is understood that many members of the golf club did not approve of her playing, and it is also understood that she foozzled her approach in the mixed lonesome Wednesday by lofting all rules of propriety over the bunker of ordinary politeness. In other words, she was not chaperoned by a caddie. When she approached the club house she was snubbed by the instructor of beginners, who deliberately turned his back to her and walked rapidly in the opposite direction.

All these things may have had a tendency to cause the golf champion to become melancholy and suicide.

MONEY FOR MAN'S LIFE

Father Sues For $5000 Damages For His Son's Death.

John Rafferty, as administrator of the estate of his son, John Rafferty, deceased, has begun an action in district court against the Northern Lumber company of Cloquet for damages in the amount of $5000 for the death of his son, who was injured while in the defendant's employ to such an extent that he died.

In the complaint, which has been filed by J. De La Motte, attorney for the plaintiff, it is claimed that the deceased was employed Jan 9, 1903, by the company, loading logs near Sunby postoffice station, on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad; that the foreman in charge of the work was known to be addicted to the use of liquor, careless and negligent, and that the company was careless and negligent in not furnishing safe tools for its employes.

It is alleged that the intestate, while working close to a car which was being loaded with logs, was struck by a log that swung off of the top of the load because the "top loader's" cant hook broke.

The injuries are alleged to have consisted of a broken back, and the deceased was treated at St. Mary's hospital in this city until his death in April of this year. The plaintiff alleges that his son was unmarried, but left a father and mother who were dependent on him for their living.

SEARCHING FOR JOSEPH CLAUDE

Police Want Him For People In Far-Off Belgium.

At the request of Paul de Favereau, minister of foreign affairs of the kingdom of Belgium, the Duluth police are searching for Joseph Claude.

It seems that dead or alive Mr. Claude will considerable figure in the settling of an estate in Brussels, and the request of the Belgian minister of foreign affairs was imparted to the Duluth authorities through the Belgian consul at Green Bay.

The police have found that Mr. Claude wa sa guest at the Windsor hotel for a time during the year of 1902 but after leaving that hotel no trace of him has been found. It is believed that he is still alive and that his whereabouts will be discovered within a short time.

At the request of relatives the auhtorities have also been looking up Evaniste LeDuc, for many years a resident of this city. The request was made by C. Moise LeDuc, of 965 Hypolite street, Montreal, who says that Evaniste LaDuc is a long lost cousin for whom members of his family have searched many years.

Mayor Hugo wrote a letter to the inquiring relative informing him that the missing cousin had been living here until recently but had moved to Two Harbors.

DESTROYS THE TREES

The Street Railway Welding Machine Is Injuring Them.

People living in the vicinity of Fifteenth avenue east and Fourth street are mourning over the destruction of shade trees that is being accomplished by the welding machine of the street railway company.

Fifteenth avenue has some of the handsomest shade trees in the East end, and at the corner of Fourth street they have grown so that the tops come within a few feet of meeting across the avenue.

Just at this spot, apparently with the idea of selecting a nice, cool shady spot in which to work under the ambrageous shelter of the trees, the welding machine has been located, and since yesterday it has been at work there, pouring forth its deadly fumes and scorching heat upon the fresh, green foliage.

The effect is disastrous to the trees, of course, and as those trees are the source of considerable pride to the residents of that section of the city, it is equally disastrous to the equanimity and good temper of the neighbors.

Protests have been made against it, but so far the street railway company has not appeared to heed them very much.

Location of the Land Office at Cass Lake.

Directs Commissioner to Give Hearing to Bemidji's Friends.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Steenerson and L. H. Baily, of Bemidji, this morning called upon President Roosevelt and induced him to reopen the entire question as to whether the new land office shall be located at Cass Lake or Bemidji. It was generally supposed that this matter was settled, but Mr. Steenerson thinks not, and he has been able to prevail upon the president to refer the entire matter back to the commissioner of the land office with instructions to give all hands a fair and impartial hearing. In the location of the land office at Cass Lake it is understood it was upon Richards' recommendation President Roosevelt acted. President Roosevelt knows nothing of the situation, while Commissioner Richards is possessed of much information from personal observation. It is now up to Richards.

Today in the presence of Messrs. Steenerson and Baily, Mr. Roosevelt dictated a note to the commissioner of the general land office, directing him to take up at once in detail the various questions which have arisen regarding the location of the new land office.

Commissioner Richards is to hold a hearing in Washington to take the testimony of all concerned and make a report of his findings directly to the president. Upon this report President Roosevelt will determine whether it is best for the service that the land office remain at Cass Lake, or whether it shall be transferred to Bemidji. Cass Lake now has the call, a building having been secured for the accommodation of the officers of the land office, and all the miner details settled tending to the permanent location of the land office at Cass Lake.

Commissioner Richards is not in Washington, being away, due to the illness of his wife. He is not expected to reach Washington until after July 1, and even after that it will take some time to determine whether the permanent location of the land office shall be at Cass Lake or Bemidji.

Representative Steenerson, during his stay here, will present to Secretary Hitchcock, on behalf of Senator Clapp, a new draft of a treaty between the United States and the Red Lake Indians, relative to the cession of their lands to the government. The former treaty which provided, among other matters, the cession of sections 16 and 36 to the state of Minnesota, was not ratified by the Indians. It is not known what lines Representative Steenerson will suggest that the new treaty be drawn, but, of course, the state is prepared to make a concession relative to sections 16 and 36.

RED CLOVER A SUCCESS

H. H. Chapman Talks of His Experimental Farm Work.

H. H. Chapman, of Grand Rapids, who has charge of the state experimental farm near that city, is in Duluth today.

"Our work is not so much of an experimental nature," said Mr. Chapman this afternoon to a reporter for The Herald, "as along the line of demonstrating what can best be handled in this section, which is so widely different from the southern parts of the state and from other states where most of the new settlers come from.

"Conditions are so different here from what the new settlers have been accustomed to that it is necessary for them to thoroughly revise their ideas, and it is our work to show them how to work to the best advantage. In other words, they are to avoid long experimentation by taking advantage of what we have found out on our farm. We indicate by demonstration the methods that are most successful up here.

"The most pronounced success of this section is the raising of red clover. We have experimented pretty thoroughly with all sorts of grasses, and have sifted it all down so that red clover and timothy are standards, and they do exceptionally well here. Farmers in the southern part of the state and in the states in that direction often have difficulty in getting a stand of clover, a difficulty that we do not experience. We also emphasize the growing of corn as a fodder. Of course the growing of seed corn as a crop is uncertain, owing to the varying seasons, but fodder corn can be grown to as good advantage here as in any other part of the country.

"Small grains, such as wheat, barley and oats, particularly the latter, have always been a success.

"The state owns 455 acres at Grand Rapids, of which we have 120 acres under cultivation. The farm has been in operation seven years ,and I have been in charge of it for five years."

BIG BUYING HERE

Heavy Orders In Wheat Market From St. Louis and Chicago.

Wheat Weak Early But Rallied Sharply—Flax Active and Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 26.—This was one of the liveliest days the Duluth market has seen in a long time. There was heavy buying here and there was considerable speculation as where the buying came from. It was generally supposed to be largely for St. Louis account with a considerable amount coming through Chicago sources and by some ascribed to Armour, although that interest has disclaimed being the market. The Duluth market was very strong, the September being up 1¼c here when it was only up ⅝c at Minneapolis. The closing prices were not so wide apart, however, Duluth being up ⅝c and Minneapolis ⅜c. The July option closed lower in both markets, ⅜c in Minneapolis and ½c in Duluth. Chicago July was off ⅛c and September up ⅛@⅜c, while in St. Louis the July was up 1½c and the September ⅝c. New York July fell ¼c and September was up ⅜c.

It was a weather market again as it has been all week. All eyes were turned to the Northwest and there were scattered rains there have caused a weak opening and a sharp decline afterward, but the impression as the map was studied became general that the rains were insufficient to do much good and, as the predictions were for fair weather in the Northwest, the bearish feeling was lost and the market soared upward more than 2c from the bottom point. The easier feeling at the opening was aided by the failure of the Liverpool market to respond to the American advance of yesterday. The advance there was only ⅝c. Paris closed unchanged to ⅜c higher. New York reported 11 loads of wheat.

Argentine shipments of wheat for the week were 1,384,000 bus, against 1,776,000 bus last week and 248,000 bus last year. Since Jan. 1 the shipments have been 44,002,000 bus against 17,608,000 bus a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 304,000 bus, last year 529,000 bus, last year 318,000 bus, last year 172,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 242,000 bus.

Bradstreet reported weekly clearances of 3,518,152 bus. of wheat and flour against 3,617,077 bus last week.

Stocks of wheat at Duluth are expected to increase 60,000 bus this week. Shipments have been very light.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 281 cars, and at Chicago 33, a total of 314 cars, against 279 last week and 295 last year.

The corn market was lower, Chicago July showing a decline of ⅝@⅝c. In the Liverpool market corn closed unchanged to ¼d higher. July corn in Chicago declined ¼c. Primary receipts of corn were 629,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 171,000 bus. Bradstreet reported weekly clearances of 1,285,000 bus, against 1,089,353 bus last week. Argentine shipments of corn were 1,451,000 bus, against 1,040,000 bus last week and 1,586,000 bus last year.

In the Duluth wheat market September opened ½c off at 78¾c, sold at 75c at 9:34 and fell to 78c at 9:58, with occasional small rallies. From that point it advanced to 78¾c at 10:05 and then fell to 77⅞c at 10:17. It rallied to 78¾c at 10:55 and then fell off to 78¼c at 11:05. From that point the bulge proceeded without interruption. The price touched 79c at 11:29, 80c at 12:28 and 80¼c at 12:45. From that point it fell back with occasional reactions to 79¾c, which was the close. July closed at 80¾c.

Cash sales were 20,000 bus at July price for No. 1 northern and 1½c under for No. 2.

Flax was very active and the market weak, although at the opening it was strong, the July option selling ½c up at $1.07¼. It fell back then to $1.04 and rallied afterward, closing 1¾c off at $1.05. September, October and November fell 1½c.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

The Opening In Wheat Was Extremely Nervous.

Chicago, June 26.—The opening in wheat was extremely nervous on the conflicting reports of the condition of the spring wheat in the Northwest and on the indifferent cables, the Liverpool market failing to respond to the advance here yesterday. July was off ½c to ⅝c at 82½@83c, and September was a shade higher to ⅜@⅝c lower at 79¼@79¾c. There was a rush of selling orders in September on reports of rains at Winnipeg and North Dakota points and a decline to 78½c ensued within the first half hour, while July sold off to 81¾c. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 281 cars, which with local receipts of 33 cars, none of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 314 cars, against 279 cars last week and 295 cars a year ago.

Buying or the decline on reports that only showers of very light character had fallen in the Northwest and the strength at St. Louis caused a rally later in the day, July advancing to 83¼c after selling at 81¾c. September sold down to 78½c, then rallied to 80¾c and closed ⅜c higher at 80@80¾c. July closed ½c higher at 82¾c.

There was general liquidation in corn at the start due to favorable weather, lower prices in wheat, and large receipts which resulted in a wek opening, July below 46c. The market was rather weak the latter part of the session and July closed at a loss of ⅝@⅝c at 51¼c. September was off ⅜@½c at 51½c.

The feature in the trading in oats was the action of July which opened ⅛c lower to 1⅝c higher at 43¾@44½c and in sympathy with wheat and corn declined to 42⅝c, where it held fairly steady. Other months were quite steady, September opened a shade to ⅛c lower at 29⅝c and July holding around 34½c the first hour. Local receipts were 184 cars.

Provisions opened steady on a firm hog market, but trading was only moderate. There was some liquidation early and the advance was all lost. September pork opened unchanged at $16.65. September lard was a shade to 2½c higher at $8.07½@8.07½, while ribs were unchanged to a shade higher at $9.05@9.07½.

Close: Wheat—July, 82¾c; old, 83c; September, 80¾@¾c; old, 80¾c; December, 78¾c; old, 79½c. Corn, June, 50⅝c; July, 51¼c; September, 51¾c; December, 48⅝c; May, 49½c. Oats, June, 42⅝c; July, 43c; September, 34½@⅝c; December, 34¾c; May, 36⅝c. Pork, July, $15.85; September, $16.00. Lard, July, $8.27½; September, $8.42½; October, $8.37½. Ribs, July, $8.82½; September, $8.95. Cattle, 8,000; steady. Hogs, 14,000; steady; 5@10c higher. Sheep, 15,000; steady.

Estimated receipts for tomorrow: Wheat, 200 cars; corn, 600 cars; oats, 400 cars; hogs, 30,000 head.

Cash quotations were as follows:

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: "We have no speculative interest in wheat on either side," said J. Ogden Armour this afternoon in answer to an inquiry in regard to the report of his antagonism to the bull efforts in that grain at St. Louis. "We have no open interest in any of the grain markets. I am a believer in much higher corn prices, but we are 'even' on that market to a bushel. We have eliminated from our grain business the speculative element. Speculation is a large one, all its large one, all its speculative features. We have a small amount of wheat sold at St. Louis, but it was merely a matter of selling grain owned in a cheap market in one relatively higher, and that will be delivered. The amount involved is less than 200,000 bus. I make this statement that we have no interest either one way or the other in any of the grain pits, because the continued exploiting of myself in connection with every move in grain has become irritating. The incessant connection of one's name with the market becomes tiresome. To illustrate its senselessness, is the p.esent fact I am not now, with all the stories to the contrary, long or short a bushel of any of the grains."

The reports yesterday which suggested the Armour statement were that the packer was short wheat both at Chicago and St. Louis, and that he was exerting his influence to break prices. So far as the Armour people were in evidence in the wheat market yesterday it was only as sellers of old July and buyers of September. This was the closing of a "spread" made when the July was only 2c over the September, and yesterday the difference was 4c.

Chicago: A letter from Preston, the North Dakota bonanza farmer, to Maynard described the spring wheat drought situation strongly enough yesterday to more than anything else stir this market. It said: "The grain has been at a standstill for the last ten days on everything except on such strong ground as corn ground, pasture, timothy sod or millet ground. On that kind of soil it has advanced some, but on anything else it has declined. It has been four weeks and three days since we have had any rain. The ground is cracked and very dry. Much grain is yellow. Oats are very red. The grass is burned up in many places and pastures are getting to be very poor. We must have rain the next ten days or we will not have half a crop. If it continues cool and cloudy we can stand it for a few days. If it turns hot and sultry, as we usually get it in the last part of June, it will cook things in short order. We have gone the limit and can stand no more grief. A soaking rain would, of course, help it. But under no circumstances can we raise the bumper crop expected two weeks ago. I should say two-thirds is all we could expect now. The local showers have not amounted to much."

The following from the Chicago Record-Herald will interest grain men here, for Mr. Kershaw was on this board for some time, two or three years ago:

"We are having a steady increase in wheat growth in Washington and Oregon," says C. J. Kershaw, who is now in the grain trade on the Pacific coast, but who was for years a conspicuous figure in the Chicago market. The old Californians, who were the first grain raisers in Washington and Oregon, who are not thrifty and who were satisfied with a crop every two years, are now being succeeded in our country by the emigrants from Minnesota and the Dakotas. They are working the land to its top capacity. But with us if we lose a winter wheat crop we can plant spring. There is a wonderful grain prospect for the Pacific coast. All our crops will soon be going to the Orient and not a bushel to Europe. Kershaw looks as well as in the days years ago when he was the active figure in all the famous Armour wheat deals, although he is now in the "70s."

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market is very active and irregular. Reports of rain in Manitoba early caused a good deal of liquidation and carried prices off 1½c per bushel. It transpired later that the rain was unimprtant and the market more than regained the early loss. There is broad active speculative trade. Liverpool is still skeptical of any material crop damage and follows our advance only fractionally. There is no improvement in the general character of crop advices. A few railroad officials and warehouse men whose interests in the big crop make them unwilling to believe in damage, still adhere to the theory that there is none. Current reports, however, from the threshing machines in the winter wheat sections show almost uniformly disappointing results over a wide area. Nebraska is still getting too much rain and is complaining of rust. In those important sections of the Northwest where rain is most needed, there is so far none, and the tendency of the weather is hot. The cash situation is naturally being strengthened by the speculative but premiums for cash wheat are hardly so great. The market has had an important advance, but even with that we do not see the position as favorable to a material reaction. We would still buy wheat on the sharp breaks. Unless the Northwest gets immediate relief, prices are quite likely to go higher.

Corn—The market moved generally in sympathy with wheat. The crop outlook is still creating a great deal of bullish sentiment and the market shows no weakness. There is possibly a little less activity. The tendency of the weather is more favorable inasmuch as temperatures throughout the corn belt are tending higher. This seems to be the only thing the corn crop now needs. We see nothing immediately weak in the situation, but prices are high and we hardly feel like advising its purchase except on sharp breaks. The corn crop may and probably will improve.

Oats—The market is practically the same as in corn. Prices are now maintained we think, largely, in sympathy with the strength in corn and weather. All advices concerning the crop are favorable. Receipts are fair and demand also.

Modern Miller: Threshing returns from the southern sections of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana indicate a yield considerable smaller than that of 1902, in which year these states raised crops above an average. Some districts of the latter yielding better than last year and in the Southwest the actual harvest on the general prospects also underran the crop. Success at last year. The harvest is somewhat later than usual and the movement is not expected to show any volume until well in July.

Broomhall: Our Argentine agent cables us that large numbers of locusts have appeared and the authorities are taking measures for their destruction. The visible supply of wheat in the chief ports of Argentine today is 4,344,000 bushels, a week ago $4,272,000 bushels; a year ago 918,000 bushels. Corn today, 7,068,000 bushels; last week, 8,742,000 bushels; last year, 1,176,000 bushels. The tone of the Argentine wheat markets continue firm with a fair demand for export. ## THE WILY CHINAMAN.

Some time ago a squad of Manhattan police raided a fan tan game in Chinatown. Eleven Chinamen were captured and kept in a third story front room in charge of Detective Drennan until the patrol wagon came for them, says the Brooklyn Eagle. While they were waiting for the wagon one of the prisoners said to Drennan:

"Me got to go. Me got velly important engagement."

"I suppose so," said the detective, "but you've got a more important engagement at the police station."

The Chinaman begged like a good fellow, but Drennan was obdurate.

"Me give you five dollals if you let me go," the prisoner finally whispered.

"No use, John. Even if I let you out of the room," said the detective, "the police would catch you at the lower door. They are guarding that."

As quick as a flash the Chinaman answered: "That's alle light. You let me out, me go up stairs, get out on roof and go down other building. Police no catchee me."

"Can't do it, John," Drennan persisted. "They've got you prisoners all counted. If I turn over only ten I'll have troubles of my own."

"Me fix that," the Chinaman answered, without a moment's hesitation. "Me go to window, call a Chinaman friend up from street. When he come to this door you pull him in and I run out. See? You have eleven plisoners alle same, and police can't tell one Chinaman from other."

But notwithstanding his cunning, John had to go to the station, and his "velly important engagement" was broken.

TRADING IN STOCKS

Light and the Market Was Dull and Featureless.

Prices Held Firm In Morning, Easing Off In Afternoon.

New York, June 26.—Prices showed no important changes from last night's level. The few railroad stocks dealt in as a rule, hardened a shade and there were slight declines in some of the iron and steel stocks. Dealings were on a very smal lscale. There was some confusion in the price fluctuations of kindred stocks more especially those having to do with the iron and steel trade. For instance, Colorado Fuel declined 2⅝, while Car gained 1⅛ and the United States Steel stocks were also slightly better. The same divergent movements were noted in the coal and trans-continental groups, but the fluctuations did not exceed small fractions. Cast Iron Pipe preferred sold at a decline of 4½. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie advanced a point. Pennsylvania sold at 123. The general market practically stood still until near noon, when active stocks hardened a fraction. Lake Erie & Western, Rocking Valley preferred and Gas advanced 1@1¼ and Kansas City Southern preferred lost 2. Bonds were easier at noon.

Colorado Fuel after being neglected on the decline, steadily came into demand and rallied 1¾. At other points, price movements were imperceptible. United States Shipbuilding sinking fund fives sold at 24, compared with 40 the preceding sale.

The trading element showed no inclination to operate in the absence of any impulse and the market was generally stagnant. Some few stocks were easier, but not enough to induce a concerted movement. National of Mexico preferred advanced 1⅝. North American declined a point.

Chicago & Alton advanced 1¼ and Virginia-Carolina Chemical 1½, while Wheeling & Lake Erie and Chicago Terminal preferred declined 1. Chicago Great Western preferred A 1¼. Adams Express 3 and Hocking Valley preferred reacted 1¾. The market was without hardly feel like advising its purchase except on sharp breaks. The corn crop may and probably will improve.

Oats—The market is practically the same as in corn. Prices are now maintained we think, largely, in sympathy with the strength in corn and weather. All advices concerning the crop are favorable. Receipts are fair and demand also.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 26.—After opening steady 3 points lower to 9 points higher, the cotton market early was exceedingly nervous and erratic, reflecting the general uncertainty of the trade as to the attitude of the bull party in connection with July notices, which were estimated to be out of the extent of nearly 90,000 bales. At first the market showed a declining tendency, but almost immediately reports circulated that the notices had been provided for and a representative of the New Orleans bull party was seen on the floor supporting the near by months. As a result July, which had been sold to 12.83, jumped to 13.00; August sold as low as 12.80 on the call, advanced to 12.99 while September touched 11.77, was bid up to 11.89 with the later months showing almost equal nervousness and excitement.

Fluctuations during the entire forenoon were rapid and violent. At midday the trading basis was net 10@15 points higher on near months and from 5 to 6 points higher on the late positions. Cotton spot closed quiet 10 points advance. Middling uplands, 13.35; middling gulf, 13.60. Sales 682 bales. Cotton futures closed very steady. June, 13.07; July, 13.10; August, 12.98; September, 11.90; October, 10.48; November, 10.08; December and January, 9.97.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is dull and unchanged. There is a small professional trade and not much of anything else. Interest rates are tending easier. A favorable bank statement is expected tomorrow. In any event there is not much selling pressure from long stocks. We can only repeat what we have been saying of late under present conditions, we think stocks are worth the money. The future depends much upon the development of the cotton and corn crop. The oats crop looks all right and a moderate impairment to the wheat crop will not be much of a factor with the railroads. The outlook is still dull.

• • •

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: It was announced that the Pennsylvania new stock issue of $75,000,000 will be all taken by old shareholders. Practically nothing, if anything, will remain for the underwriting syndicate. A prominent broker says: "If the stockholders do not take the stock the syndicate is to be congratulated, that's all. I will come into a remarkably good security at an astonishingly low price and can afford to hold it until the market feels better. The selling of United States Steel sinking fund bonds in rather large amounts led to the conclusion that an interest identified with the corporation was getting out. The selling of the bonds had the natural effect of depressing the common and preferred at once.

ONE MORE CHANCE

Given Railroads to Make Reduction In Freight Rates.

Railroad and Warehouse Commission Issues Ultimatum to Officials.

St. Paul, Minn., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The railroad and warehouse commission handed the traffic officials of the various Minnesota lines what amounted to an ultimatum. It was to this effect:

"If you gentlemen cannot agree to meet this commission at least half way and agree to a liberal reduction in rates on lumber and coal by 4 o'clock tomorrow, this commission will order a very substantial reduction in rates, notwithstanding your protests."

In compliance with this, the commission will give the officials one more chance. Another meeting was set for 4 o'clock today, but it is not likely that in view of the attitude of the railroads, that they will suggest any compromise.

The members of the commission declare that they have authorized no statement concerning the reduction to be made, and say furthermore, that the members have not agreed among themselves. The information that there will be a "substantial reduction" ordered is somewhat significant. The commission evidently anticipates a legal contest. It is likely that the railroads will ask for the ruling on the grounds that the rates, as reduced, are unreasonable and confiscatory, in view of the increased expenses, etc.

GOES TO OMAHA.

O. H. McCarty Leaves the Rock Island Line.

O. H. McCarthy, who has been with the Rock Island road at St. Paul for many years as superintendent, and is well known here among railroad and other men, has resigned his position, to take effect July 1.

Mr. McCarty has long been the object of solicitations from the Northwestern railroad, and has withstood them until now.

He goes to Kaukauna, Wis., to take the division superintendency there. His transfer will cause regret among the railroad men who have worked with him and have known him in this part of the country for the past twenty years.

F. P. Rutherford, who has been the city ticket agent for the road at St. Paul for years, has been transferred to Omaha, to succeed Charles Rutherford at that place, who has been made district passenger agent for the Rock Island at San Francisco.

John B. Rayn, travelling freight agent of the Rock Island, is in the city today after business for his road.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

New York, June 26.—Captain Allen Pierce, who served as acting ensign under Admiral Farragut during the Civil war, is dead at Rockville Centre, L. I., aged 78 years. Captain Pierce began his seafaring career when fifteen years old by shipping aboard a whaler from New Bedford, Mass.

Denver, June 26—Joe Cook, the well-known actor, died from the effects of a hemorrhage of the lungs early today. The attack came upon him while walking in the street. He was taken to a hospital and died within an hour.

New York June 26.—Samuel Thompson Wilson, of Staten Island, is dead aged 73 years. He was appointed consul at Hamburg, Germany, by President Johnson, and under President Garfield was for a time charge d'affaires in Brazil.

Amherst, Mass., June 26.—Joseph W. Fairbanks, treasurer of Amherst college for the past six years, died yesterday. He had been an instructor in St. Paul, Minn.

San Francisco, June 26.—Rev. Joseph De Forest, an Episcopal minister from Davenport, Iowa, was found dead in bed at his hotel here. He came to this city recently to look after some property and on last Sunday he enlisted in a service at Grace church, apparently in the best of health. An autopsy will be held. Deceased was 60 years old and leaves a wife and daughter in Davenport.

CORNELL WINS FOUR OARED

Finished Half a Length Ahead, With Pennsylvania Second.

Poughkeepsie, June 26.—The 'Varsity four-oared race was started at 4:11 p. m. Pennsylvania caught the water first and at the end of 100 yards was leading by half a boat length. Cornell was second, apparently gaining on Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, pulling a strong stroke, was third.

At the quarter mile mark, Pennsylvania was still leading with Cornell a close second. Approaching the one mile mark all four crews were holding their course in good shape.

Columbia was dropping behind and Cornell was forging its way to the front with Pennsylvania second and Wisconsin third. There was briefly half a length's difference between the three crews, with Columbia rapidly falling back. Approaching the first mile Pennsylvania had opened up with Cornell and forged slightly ahead of Cornell, with Wisconsin third.

Near the mile and a half Pennsylvania and Cornell were having a fierce struggle for first position with Cornell slightly in the lead, she having regained her old position; Wisconsin was third by several lengths and Columbia a bad fourth.

Cornell won by half a length; Pennsylvania second, by four lengths; Wisconsin third, Columbia fourth. Time, 11:33 3-5.

JUDGE THREATENED.

Jackson Official Will Be Guarded By Militia.

Louisville, Ky., June 26.—A special to the Evening Post from Jackson, Ky., says: Judge Cardwell, who presides over the city court here, and who tried the two men brought before him on the charge of firing Captain B. J. Ewen's hotel, has received notice of a threat of assassination and has taken up his residence in his store. He will be guarded by the militia.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Jealous Lover Runs Amuck at Sherman, Conn.

Sherman, Conn., June 26.—Angered over her refusal to marry him P. H. Worden, of Carmel, N. Y., today killed Edith Roscoe, also of that town, by cutting her throat.

He then attacked Mrs. Sherman Roscoe, sister-in-law of Miss Roscoe, with a hammer, crushing her skull and inflicting probably fatal injuries. Worden then attempted to kill himself by shooting. The tragedy occurred at the Roscoe home on a farm near here, where Worden and Miss Roscoe were visitors.

The only cause assigned for Worden's acts is that he is insanely jealous of Miss Roscoe and killed her in a rage because she declined to marry him. His attack on Mrs. Roscoe is thought to have been due to Worden's belief that she had influenced her sister's action in refusing him.

SIGNING IS POSTPONED

Treaties With Cuba Go Over Until Next Week.

Havana, June 26.—The signing of the final treaties between Cuba and the United States has been postponed until next week because of the delay arising from the questions raised at Washington. It had previously been announced that all the questions had been settled satisfactorily.

A resolution providing for the adjournment of congress July 4 is not thought likely to pass the house.

Congress at present is accomplishing practically nothing, although much important legislation is pending, including the appropriation and the electoral, judicial and municipal laws. There is no time limit for the introduction of bills, and new propositions are constantly being unfolded and discussed. The house and senate did not hold any sessions this week on account of the lack of quorums.

President Palma continues confident that the senate will shortly ratify all the treaties.

It is said that Senor Zaldo, the minister of state and of justice, will resign on his return from the United States. The report is not officially confirmed, but it is known that Senor Zaldo strongly disapproved of the strike amnesty and did not share President Palma's desire for the earliest conclusion of the treaties with the United States.

The government has disapproved of the Havana city council's budget, especially the items increasing the pay and numbers of the officials.

NO PUNISHMENT

Will be Meted Out to Servian Assassins.

Belgrade, June 26.—The German emperor has sent King Peter a telegram couched in cordial terms. The Austrian minister today resumed official relations with the Servian government.

King Peter held a reception this morning. Only two foreign diplomats, the Russian and Austrian ministers, attended. The king's reappointment of the ministry yesterday is regarded as equivalent to a notification that no punishment will be meted out to the assassins of King Alexander and Queen Draga.

Foreign Minister Kalievics has sent a circular to the Servian representatives abroad explaining that King Peter reappointed the cabinet because he considered that hec ould not do better than entrust the government to the men in whom parliament had a few days ago expressed its full confidence. One of the first tasks of the ministry would be to order new elections and the king would then be able to select a second cabinet from the predominant political party.

Hearing Land Case.

Evidence is being taken today in the land office case of the United States against Katharine S. Costello.

The case is one investigated by Special Agent Colter. The land under dispute is situated in section 7-61-25 and was entered by the defendant under the homestead act. The defendant is employed as a school teacher in the town of Graceville, Minn., and it is claimed by the plaintiffs that she did not reside on her claim or fulfill the required homestead duties, but spent the majority of her time in the town of Graceville.

The register and receiver of the local office are hearing the case.

THREE NEGROES ARE LYNCHED

Taken From the Jail at Newton, Ga., and Hanged.

Albany, Ga., June 26.—Three Negroes, Garfield McCoy, George McKinney and Wiley, were taken from the jail at Newton, Baker county, twenty-one miles south of here, last night, and lynched. The three men were in jail for killing F. S. Bullard, a white man, who was called to quell a row at a Negro rance near his house one night last week. The mob went to the jail and told the jailer they had another prisoner to lodge in jail. When the jailer reached the jail door with his keys the mob rushed upon him and overpowered him.

The three Negroes were taken a mile from town, hung to a tree and riddled with bullets.

ENTITLED TO CONTRACT.

A Decision In Favor of Paul Herman.

Washington, June 26.—Assistant Attorney General Robb of the postoffice department today submitted to First Assistant Postmaster General Wayne a decision in the money order contract case, which holds that the bid of Paul Herman, of New York, who submitted a bid of $45,000 below that of the present contractors, meets the requirements of law and that it is therefore entitled to receive the contract.

REED RELEASED.

Miss Stickler Failed to Appear Against Him.

Chicago, June 26.—Harold C. Reed, of Mills, to escape from whom Miss Laura Stickler is said to have jumped from a hotel window several weeks ago, was discharged today for want of prosecution. Miss Stickler, who signed the warrants for Reed's arrest, charging him with abduction and assault, failed to appear in court. She is now in Cincinnati, where she went immediately after being released from the hospital.

Assumes His Duties.

Judge Page Morris will assume his duties as federal judge of the United States district and circuit courts July 1.

He will probably go to St. Paul to assist Judge Lochren at the present term of the United States courts which are now in session in that city.

He will make his headquarters in Duluth in offices which have been fitted up for him in the federal building.

LUNCHES WITH THE PRESIDENT

Sir Thomas Lipton Is a Guest at the White House.

Washington, June 26.—Sir Thimas Lipton, the challenger for the America's cup, lunched with President Roosevelt at the White House this afternoon. The state dining room was used for the occasion, the table being handsomely decorated with ferns and cut flowers.

Sir Thomas arrived shortly after 1 o'clock and was cordially greeted by the president. They needed no introduction, having met on a former occasion. The members composing th cluncheon party and the president discussed the coming yacht races and the president exhibited much interest in the event.

In addition to Sir Thomas, the other guests were the former ambassador to Germany, Andrew D. White, William Fife, the designer of the Shamrock III, R. A. C. Smith, vice commodore of the New York Yacht club, Assitant Secretary of War Sanger, Adjt. Gen. Corbin, Senator Hanna and Secretary Moody. Upon the conclusion of the luncheon, Sir Thomas departed for New York, traveling in the private car of President Loree, of the Baltimore & Ohio.

NATIONAL STRIKE

Of Building Workers Is Threatened By Parks.

New York, June 26.—The building trades' war was renewed today when a delegation from the Ornamental Plaster Workers' union and forty representatives of the board of United Building trades, marched through the Upper West Side, calling out all plasterers who were overlooked yesterday.

Plasterers throughout the country, who work for members of the New York Employers' association, will be called out, said Delegate Sam Parks today.

If this does not prove effective, the Housemen's and Bridgemen's union will order a national strike and tie up every building operation in the country.

Of Postoffice Robbers Arrested at Fargo, N. D.

Fargo, N. D.—June 26.—Postoffice Inspector Drake and the local police have arrested the supposed leaders of a gang of country postoffice robbers who have been working the state for several months. The men are Alex Bell and Andrew Hendel, alias Gray. The latter lived here last April and worked as a laborer. He was under suspicion and was arrested on minor charges, but evidences was lacking at the time and he was released. A letter from his wife was intercepted and Gray was arrested at Bottineau, where the postoffice was plundered some time ago.

SONS OF VETERANS

Think Legislature Was Hostile to Grand Army.

St. Paul, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The encampment of the Sons of Veterans was slimly attended today. Trouble arose over the report of the committees, which reviewed the doings of the state legislature. The Sons, after hearing this report, were of opinion that the lawmakers had been, in many important respects, decidedly hostile to the Grand Army of the Republic.

The encampment will formally close this evening with a camp fire at Central hall annex.

The auxiliary discussed questions of internal regulation.

THE REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT GROWING

Serious Uprising Seems Certain In Russia.

The Anti-Semitic Agitation Is Widespread.

St. Petersburg, June 24 (Wednesday).—The revolutionary movement in Russia seems to be spreading unceasingly and is reaching regions hitherto free from the radical agitation. Leaflets directed against the existing condition of Russian home affairs and demanding revolutionary changes were circulated broadcast during the month of May in thirty-four cities and towns of the empire. Serious street disturbances have occurred at various places, as already cabled, including Bakou, Warsaw, Berdichew, Tiflis, Batoum, Balakina and Tomsk. It is said that the anti-Semitic agitation at Eastertide extended throughout the entire pale of the Jewish settlements. The monarchial society organized at Plusk circulated leaflets beginning: "Brother workers, orthodox and catholic: Christ has arisen. Let us embrace, kiss and go and kill the Jews."

At Rostov, on the Don, it is said, an officer of gendarmerie has been going about the bazar telling the people that it is the Jews and Socialists who prevent their "little father," the czar, from giving all his children everything they need, and that, therefore, the Jews and Socialists must be killed off. Swarms of detectives at Rostov are trying to locate a Socialistic printing office.

A theater demonstration at Khenvo was recently suppressed by detectives, who scattered the audience and clubbed those who shouted "Down with the autocrats."

The multitude of arrests, in addition to domiciliary visitations, which have taken place among army officers, literary men, teachers, workingmen students and other classes at St. Petersburg, Kiev, Odessa, Virballen and in fact, in the city and towns throughout the empire, attest the colossal growth of the agitation. It is naturally strongest in the pale of the Jewish settlements, but it has reached such far-off places as Kostrom, on the River Volga, a region hitherto free any radical movements.

Dr. Dorosbeski, who was equally indefatigable in his attentions to the victims of the Kishineff massacre and in his fearless publication of the truth concerning the massacre, has been forced to resign his position in the Bessarabian provincial hospital at Kishineff.

The Southern Review declares the reason to be that he published facts which certain deputies wanted kept secret. A magistrate at Kishineff continues to hear and dispose of accusations of breach of the peace, the destruction of property, reserving the more serious charges for higher tribunals.

According to Kishineff correspondence, the emigration movement shows no sign of abatement. Almost every household is sending members to the United States, while there are a few going to Brazil, Argentina and South Africa.

Considerable excitement has been caused by the publication of a letter from Chicago which says that a certain company will soon commence selling steamship tickets to Russian Jews on time payment. The poorer jews of Kishineff fear this is too good to be true.

In the meantime the Kishineff relief committee is supplying food to 20,000 persons. Business shows no signs of reviving.

EMPEROR SAYS THE AMERICAN SKIPPERS BROUGHT HIM LUCK

If They Had Not Been With Him, William Says, His Yacht the Meteor Would Not Have Won American Cup.

Kiel, Prussia, June 27—When Emperor William was congratulated today, at the launching of the German cruiser Roon, on his yacht Meteor winning the American cup yesterday, he replied:

"The American skippers brought me luck. I would not have won if they had not been with me."

The Roon is the eleventh of Germany's armored cruisers. She was christened by Countess Von Waldersee.

Rear Admiral Cotton, the captains of the American warships and the members of the United State's embassy were in the emperor's party. The American squadron saluted the new cruiser. Emperor William and Prince Henry of Prussia took breakfast with Admiral Cotton on board the Kearsarge today. In the party also were the German admirals, Ambassador Tower, Chancellor Von Buelow, Admiral Von Tirpitz, imperial secretary of the navy; the principal members of the emperor's household, all the members of the United State's embassy, the American ambassador to Italy, all the captains and executive officers of the American warships, and Admiral Cotton's staff, Cornelius Vanderbilt, R. W. Goelet, J. H. Smith, James Lawrence and Edmund Baylies. Admiral Cotton thanked the emperor for the cordial manner in which the squadron had been received.

Admiral Cotton referred to the large-hearted hospitality that had made every hour of the Americans' presence in German waters pleasant. Since he had met the emperor he understood why his subjects were so devoted to him. The feeling of the admiral and his men was that wherever his majesty led, the Germans would follow. The admiral then proposed the health of the emperor.

Replying, Emperor William said he hoped, whatever impressions the admiral and his officers had received, they had been no more than they expected. Eight years had elapsed since the imperial ensign was first flown from an American warship, the New York. He remembered vividly the agreeable incident of that visit, and now he was to add these to the things that were not to be forgotten. The only hing was that the visits were too far apart. He was convinced that whenever the stars and stripes and the royal standard met, they would together symbolize peace and civilization. The emperor then called for three cheers for the president and people of the United States.

At the conclusion of the breakfast the emperor informed Ambassador Tower that he wished to give a medal to each of the three marines who had stood behind his chair.

"Would there be any impropriety, your excellency, in my doing so," asked the emperor.

"I am sorry to say that our regulations do not permit it," replied Mr. Tower.

"Then," said the emperor, "I would like to give them watches, just as souvenirs."

"That, sir," answered the ambassador, "is also impossible. They, equally with myself, are servants of the country, and could not accept."

"And I cannot even give them a pencil?" continued the emperor.

"No, your majesty," said Mr. Tower.

"Then," said the emperor, "tell them that I have the disposition to do so."

Admiral Cotton, after the emperor left the ship, told the three marines, in the presence of the officers of the ship, what the emperor had said.

The emperor has presented the Kearsarge with a silver punch bowl and cover, about sixteen inches high and more than two feet wide.

Four groups of small yachts, in a light air, started today on a race over a 15-mile course.

BALFOUR AND CHAMBERLAIN AGREE

London, June 27.—All the morning papers made Cloinial Secretary Chamberlain's and Premier Balfour's speeches, at the Constitutional club the subject of leading articles which flow party lines. The most noticeable feature of the occasion is acknowledged to have been the announced harmony between two cabinet ministers on the question which many expect will prove the rock on which the uninist party will remain divided.

The colonial secretary's careful statement, that Mr. Balfour's leadership is essential to union and the success of the Unionist party, followed later by the statement that a system of preferential tariffs is the only system by which the empire can be kept together, is taken to mean that there can no longer remain any doubt that the premier and the colonial secretary have agreed on the future policy. The opposition papers rejoice, asserting that the difference which is known to exist inside the cabinet ranks, coupled with the opposition of the working people in the country must bring defeat to the advocates of Mr. Chamberlain's policy when a general election takes place.

HAS TROUBLE GETTING INTO JAIL

New York, June 27.—William J. Smullen is having trouble about getting into jail. He was arrested on a charge of robbing the mails. When his case came up before Federal Judge Thomas his attorney told the court Smullen wished to plead guilty and begin serving sentence at once. The prisoner had been held in bail of $2500, which he had not been able to furnish. He had not been indicted, and the court will not reconvene until October. Judge Thomas said he could not sentence the prisoner until he had been indicted, but upon the assurance in writing from Smullen that he would appear when wanted he would order him released on his own recognizance.

PRECEDENT FOR IT

Officials Justified In Presenting Jewish Petition to Russia.

Will Not Quarrel If Czar Refuses to Receive It.

Washington, June 27.—The officials of the state department assert positively that a close examination of precedent justifies the presentation by the United States government of the Jewish petition to the Russian government, and that no government has a right to object to the presentation of such a petition, nor has the government a right to object if the presentation is declined. This means that the United States will not find ground to quarrel with Russia if the czar refuses to receive the petition now being prepared by the counsel of B'Nai B'Rith.

There were no developments today respecting the petition, save an announcement that it is the purpose of the framers to have it numerously signed by prominent Christians as well as Jews. It has been intimated that some changes were made in the text of the document, and it is said that in this case the president and Secretary Hay will closely scrutinize it to make sure that it contains no objectionable language.

DEPARTMENT TAKES A HAND

Labor Commission Insists on Prompt Settlement of Strike.

New York, June 27.—John McMackin, commissioner of the New York department of labor, acting in his capacity as chairman of the state bureau of mediation and arbitration, has addressed a communication to Otto Leidlitz, chairman of the board of governors of the Building Trades Employers' association and to the representatives of the organized employes in the building industry of this city, declaring that the serious complications arising out of the present tie-up of building operations in this city make it necessary for the department to renew its efforts to bring about a settlement of the controversy. The commissioner proposes he appointment of a committee of three, to be chosen by each of the organized trades and occupations affected, to meet a like number of representatives from each association of employers in the building industry, and decide upon some mutualy satisfactory plan that will in future tend to prevent a general cessation of work. The commissioner asks that the strike be declared off pending negotiations.

Chicago, June 27.—Conciliation and arbitration are to be used by the building contractors and their organized employes to bring to an end the constant jurisdictional strife that has been the bane of the industry.

Representatives of both employers and employes at a meeting last night, formed a joint board to take up and adjust all complaints. It will be given power to enforce its decisions, which are to be binding.

During the last two years, since the close of the Building Trades' council lockout, there have been constant factional disputes between the unions. Important building projects have been delayed and much money has been lost.

TALKED TO DEATH.

Deceased Wife's Sister Bill Killed Once More.

London, June 27.—The opponents in the house of commons of the deceased wife's sisters bill talked the measure to death yesterday for this session. The bill was eighth on the orders of the day, but owing to the tactics of Lord Hugh Cecil and others, it was not reached until too late to proceed further. This disposes of the bill again, but it may survive, appearing again next session as usual.

POOL ROOMS RAIDED.

Nearly Six Hundred Prisoners Captured By Officers.

New York, June 27.—Six alleged pool rooms in the "Tenderloin" district, including the Allen's have been raided and 592 prisoners captured, making the raid the biggest of the kind ever executed here. Allen's place was raided while the alleged proprietor was burying his wife. None of the inmates of any of the six places escaped. A lot of racing paraphernalia was confiscated.

THE AMERICA AT TROMSOE.

Tromsoe, Norway, June 27.—The polar ship America, with the Ziegler expedition on board, arrived here last night from Trondhjen, Norway. She is taking on board 200 dogs and five ponies, and will sail this afternoon for Archangel, and thence to the polar regions.

THE CANAL TREATY

Is Left to the Colombian Congress By the President.

Desires Personally That Canal Should Be Opened.

Washington, June 27.—The state department has received from Minister Beaupre, at Bogota, a cable conveying the information that an extra session of congress has been convened for the consideration of the canal treaty, June 20. Joachquin Velez is president of the senate and Jose Medina Calderon president of the chamber of representatives. The following appears in the message of the president respecting the convention:

"To my government has been presented this dilemma: Either it lets our sovereignty suffer detriment, or renounces certain pecuniary advantages tow hich, acording to the opinon of many, we have a right. In the first case, to consent to the sacrifice of our sovereignty, and not aspiring to a great indemnification, the just wishes of the inhabitants of Panama—a large portion of Colombia—would be satisfied if the canal were opened, but the government would be exposed to the charge afterwards that it did not defend our sovereignty, and that it did not defend the interests of the nation. In the second case, if the canal is not opened by Panama, the government will be accused for not having allowed Colombia that benefit which regarded as commencement of our aggrandizement. I have already allowed my wish to be understood that the canal should be opened through our territory. I believe that even at such cost of sacrifices we ought not to put obstacles to such a grand undertaking, because it is an immensely beneficial enterprise for the country, and also because, once the canal is opened by the United States, our relations will become more intimate and extensive, while our industry, commerce, and our wealth will gain incalculably. I leave the full responsibility for the decision of this matter—at first—for congress. I do not intend to make my opinion weigh when I have given instructions to our representative at Washington; it has been coupled with the order that the decision of this important matter must be left for congress. After years, in which the question has been treated in a vague way, without precise conditions, it is now presented in a way to obtain practical and positive results. It has been our indisputable triumph that the senate and the government of the United States should declare notwithstanding every effort to the contrary the superiority of the Colombian route."

BOSTON BROKERS FAIL.

Boston, June 27.—The failure of the firm of J. Francis Brown & Co., stock brokers of this city, was announced today.

PRICE OF STEEL BARS.

Pittsburg, June 27.—The associated manufacturers of steel bars, in session here, unanimously reaffirmed the present price of $1.60 per 100 pounds for Bessemer steel bars, f. o. b. Pittsburg. The manufacturers reported orders plentiful and trade conditions good.

SWEDEN WILL PARTICIPATE.

Stockholm, June 27.—Sweden today officially accepted the invitation to participate in the St. Louis exposition. Previously Sweden had twice declined, but through the efforts of Minister Thomas it is now definitely decided that she will be represented.

MANY FAMILIES WITHOUT SHELTER

El Paso, Texas, June 27.—The high waters of the Rio Grande north of here, in New Mexico, have driven hundreds of families from their homes and these have taken refuge in the foothills. Mrs. William McDonald, of Berino, N. M., who has come to El Paso, says:

"The high water has practically rendered homeless every resident from Mesquite and Earlham south to White Spur, N. M. All along the road in the sand hills families can be seen camping with on shelter. The heat of the sun in the hills is intolerable. Many alfalfa fields are ruined and many Mexican families are not only homeless, but are living on short rations."

At El Paso the river is falling slowly.

Democratic Nominee For Governor of Iowa.

BRITISH TROOPS MEET WITH AWFUL DISASTER

CORNER IS BROKEN

Shrewd Plans of the Silver Brokers Come to Naught.

United States to Turn Mexican Money Into Filipino Coin.

Washington, June 27.—The state department, through Judge Penfield, the solicitor, by an adroit move has broken what appeared to be a corner in the silver market. When the Mexican government recently deposited $1,423,000, Mexican money, in the National Bank of Mexico, subject to the draft of the United States in payment of the Pius award, the state department was confronted with the necessity of turning the money into United States cash and depositing it here. For some time silver brokers had been watching the negotiations and, when they were applied to, the department was informed that it would cost about $40,000, United States money, to convert the fund and transfer it as desired. This was regarded as an exorbitant charge, but no other or better bid was offered.

Finally Judge Penfield hit upon the plan of tuuning this Mexican silver into Filipino money. Director Roberts of the mint bureau, who has been buying bullion for the Philippine account, has been confronted with a corner in that commodity. He, therefore, readily accepted Judge Penfield's offer of a big lot of Mexican silver, and closed an agreement by which, at an expense of less than $4260, the amount of the Pius award can be placed in the hands of the Catholic church, the beneficiary of the award, and the seven tons of silver can be transferred to the United State's mints.

HERB DOCTOR GUILTY.

Jury Returns Verdict of Murder Against Hossey.

Philadelphia, June 27.—The trial of George P. Hossey, a Negro herb doctor, for the murder of William G. Danez, has resulted in a verdict of murderd in the first degree. Hossey was indicted with Mrs. Catherine Danez, who is charged with administering to her husband poison furnished by the "doctor." She is awaiting trial.

Mad Mullah Said to Have Destroyed Forts.

War Office Dispatches Contradict Report.

Paris, June 27.—A dispatch from Jibutil, Abyssinia, says the Mad Mullah has destroyed five British posts, between Burao and Boholle, in Somaliland.

Thirty-nine British officers out of forty-two white men were killed in the engagements. Two thousand native soldiers were made prisoners.

A dispatch from Aden, ten days ago, stated that the British lines of communication between Berbera and Boholle were then threatened by the rebellious Mullah and his forces. Reinforcements, comprising three companies of the Hampshire regiment, and 300 native soldiers, were ordered to proceed from Aden to Somaliland, June 20. About 14,000 native Abyssinians have been co-operating with the British forces in their efforts to check the Mullah.

The campaign of Brig. Gen. W. H. Manning, who was sent to Somaliland last November after the reverses suffered by Col. Swayne, having proved unsuccessful, he was ordered superseded, June 21, by Maj. Gen. C. C. Egerton, in command of the Punjaub frontier.

It was reported from Aden June 23 that Gen. Manning and Col. Cobbe, who, it was feared, had been cut off near Damol, had succeeded in joining their forces and had reached Boholle in safety.

Operations against the mullah already have cost the British government more than $2,000,000 and considerable loss of life.

London, June 27.—The war office has received a telegram from Somaliland enabling it to contradict the French report of a British disaster.

The last news of the Mad Mullah was that he was hovering eastward of the British forces, threatening the lines between Burao and Boholle, which were the only British means of communication with the coast. Gen. Manning was expected to reach Boholle June 26 with reinforcements.

The war office dispatch received today was sent by Gen. Manning from Boholle, June 26, and announced his arrival there unopposed. He captured a number of the Mullah's camels and sheep while on his way to Boholle. The general said the Mullah, with his fighting men, had crossed the British line of communication half way between Damol and Boholle. The Mullah's move was due to the British hold on the Mudgag district and the pressure of the Abyssinians, who are advancing from the south.

Gen. Manning added: "This flight of the Mullah would have been turned into a rout if it had been possible to send a column of sufficient strength from Boholle.

"The prisoners captured say that the tribesmen are disorganized."

FOUR BIG ELEVATORS ARE DESTROYED AT MILWAUKEE

Property to the Value of $300,000, Belonging to the American Malting Company, Burned at an Early Morning Hour.

Milwaukee, June 27.—Fire early today destroyed four big elevators owned by the American Malting company, located at the foot of South Water street, entailing a loss estimated at $300,000; fully insured.

The fire is supposed to have been caused by an explosion of dust in one of the elevators. The buildings destroyed are:

Malt house C, brick, yearly output 800,000 bushels malt; engine house and boiler room brick, three stories.

Elevator F, six stories, protected with sheet iron; capacity 250,000 bushels.

Malt house A, brick; output 700,000 bushels.

Elevator E badly damaged by water, but the efforts of the firemen saved it from destruction.

J. M. Riebs, local manager of the American Malting company, made the following statement: "The loss to the entire plant and contents will be about $300,000. Of this, about $200,000 is on the grain and malt in the elevators and malt houses, and a little over $100,000 on the buildings. The loss may be above that figure. I estimate that about 400,000 bushels of grain and malt have been destroyed. I cannot say just how much of each. The entire plant and contents are fully insured. I am quite sure the company will decide to rebuild at once. The buildings destroyed contained seventy-one pneumatic drums, in which all the malt and grain is stored."

Fire which broke out at 9:30 o'clock last night gutted the building at 313-317 Grand avenue, occupied by McCarthy, a tailor, and which extends in aon "L" shape to Third street, the Third street section being occupied by Work Bros., a Chicago clothing company. The fire afterwards extended to the Davidson hotel on Third street and to the Boston store on Grand avenue. The total loss is estimated at about $250,000, partially covered by insurance.

FATAL COLLISION OF TWO TRAINS AT DES MOINES, IA.

Des Moines, June 27.—Two men are dead and five seriously injured as the result of a head-on collision that occurred in the yards of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad here early today between an accommodation train and a freight train drawn by two engines.

The dead:

JOHN ERICKSON, Des Moines.

JAMES HOWARD, brakeman, Des Moines.

Injured: J. W. Merning, engineer; Fred Selsor, fireman; M. J. Phaynite, conductor; C. W. Robinson, fireman; F. W. Beln, brakeman.

No passengers hurt.

The wreck was caused by the outbound train pulling out without orders, under the impression that the freight train had pulled in. Both trains were traveling at a high rate of speed.

Roanoke, Va., June 27.—A Norfolk & Western passenger train was wrecked near Marion last night. Engineer Lee Spalding, of Roanoke, and Fireman J. H. Hoover, of Staunton, were killed and Express Messengers Otey and Wood, of Bristol, seriously and Mail Clerks Adams and Jenkins, of Lynchburg, slightly injured. The wreck was caused by a cow on the track.

ESTRANGED HUSBAND SHOOTS WIFE

New York, June 27.—After a desperate struggle with Lulu Miller, his stepdaughter in "The Hermitage," one of the finest residences in Wallington, N. J., William Dessler has shot and dangerously wounded his wife and then shot himself in the heart, causing instant death. He had been estranged from his wife for more than a year, and went back, it is said, to seek a reconciliation. Dessler, after leaving his wife, opened a saloon at Guttenburg. His venture was a failure. When he returned to his wife's house, the stepdaughter answered his ring at the door. Dessler pushed inside and rushed to his wife's apartments. Firing two shots at his wife, Dessler then turned the pistol on himself, after having overturned all the furniture in a desperate struggle with the girl, who had followed him up stairs and attempted to secure possession of the revolver.

MAINE SALOONKEEPERS TO QUIT

Bongor, Me., June 27.—In accordance with the warning of the supreme court last February that jail sentences would be imposed upon all persons convicted at future terms of violation of the liquor law, the druggists of Bangor have announced that they will be unable on and after July 1 to furnish their customers with any liquor, even upon physician's prescriptions. Many of the saloon keepers will go out of business.

COUNTRYMAN HONORED.

Duncan Macdonald Entertained By Scottish Friends.

Duncan Macdonald, of Hong Kong, chief engineer of the China Transportation company, who is visiting his brother Edward Macdonald, of 519 Eighth avenue east, was the guest of honor at a very pleasant surprise party last evening, given by some forty of the Scottish families in this city. It was a very enjoyable affair throughout, the evening being given up to singing and dancing, music from bagpipes and violins, followed by refreshments. The house was very prettily decorated for the event.

Mr. Macdonald will leave Monday for New York, where he will spend a few days before setting sail for Scotland, where he will look after the new steamship building for his company, and visit his little daughter, whom he has not seen for some years.

DOLLITA, THE LIVING DOLL.

Beautiful Little Lady Delights All Who See Her.

Everywhere she goes, Dollita, "the living doll," is the mascot of the midway and well she deserves to be. She is a tiny little lady, beautiful, refined, talented, accomplished and intelligent, the diminutive marvel and social sensation of every city in which she has held her elite receptions. She has the beauty, grace, modesty and accomplishments of a full sized society lady condensed as it were into one small body. Nothing like Dollita has ever been seen before. She is without question the most marvelous woman on earth and yet stands only twenty-six inches in height and weighs less than twenty pounds.

Midgets, as a rule, are ugly, dull and weakminded. Dollita is beautiful, bright and accomplished. She converses in Spanish, French, Italian, German and English and plays the piano and mandolin, paints sketches, sings and dances and does all else that a society young lady is expected to do. The best evidence of her intelligence is the fact that she draws and signs all her own contracts, keeps a set of books of her own business accounts, answers in person her voluminous correspondence, designs and superintends the making of her magnificent wardrobe and otherwise acts as her own manager in the conduct of her personal and professional affairs. Her receptions are given in daintily appointed parlors and among those who visit her are the elite of the land. She has delighted the late President McKinley, the late Queen Victoria, the emperor of Germany, the president of France, the czar of Russia and the charming Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. She wears diamonds and jeweled decorations valued at over $50,000 and rides in her own diminutive automobile. Her manner of presenting herself before the public and her regal surroundings suggest a court reception of European royalty, or more properly speaking, perhaps of the acknowledged queen of lilliputians.

She will be here with the Ferari Bros.' carnival aggregation, which will exhibit in conjunction with the Duluth July fair and carnival July 6 to July 11.

LEASE IS MADE.

Quodenaw Company Gets Coal Land on Agreed Royalty.

Now that the mooted question of state royalties on coal has been settled, the Quodenaw Development company, of Duluth, has been granted a 50-year lease on a section of state land in Aitkin county, for the purpose of mining coal. Pursuant to the terms of the settlement recently made by a board of referees, the state will receive a royalty of 7½ cents a ton on all coal mined. The land is said to be rich in coal deposits. No coal has ever been mined in Minnesota before.

There is no law on the statute books relative to coal mining on state lands, and when the lease was applied for the state authorities did not know whether to demand the same royalty on coal as the state gets on iron ore, so the matter was left to board of referees, consisting of Alfred Merritt, of Duluth; George B. Edgerton, of St. Paul, and F. A. Hodge, of Pine City.

State Auditor Iverson wanted 15 cents a ton, but the commission decided that this was excessive.

Buys the Property.

A dispatch from Fort William says that Graham and Horne and McKellar Bros., of that city, have sold out their mining properties on the Atikokan iron range to the Atikokan Mining company for $160,000.

R. M. Hunter, of Duluth, representing the mining company, is said to have closed the deal with the owners. The mining locations are about 140 miles west of Fort William. During the past two years considerable exploratory work has been done. Considerable time must elapse before anything definite can be done in the way of developing or shipping, as it is a new territory and there is a 40 per cent duty on iron ore.

Business University Happenings.

SAYS HE IS NOT A CANDIDATE

Joel P. Heatwole Disclaims Any Designs on the Governorship.

Ex-Congressman Joel P. Heatwole says that the report that he is a candidate for governor is a mistake. And he ought to know.

Furthermore, he says that he is not in the northern part of the state on a political mission, but merely on such a prosaic errand as a combined business and pleasure trip.

He arrived in the city at 7 o'clock last night from Cass Lake and stopped at the Spalding. He is accompanied by Mrs. Heatwole and their niece, Miss Louise Heatwole, of Goshen, Ind., who arrived from the Twin Cities about the same time that he came in from Cass Lake. They will remain here for a day or two visiting friends.

"I am simply here on a combined business and pleasure trip," said Mr. Heatwole, in response to an inquiry. "I am not a candidate for governor, and I am not here on a political mission. I have not the least idea of becoming a candidate for governor, nor do I know of anybody who has definitely announced himself as a candidate. Several people have been mentioned in this connection, but I assume that it was done by their friends.

"Had I wished to remain in active political life I should have sought a renomination for congress, as I should like that office more than that of governor. I shall continue to take a lively interest in politics, but I am seeking no official position."

Mr. Heatwole was editor of the Lake Superior News, owned by W. S. Woodbridge, about eighteen or twenty years ago. At that time Duluth newspapers were more primitive than they are now, and he had not only to conduct his duties as editor, but he had to get into the work rooms and set type sometimes, as well as to perform other similar duties about the print shop. Neither was he adverse to writing a local item if the need arose.

RESCUE OF WOMEN

Miss Shannon of Bethel Home Talks to Missionary Society.

The Y. W. C. A. Work Is Presented By Miss Kemper.

At the afternoon session of the third annual convention of the Duluth district of the Woman's Home Missionary society at the First M. E. church yesterday a number of interesting talks were given of the work done in Duluth.

The afternoon opened with a devotional half hour, led by Miss Mahon, and two informal discussions on "How to Make the Auxiliary Grow" and "The Duty of a Mother to the Neglected Children of Her Neighborhood."

Following this, Miss Shannon spoke of rescue work. Miss Shannon is connected with the Bethel Rescue home, and her talk was given in a way that presented the hardships and trials of the girls who come to the home. She said in part:

"Society has chosen one sin from among all others to effectually condemn the woman who commits it, and the man who was a partner in her guilt is let go almost blameless. But in the sight of God I believe there is no such distinction in the workers of crime. Too often the girl who has gone wrong is condemned without thought, and the struggles and trials she has worried through before giving in to sin are not considered, and she is put down as bad. In the cases of many of the girls who come to the home, the poor and ignorant home training, or none at all, are the cause of the misery that follows.

"Then, too, a girl may inherit a moral weakness that she is no more responsible for than she is for the color of her eyes. She is sent out into the world at an early age to make a living for herself, and often comes to the cities with a false promise of employment, and lured into a life from which there seems no escape but death, for all doors are closed against her, even when she is looking and searching and even begging for honest work. From our sheltered homes it is impossible to realize the temptations and pitfalls that are laid for these girls, and the ignorance in which they are reared and the lack of love in their lives is a condition that those who judge can not realize.

"One case that has come to our notice lately would, if read, be considered a piece of fiction. The depravity of the man who posed as the girl's foster father is almost unbelievable, and our efforts to bring him to justice are futile because of the laws of our state. One of the leading lawyers of the bar of the lakes whom we consulted said that in this particular the laws of Minnesota are fifty years behind the times."

Miss Kemper, secretary of the Y. W. C. A., spoke of the work of the Young Women's Christian association in Duluth. She said:

"When the idea of Young Women's Christian association work was first advanced, a convention was called and a breezy Western college girl, in speaking of the work, said that it takes a girl to win the heart of a girl, and the statement caused quite a commotion, for was always thought that it took a young man. But the idea is the one upon which the Y. W. C. A works—to win the girl to an idea that she has friends who care for her.

"Our method of attracting girls to the work is by making the branches of the work almost indispensable to them. We begin by making the rooms bright and attractive and making them feel that they are theirs. The idea striven for has been displayed by the girls themselves by coming to the rooms and exclaiming: 'Oh, we've got a new chair,' or speaking of other improvements or changes in the rooms in a personal way. We endeavor to make the rooms home like and bring the girls to them.

"Our rooms are open in the evening until 9:30. This is not intended for the girls who have homes in the city, but for the large number who are here working away from home. Of this class there are, perhaps, 1700 in Duluth, and in the evening our rooms are an attractive place for them. In our lunch room we feel that we have given the girls something they needed and appreciate and in the gymnasium classes, the Bible classes and in the many ways that seem to open the Y. W. C. A. strives to help them."

Miss Corbin followed with an interesting and enthusiastic talk of the fresh air work in the large cities or the smaller ones, anywhere, in fact, where there are children to help, which is most everywhere.

Mrs. Asher and Mrs. W. C. Winton sang and the meeting closed with enthusiasm over home and foreign missions.

In the list of officers elected yesterday, The Herald gave the recording secretary as Mrs. F. D. Rockwell. It should have read Mrs. A. F. Rockwell.

ROUTE OF THE PARADE

Line to Be Followed Monday By Forepaugh-Sells Show.

Owing to the great magnitude of the great Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' enormous shows united it was found impossible to locate on the old show grounds and they have engaged the spacious grounds at the Driving park, where they will pitch their tents and give two performances on Monday.

Unlike most shows this organization does not spend fabulous sums of money on the street parade. While it is a magnificent spectacle with expensive carved caravans and cages, the great novelty is at the end of the procession. A hay wagon with a farmer, his wife and boy come to town to see the sights. In the hay wagon is a spring and during the parade at intervals they do arcobatic stunts that are not only amusing, but difficult.

The parade will leave the driving park at ten o'clock on Monday morning and pass over the following route: East on West Third street to Twenty-fifth avenue, on Twenty-fifth avenue to Superior street, east on Superior street to Fifth avenue West, up Fifth avenue West to First street, east on First street to Third avenue East, down Third avenue East to Superior street and West on Superior street to the exhibition grounds.

The parade as well as the performances will be given rain or shine. The management this year has a new preparation that makes its tents waterproof and rainproof, thus insuring their patrons comfort in any kind of weather.

The doors open at one and seven p. m., and the performances commence one hour later.

Those who count on seeing the arrival of the circus and the very interesting sight of the erection of the tents and paraphenalia connected with the giving of the performance, tomorrow, will be disappointed. Ordinarily when a circus shows here on Monday the works proceeds leisurely through Sunday instead of with that rush and hustle which is necessary when it arrives on the day of the performance and the public is treated to a better insight into the workings of the great organiation than usual. The Forepaugh-Sells show is, however, coming here from Calumet, Mich., 288 miles at one jump, and will not arrive until after midnight tomorrow night. Some time tomorrow the trains will be stopped in a favorable location, the horse tents pitched, the kitchen erected, and the wants of the animal and human sections of the great exhibit administered to in proper style.

PEOPLE ARE SELECTED.

The Metropolitan Stock Company Is Formed.

John T. Condon, manager of the Metropolitan theater, arrived from Chicago yesterday with contracts in his pocket with thirteen stock actors, who will be here in a day or two to open a stock season.

Big secured for his leading lady Miss Annette Marshall, who has been engaged in stock work, and as announced in The Herald some time ago, Gus Forbes will be the leading man. Miss Isabelle Fletcher, who it had been expected could be secured, will not be a member of the company at the start, at least.

Mr. Condon also engaged two scenic artists, who will be here the early part of the week and will remain with the company building scenery for the productions to be made each week.

The company, he announces, will be here Monday, and rehearsals will begin at once. The company will probably open at the house on the week of July 6, possibly earlier, the date not having been definitely announced as yet by the management of the Metropolitan.

Mr. Condon believes he has a company of merit, and has picked the people from companies which are in good standing and doing lots of business.

COMES TO DULUTH.

Jones & Adams Coal Company to Open Here.

Ben Finch, who for many years has been identified with the coal business at the head of the lakes, has been appointed the city agent in Duluth for the Jones & Adams Coal company, and will assume his new duties July 1.

Mr. Finch was formerly the superintendent at Superior for the Lehigh Coal and Coke company, and about three years ago left that position to go into business for himself, under the title of the Finch Fuel company.

He has conducted that business until the present time. It is said he will not drop his interests in that business, although he will retire from active work in the retail organization.

The Jones & Adams company has leased the Sargent dock in this city and will handle coal on this side of the bay for business in Minnesota, especially to the range towns and mines. The first boatload of coal consigned to the Jones & Adams company at the Sargent dock arrived here last Tuesday, and others have come in since.

The company will land a large amount of coal on this side this year, the first branching out the company has made into Minnesota. The company is the largest independent coal company at the head of the lakes.

RECEIVER NAMED

Judge Dibell Appoints Henry S. Ely For Forbes Brothers.

Impossible to Obtain Personal Service on Robert Forbes.

Another interesting chapter in the Forbes Bros. controversy in district court developed this morning.

Unable to reach Robert Forbes and his wife for the service of summons, Alexander Forbes secured from the court the appointment of a receiver for the affairs of the firm without the service of a personal notice and Henry S. Ely has been named as that receiver.

This morning Judge Dibell issue the order appointing Mr. Ely receiver to have and keep full charge of the papers, books and all property of whatever nature belonging to the co-partnership until the further order of the court. The receiver's bond is fixed at $5,000.

The court has also issued an injunctional order restraining the defendants from transferring, selling or disposing of in any way the effects of the firm, being represented in the plaintiffs application for the order that the defendant, Robert Forbes, has threatened to destroy or remove from the state evidences of the co-partnership alleged to exist between them.

The court holds that the exigencies of the situation warrant the appointment of a receiver and the issuance of the injunctional order, but holds that the defendants are not deprived of their legal rights to apply to the court for relief against the appointment or for its modification or vacation in part or in the whole.

In the order for the appointment of the receiver the court points out that application has been made for it by the plaintiff, and that it appears to the court by reason of pleadings, affidavits and other files, that there was a co-partnership existing between Alexander and Robert Forbes; that about the time proceedings supplementary to execution were pending against Robert Forbes the books of partnership were so changed as to cause it to appear that Emma Forbes was a co-partner instead of Robert Forbes; that the defendants have converted to their own use large sums of money and property belonging to the co-partnership with the intention of defrauding the plaintiff.

The court also comments on the fact that an order to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed was vacated June 25, because of a defect in the service, that another order of similar nature was issued immediately and was made returnable today, but that the sheriff was unable to make service because the defendants knowing of the order have purposely secreted themselves to avoid the service and to prevent a hearing on the application for a receiver.

The officers of the company are: W. H. Cook, President; M. L. Fay, Vice-President; J. F. Walsh, Secretary and C. W. Ericson, Treasurer.

The company controls two large mining properties. The Buena Vester Group, adjoining the Greene Consolidated Mines, and the Fortuna Group, consisting of several old Mexican mines, from which large amounts of rich ores has been shipped when it was packed for 100 miles on mules' backs. There are large bodies of rich ore in sight now and with a small amount of work shipment to the smelter can be made of ores yielding gold, silver and copper, of a value of over $60 per ton.

We do not have to find the ore, we have it, all there is to do is to prepare the mines for large operations.

THE CALUMET & SONORA is strictly a development company, and with the expenditure of its capital the mines will be fully paid for and sufficiently developed to enter the list of producers, when mining companies will be organized and the properties turned over to it free of debt with large values in ore blocked out, and the stock of the development company owns all the stock of the mining companies, exclusive of treasury stock to be reserved, and each share of development stock will receive its proportional share in the stock of each mining company according to the capitalization of the same, thus making it strictly a ground floor proposition to the stockholders of the development company.

The board of directors have authorized the sale of 5000 shares at the par value of ten dollars each to be paid for at par. Subscriptions will be opened at, and prospectus can be had by calling at 610-611 National Bank Bldg., Duluth.

Work will be started during July and pushed with all possible vigor to success.

DRYEST ON RECORD

Present Month Has Thus Far Broken All June Precedents.

In 1900, Year of Drouth, Rainfall Was One-Third More.

The present month has been the dryest June in the history of the local weather bureau, the records of which extend over a period of thirty-three years.

The total precipitation of the month thus far is less than one inch, being exactly .64 inch. This is nearly four inches less than the normal rainfall for June, which is 4.59 inches. The lowest precipitation hitherto recorded for June was in 1900, when 1.05 inches of rain fell.

There have been up to the present time 14 clear days in the month, which is considerably over the average. There were only eight days on which rain fell, the remaining seven days being partly cloudy, although no rainfall was recorded.

There have been but two or three days which were excessively warm, the thermometer registering moderate temperatures for the greater part of the time.

"The high percentage of clear days is not out of the ordinary," said Mr. Richardson, the local forecast official, "and this fact makes the very low precipitation more remarkable. Rain fell on eight different days, and yet the total amount was only .64 inch. Unless we have very heavy rainfalls in the remaining three days of the month, the record for dry months will be easily broken."

THE DAVIES CONCERT

Brilliant Success Looked For at the Lyceum Sunday.

All of the artists who will take part in the Alfred Davies concert at the Lyceum tomorrow afternoon arrived in the city yesterday. It promises to be a great success, the sale of seats already assuring a fine audience and the artistic excellence of the program admitting of no doubt. To Duluthians the concert is of perhaps more interest than any local musicale for a long time. Three of the singers of the city have been engaged for the companies which Mr. Davies will send out beginning September 1 and they will be heard tomorrow afternoon. These are Mrs. James McAuliffe, Miss Elizabeth Kendall Bailey and Miss Antoinette West. That they will justify the high estimate which Mr. Davies has placed upon their abilities, their friends in Duluth are confident. For them it promises to open up a lucrative and desirable field for the exploitation of their talents.

Assisting the seven artists of Mr. Davies' bureau, will be George L. Tyler, the well known tenor of this city, and George Lyding, the fine tenor who has taken a high place in the approval of Duluth musicians by his brilliant and conscientious work.

The "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" will be sung with a full chorus of tenors, baritones, bassos and the ladies of the company, together with a vocallon organ and grand piano and it will be a magnificent interpretation.

A LABORED ATTEMPT

Asphalt Company Striving Vainly to Bolster Its Waning Hold.

Laughable Attempt to Find Endorsement In Present Paving.

Loud and violent fits of laughter echoed through the city hall this morning on account of the absurdity and palpable misrepresentation of facts contained in the News Tribune's brazen defense of asphalt.

Property owners did not see the joke, and some imagined that the article emanated from city officers. Many called up with indignation, and said they would rather see Superior street paved with custard pie.

However, there is not the slightest chance of asphalt being seriously considered, and the fight seems to be entirely between bituminous macadam and vitrified brick.

The morning paper says that the Barber Asphalt company's bid of $2.06 a square yard yesterday is a lower figure than the same company has made in St. Paul. This is not so, and the representatives of the asphalt company know it. The Barber company bid as low as $1.55 on a St. Paul contract, awarded Jan. 6, 1903, and have gone even lower than that. The contract referred to was for the paving of Ninth street, between Jackson and Smith avenues.

What is more, the bid of $2.06 is not reasonable. It is exorbitant, and instead of being a reduction from the hold-up contract between Eighth and Sixteenth avenues, the prices are almost identical. The contract bid of yesterday merely called for a three-inch concrete foundation, there being three inches of good concrete foundation now down between Third and Eighth avenues east. Had the full six-inch foundation been required, it would have increased the asphalt company's bid about 35 cents per square yard, so that if there is any comparison to be made between the two contracts it must be made on the strength of a six-inch foundation, such as was put in east of Eighth avenue. The bids would then be $2.41 per square yard, and $2.46 in favor of the contract for which bids were opened yesterday.

Another misrepresentation contained in the morning paper's defense of asphalt was in regard to the guaranty. It was asserted that the bids were on a basis of a ten-year guarantee for asphalt and a five-year guaranty for bituminous macadam. The bids were submitted on the basis of a ten-year guaranty for bituminous macadam and asphalt and five-year guaranties for sandstone and brick.

The bids showed that the improvement with vitrified brick can be made for $4915 less than asphalt, and with bituminous macadam it can be made with a $7485 saving under the asphalt figures.

Strong arguments are being made in favor of having the vitrified brick bid accepted. The price is considered reasonable and it would simply mean an extension of the paving now down through the business district out to Eighth avenue east.

The asphalt trust seems to fear bituminous macadam most and is trying to work up a sentiment against having that bid accepted on the ground that it would make Superior street look like a crazy quilt to have a different kind of paving every few blocks. Of course the asphalt trust feels a certain pride in Duluth's aesthetic conditions.

City Engineer Patton, who is entirely disinterested, says that bituminous macadam on a level street would re just as smooth as asphalt, it having been purposely made with a rough surface on First avenue west and on Nineteenth avenue east on account of the steep grades. On level streets the surface is made smooth.

The general opinion about the city hall is that the article which appeared this morning and caused so much amusement, was written by a representative of the Barber Asphalt company, for the reason that the writer showed a very poor knowledge of Duluth avenues saying: "The Barber company has just gained a foothold in the city by laying the pavement on Superior street between Sixteenth and Twenty-third avenues east."

The improvement between the two avenues mentioned is not now even underway, nor will it be before next year. The Barber company, however, has had a contract to lay eight blocks of paving between Eighth and Sixteenth avenues. It has had this contract nearly one year and has succeeded in laying less than one block of paving in that time, but will get the remainder down eventually if the people of the East End will keep their horses off so as not to spoil the surface.

FORBES IS ON HAND

Admission to Office Is Denied the Receiver, Henry S. Ely.

Dr. A. A. Forbes Claims That Papers Are Being Taken Away.

There were sensational developments in the Forbes case this afternoon.

Robert Forbes, the mining promoter, from whom Dr. A. A. Forbes asks an accounting for $60,000, has taken possession of the firm's suite of offices, in the Manhattan building, and refuses admission to Henry S. Ely, who was appointed receiver of the firm by Judge Dibell this morning.

Behind the barred doors there is a mysterious clicking of typewriters and rustling of papers. A force of Robert Forbes' friends is said to be on the inside, and Dr. Forbes claims they are making away with valuable papers, so that when the receiver appointed by the courts finally does get possession of the office, there will be nothing left of any value to him, who is urging the accounting.

Dr. A. A. Forbes is on guard in the corridor outside to ascertain the names of persons taking papers out of the office and if possible to trace those that seek to carry property away.

Shortly before 2 o'clock it is said that two of those inside were quietly let out of the office and dashed away to an upper floor of the Manhattan building, each carrying a bundle of papers. Dr. Forbes secured their descriptions and it is claimed that these will be made co-defendants with Robert Forbes in contempt of court proceedings.

Yesterday, when receivership proceedings were started and papers placed in the hands of deputy sheriffs to be served on Robert Forbes, the mining promoter was not to be found. Every effort was made to locate him, but without avail.

As all being unable to find him, Judge Dibell this morning appointed Henry S. Ely receiver for the firm, making the appointment in such manner that it was not necessary to have notice served on Robert Forbes.

Mr. Forbes appeared at his old office on the third floor of the Manhattan building before the newly appointed receiver could reach it, however.

When the receiver demanded possession of the office he was refused ven admission to the outer apartment. There was a hurried consultation in the hallway outside and then the legal advisers of A. A. Forbes started preparations to have those inside ejected by force if necessary.

The vault in the offices has been in charge of the sheriff's office for several days and it was thought that by simply changing the combination, the contesting parties would be prevented from disturbing the papers in it. However, it seems that at a late hour this afternoon entrance to the vault was obtained.

A reporter seeking admission to the office was treated with just a little more courtesy than the receiver, but even at that did not get a peep in the doorway. All that could be heard was a soft voice whispering that they were very busy inside and callers were not welcome.

A man familiar with the situation said: "I do not know how they did it, but I am certain that those in the office have opened the vault and are taking out the papers that are so badly wanted. It is my opinion that when the receiver does get possession he will find an empty vault."

What She Learned at the Old Home.

After being away from the old home for years folks sometimes go back and find some surprising changes. An Ohio lady says: "I learned something valuable about coffee when I went home. I had been sick all the time with heart trouble and headaches and used a great deal of medicine without getting better. One time I went to my old home on a visit and there found my father and mother using Postum Food Coffee and both feeling so fine and well.

"They both begged me to try Postum and I finally did so to please them and to my great surprise I began to improve immediately. After using Postum in place of coffee for a short time the heart trouble stopped entirely and did not return except when I tried some coffee while on a visit to a friend's house. Now we use Postum exclusively in our family and husband and the children enjoy the fine drink as much as I do and we are well.

"There is a lady living near us who had been sick for years, doctoring all the time and not getting any better. We sold her a package of our Postum and now they use it all the time and she is better than for years before and says Postum did it all. Her name is——.

"I enclose the names of my father and mother, who are fine examples of the advantages of using Postum in the place of coffee." All the above names given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A Well-Known Journalist Writes.

Hon. George Baber, 1122 Sixteenth street, N. W., Washington, D. C., has been for a number of years well known in Kentucky as a journalist, having been the editor of the Bowling Green Democrat, and afterwards the proprietor and editor of the Louisville Evening News, and of the Kentucky Law Journal. He writes the following:

"I have given Peruna a sufficient test to justify me in freely recommending it as an invigorating tonic. It is a prompt appetizer, and has also proved in my own experience to be conducive to sound and restful sleep. A member of my family found it efficacious in the treatment of catarrhal tendencies, and an effective remedy for an annoying cough. Every household should be provided with it."—George Baber.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true today of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low station, that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men of all classes and stations are equally represented.

Large Number Arrive on Excursion Over Great Northern Road.

Come From Best Section of State—Plans For Their Care.

Fifteen hundred excursionists from the best farming country in the state came in over the Great Northern road this afternoon, the farthest distance covered by the excursion being Evansville.

Word was received here shortly before noon that the excursion was to be a very big one, owing to the weather, which this morning was perfect.

Northern Passenger Agent Kitchell was around this morning at hotels and other places making arrangements for the accommodation of all the guests of the road when they arrived here, and he said that he had practically made arrangements whereby the whole crowd would be taken care of easily, providing the visitors desired to secure the accommodations at reasonable rates.

At the time of the last excursions, a week ago, there were reported later many cases of steep prices charged at private houses for roomers, and many of the visitors when they were soaked $2 and $3 for a night's lodging at a private house preferred to stay around the streets or sleep in the depot.

It is expected that there will be a systematic use made of the bureau and all sources of information today for the benefit of the visitors, and they will be made to remember Duluth with pleasure.

The crowd upon its arrival spread about over town and started out to see the sights. The excursion train will leave for home tomorrow evening.

GOING INTO ORE TRADE

The lumber shipments have fallen off heavily, with the result that scores of small barges have taken to the ore trade, and are receiving charters of anything up to 1200 tons for Lake Erie delivery.

The fact that so many of these boats are taking loads of ore is a positive indication of the falling off of the lumber shipments.

Capt. Henry A. Hawgood, of Cleveland, who arrived this morning from Upper Michigan, he having left his family, coming later on one of the boats, says that he saw any number of the barges loaded down to the limit, puffing along down the lake.

Mr. Hawgood is up to look over some of his vessel interests, and to see about a boat he has building at the Superior shipyards. He says that it was to have been launched about Sept. 1, but owing to strikes and some difficulties encountered at the shipyards he hardly expects to receive the steamer for this year's work.

The reason for shortage of lumber shipments at this time is not easily obtainable. The Alger-Smith company at itstwo mills is sawing 700,000 feet of lumber a day, working twenty-four hours, or near that, each day.

The other mills are running heavily, and the winter cut of some of the firms is nearly disposed of.

L. M. Richardson, of the firm of Avery & Richardson, will leave for home next week, the cut for his winter output being about finished. It will practically be finished about the end of next week.

There have apparently been few sales of lumber, comparatively, in the past few weeks, and the delivery is being held back for better prices.

A MATERIAL REDUCTION

In Merchandise Tariffs Shown By Duluth & Iron Range.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Duluth & Iron Range Railroad company have filed with the Minnesota railroad commission the new merchandise tariffs, making new rates in conformity with the order of the commission issued June 8.

It is expected that the Duluth, Missabe & Northern will file similar tariffs within a short time. The railroad commission recently investigated the merchandise rates in effect to points on the iron range and discovered that they were excessive.

The iron range roads have in several instances gone even further than the order of the commission required, and have voluntarily reduced rates on certain commodities, and have reduced the minimum weights. This was notably so in the case of pressed brick, cut building stone, etc. The minimums were reduced to 30,000 pounds from 40,000 and the minimums on milling and mining machinery were reduced to 20,000 pounds from 24,000 pounds. The rates were also reduced.

The reduction in merchandise rates of all classes were material. For instance, the new rates between Duluth and Cloquet are 22 cents, 18 cents, 22 cents, 17 cents and 17 cents for the first five classes and 15 cents, 13 cents, 10 cents, 9 cents and 7 cents for the five commodity classes. The old rates for the ten classes were 35, 31, 28, 22, 17 and 17, 15, 12, 10 and 8 cents respectively.

The new rates between Ely and Duluth on the ten classes and commodity rates are to be 37, 40, 41, 24, 24, and 19, 16, 14, 14 and 9 cents, a reduction in some instances of 4 cents per hundred pounds.

Schools Get More State Aid Than Common This Year.

Under New Law All of Them Benefit Quite Largely.

The common schools of St. Louis county are faring pretty well so far this year in the matter of state aid. The amount of aid extended those legally qualified to receive it is higher this year than last by amounts ranging from $25 to $650. The amount of state aid received ranges from $25 to $1650 per school.

Under the new law the amount of state aid that a common school receives at the present time depends largely on the qualifications of the teacher, where as under the old law it depended more on the attendance and less on the teacher's qualifications. The present law has resulted in a material raising of the standard of the class of teachers in the country schools and will continue to do so. Every common school in the county could receive state aid if it had the properly certificated teacher. So far as possible that grade of teacher is being supplied, but the demand in this county is greater than the supply, although the tendency has been to cause the common school teachers to work harder for a higher grade certificate for the reason that wages for the better class of teachers is being increased in proportion to the amount of state aid that the school can receive by employing such teacher.

A. T. Park, county superintendent of schools, has just completed his July report for the common school districts of the county that are receiving state aid. The report, which will be forwarded to the state superintendent of public instruction for Minnesota, is summarized as follows:

BECKHAM ANGRY

Governor of Kentucky Vigorously Assails His Foes.

Frankfort, Ky., June 27.—Governor Beckham has given out the following statement in reference to his position in the Breathitt county matter:

"A great many letters have come to me in the last few weeks urging me to use radical measures in dealing with the unfortunate trouble in Breathitt county; to declare martial law and to have trials of the accused by court-martial; to remove judges and other officials, and in fact to do most anything for which there is absolutely no warrant of law to do on the part of the executive.

A number of newspapers in the state have come out in heavy editorials and said 'it was up to the governor to do something' to put a stop to this lawlessness and crime. I have been left in the dark by those sagacious critics who have not swerved me in the least from the pathway of what I have conceived to be my duty.

"I care not one particle for the pharasaical censure of those yellow journals of the North and East, whose mercenary greed for a saleable romance and whose partisan hatred of a Southern neighbor make them define and misrepresent the great and good people of all Kentucky, because one county out of 119 within the state has recently been the scene of certain crimes and violations of the law.

"These outside critics, when they succeed in eradicating crime, or at least reducing it in their own states, we may give a respectful hearing in their efforts to tell us how to purify Kentucky. The Breathitt county trouble is altogether local, and the effort to bring down odium on the entire state because of it is due solely to sectional hate or political agency.

"It is with critics in our own state that I propose to deal. The people of the whole state have been indignantly and justly aroused over the crimes recently committed in that county and in their impulsive resentment against the guilty have been a little impatient for results. Their feeling about the situation is to be commended, for it shows the character of our noble and law-abiding people. They have demanded prompt and vigorous action in dealing with the trouble. It may seem surprising to those not familiar with our constitution, but it is a fact, that all the demand made on me for action is that I shall declare martial law there and have all cases tried by court-martial. I would pay no attention to it except that it comes in many instances from people and newspapers of intelligence, who are not seeking to make political capital out of the matter, but want to see justice done and in their impatience have forgotten that the governor of Kentucky has absolutely no such right, and if he should attempt to use such arbitrary power he would be and ought to be impeached.

"The constitution of our state and the constitution of the United States guarantees to every man accused of crime the right of trial by jury, and that life, liberty or property shall not be taken away from him without due process of law.

"I have done everything possible to aid in the punishment of crime and the suppression of lawlessness in the county. No one has regretted more than I have the unfortunate situation there. While I believe Judge Redwine to be an honest and capable judge, I urged him several days before his court began not to try these cases himself, but to transfer them to another county or to allow me to appoint another judge. I feared that convictions might not be had in Breathitt county. But to take a different view of it and his conduct in the recent trials showed that he was honest, faithful and earnest in his desire to see the law enforced.

"Now let us turn our attention for a while to those people who exulted in the death of William Goebel and who today would rejoice to see every citizen of Breathitt county murdered and every house be burned, if it would make for them some political capital against me and against the Democratic party. There was a report that when Marcum lay dying on the spot, where he had been shot, that Jett, a little while afterwards, came around, stood over the dying man with an assumed gravity and said: 'This is an awful thing.' So there are today some Republican papers and leaders who look at Breathitt county with affected sorrow and say: 'This is an awful thing.'

"Certain newspapers and men who applauded the assassination of Kentucky's governor and a reign of terror in the state capitol now pretend to be wonderfully shocked and disturbed over the condition of affairs in Breathitt county. As a Democrat I am proud of the fact that the Democratic press and the Democratic people of the state denounce crime and lawlessness regardless of politics and have been unanimous in their condemnation of the assassination of Marcum, even though he happened to be a Republican leader. The Democratic party in Kentucky has no sympathy with crime, no mater who may be the criminal. No Democratic paper or Democratic person has yet sought to take up subscriptions to defend the assassins of Marcum. On the contrary, they have thrown their whole influence in the effort to have those assassins punished. What a wonderful contrast have they shown with the conduct of the Republican press when Goebel was murdered and the entire commonwealth seemed on the verge of revolution and anarchy.

"Had the Republican party shown the same eagerness to punish his assassins as the Democrats have shown in their desire to see Marcum's assassins punished, then that atrocious crime of over three years ago would now be avenged, although it would have cost the Republican party the loss of some of its most distinguished leaders. Did they shed a tear or show the least sympathy for him after he had fallen by an assassin's bullet? Every citizen of Kentucky knows they did not, and that, on the contrary, when Goebel lay suffering in the awful agonies of death from his cruel wounds, the Republican officials sent a lot of their raw militia and stationed them immediately under his window, that with their boisterous conduct and noisy demonstration they might disturb and harrass the last hours of the fallen leader whom they could not defeat, except by assassination.

"Jim Howard, the thrice convicted murderer of William Goebel, who, because he could not assassinate a man for hire, would shoot one for pastime, is the petted beneficiary of their liberal commendation, and is loaded with lavish adulation. His cell is decorated with flowers, and his savage face is the object of admiration by those who love him because they believe he murdered in cold blood the man whom the Democrats of Kentucky had elected to be their governor. Their censure of me is encomium. Their denunciation is praise.

"JOHN A. C. BECKHAM."

REPLY OF SMITH

Former Postmaster General Defends His Actions In Office.

Denies Any Responsibility For Wrongdoing In Department.

Philadelphia, June 27.—Charles Emory Smith, who was succeeded as postmaster general by Mr. Payne, has made public his reply to the charges made by Mr. Tulloch in connection with the postoffice investigation. His letter follows:

Philadelphia, June 23, 1903.

Hon. Henry C. Payne,
Postmaster General.

Sir: In view of the partial publication of the letter of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow on the so-called Tulloch charges and of the accompanying reports of inspectors made to him in 1899 and 1900, I deem it incumbent on me for a right public understanding to make a further statement, supplementary to my letter of May 27, and to present the papers in their proper relation.

It will be seen that the Tulloch statement and the inspector's report are practically identical. At many points the language is exactly the same. It is as if they were written by the same hand. The Tulloch statement was submitted to me. The inspector's report was submitted to the fourth assistant. It was the business of the inspector to find whatever seemed to call for explanation; it was left to the postmaster general to find the explanation and the truth.

This was done by probing the Tulloch statement when it was presented. All of the transactions described as irregular were examined and a repart was made to me which took them up item by item and groups of items and gave the facts and explanations in each case. To this report, which appears below as Exhibit C, I direct particular attention. If its statements are correct, then on most points its explanations are satisfactory. Its accuracy in all its specific averments has never been impeached in any quarter. On the main points it is believed to be beyond successful challenge.

These main points may be thus summed up, each in a sentence: First, names of military postal clerks were put on the general roll until the military appropriation became available; then they were transferred to the military roll. Second, the bond premiums of military postal clerks were paid for good reasons and which had the approval of the comptroller. Third, the purchases of Porto Rico supplies were made from the regular department contractors named under competition and at regular contract prices. Fourth, the vouchers for expenses of department officials traveling on official business were made as required by the auditor. Fifth, the least of the Washington postoffice was shown to be entirely justified. Sixth, the apparently double payment of those employed in examining letter carriers' claims is fully explained.

These points embrace all that are specified in the charges, except the items relating to appointments, including the individual cases of Larner and O. H. Smith, and thus the matters open to question are reduced to the appointments which, all told, involve thirteen clerks and seven cleaners. Even this is not an irreducible minimum, for several of these appointments, as shown in the explanatory statement, were perfectly right and beyond any question.

More than one-half of the inspector's report is taken up with a minute and detailed statement as to the cases of Larner and O. H. Smith. Of the latter I had no knowledge and say nothing. Of the former I have some recollection, as it was the only one of the cases that was appealed to me. Larner had been appointed a military postal clerk for Porto Rico by the first assistant's bureau. He went under a promise from that bureau of compensation at the rate of $1400 a year. About that time I fixed the general compensation of clerks in Porto Rico, as I was empowered to do by law, at $1200 a year. When Larner returned he refused to settle his unsettled account on that basis, and appealed to me. He insisted that he had been promised $1400, and I found on inquiry that this was true. I ordered that he should be paid what he had been promised, as I had a right to do. Out of that question of rate and out of the question of the actual length of his service grew the whole story of alleged irregularity which takes up one-quarter of the inspector's report, except as it involves a few items of his expense account.

When the charges of irregularity were made, my duty was plain. It was to have them examined and, if there were irregularities, to have them corrected. This is exactly what was done. She explanations weer reported as they of them seemed satisfactory. I was appear in exhibit C, and to me most the more assured in this judgment from the fact that the comptroller of the treasury, who made a searching investigation at the time and thoroughly examined all the vouchers, allowed all except $160 in total amount.

The same report of the inspector made in 1899 states at the conclusion that during the course of the inspection, "he, Heavers, requested the inspector to inform the inspector-in-charge that when he struck the names of the charwomen off the stations it would be well not to mention them in his report, as they were personal appointments of the postmaster general."

I do not know whether this statement was made or not, but he fact is that of all the appointments referred to in the report I had personal knowledge of and personal interest in only one. That was the case of a most estimable newspaper woman, long a successful Washington correspondent, whom I had known for twenty-five years, and who, through misfortune, was in such distress. Knowing her need and being able to help her I should have been a brute if I had failed to do so. As she was not on the roll of eligibles, she could not be made a clerk, and I requested that a place should be found for her on the roll of laborers. Months afterward I learned to my surprise that she was enrolled as a cleaner, and, though a refined lady of education, had conscientiously been doing a cleaner's work. Immediately I sought to find a place more suitable to her position and antecedents and happily succeeded. That was absolutely the only case of all involved in which I had any personal part. If anybody thinks the postmaster general should know the number of cleaners, and whether they were all at work, I have nothing to say.

General Bristow is entirely right in saying that he spoke to me at the time about the inspector's report. His statement would have been complete if he had added what I stated in my letter of May 27, as follows:

"About the same time Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow informed me that inspectores had found the same apparent or actual irregularities in the Washington office. I advised him according to my recollection of the investigation which the comptroller of the treasury had made, and of the steps which were being taken to rectify the wrong."

I wish to accept the largest measure of responsibility which belongs to me in connection with all these matters, but it seems due to fairness to state certain facts. The war against Spain, declared three or four days later, was dated back to April 21, 1898. That was the very day on which I was sworn in as postmaster general. My first duty, before even familiarizing myself with the department, was to make immediate provision for the letters of the scattered army of 250,000 men which was promptly raised, followed by provision for the full mail of the islands. The administration had been installed for more than a year. The department force had been organized, and of course it was properly accepted, as it was found. When the immediate duty in hand was taken up, it was discovered, curiously enough, that there were absolutely no records of the military postal service in the civil war. We had nothing to guide us. We had to make our own plans. The determination of the general plan and policy devolved on the postmaster general. The execution of the details devolved on the first assistant's bureau. We had at first no special appropriation, and so had to meet the requirements out of the regular appropriation. Afterwards when the special appropriation became available we had to recoup the general appropriation in order that the regular service might not suffer. These things were effected in part through the Washington office, and orders were given which subordinate officials neither did nor were required to understand, and out of it has grown a vast deal of unnecessary misunderstanding.

It is my purpose to address you respecting the letter of the civil service commission on the subject, but that will more properly form a separate communication. The minor and unimportant report of Inspector Little made in 1900 I shall deal with in a different way.

Respectfully yours,
CHARLES EMORY SMITH.

Then follows a number of explanations on the Tulloch charges, made in 1899 by inspectors who investigated them and reported their findings to Mr. Smith. They are in part as follows:

Item No. 1. "Employment of E. S. Allen, H. A. Cummins, D. M. Monroe and F. E. Murray, on military roll, detailed to postoffice department." When the appropriation for the military postal service was made by congress the question of extra clerks was overlooked. The disbursement of this appropriation and correspondence, etc., conected therewith, was thrown upon the salary and allowance division, a division already overburdened with the regular appropriations. These clerks were, therefore, temporarily detailed to said division, in order to keep the work in proper shape. Their employment consequently was a war exigency pure and simple, and fully justified by the conditions then existing.

Item No. 2. "Transfer of twenty clerks from regular roll of Washington city postoffice to Military postal roll." These appointments were made necessary by reason of the fact that searly in the fiscal year and before the military appropriation had become available, our regular appropriations were heavily drawn upon to meet military necessities; hence, toward the close of the year it was necessary to recoup in order to save a deficiency in the regular appropriation.

"Item No. 7. "Irregularity in the appointment, compensation and promotion of Oliver H. Smith." The records of the free delivery division show that Mr. Smith was paid at the rate of $2.00 per day for his employment during a part of the day in the painting, repairing and erecting of street letter boxes, and the performance of other work as he might be called upon to perform.

The payment of Mr. Smith from two branches of the service was not deemed irregular, as the department was of the opinion that any employe receiving $2500 or less could be paid compensation on two different rolls. Sec. 55, P. L. & R., edition of 1893, reads:

"No person who holds an office the salary or annual compensation attached to which amounts to the sum of $2500, shall not receive compensation for discharging the duties of another office, unless expressly authorized by law. (R. S., P. 1753.)"

As soon as the comptroller of the treasury caled the department's attention to this technical irregularity it was discontinued.

Item No. 8. "Expenses of certain post office department officials paid through the Washington, D. C., postoffice." These expense accounts were duly sworn to and made out in the form and manner prescribed by the sixth auditor of the treasury for the postoffice department. Vouchers were furnished where possible and the entire account regularly sworn to. This practice of paying departmental officials' expenses for traveling has been in vogue for many years, and has never been questioned. Recently, however, the comptroler suggested that similar accounts be hereafter paid by warrant through the disbursing officer of the post office department, and arrangements have been made accordingly.

Item No. 9. "Cleaners." The persons referred to as cleaners were regularly appointed and detailed to the postoffice at Washington, D. C. The postmaster was instructed, and it was part of his duty to have provided employment for them, or reported to this department if it was a fact that there was no employment for them, when their services would have been dispensed with.

VARICOCELE

READ CAREFULLY WHAT FOLLOWS:

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

ADVANTAGE OF MY METHOD OF CURING VARICOCELE.

My treatment is absolutely painless and devoid of danger; no anaesthetic is given.

The cure is permanent. I have treated thousands of the most aggravated cases without a single failure or recurrence.

You are under the care of a reliable specialist, that is acknowledged authority in the treatment of men, and whose superior method of treatment is nowhere else obtainable in America.

You are not subjected to the dangerous experiments of antiquated treatments which you are liable to receive at the hands of incompetent and inexperienced doctors. Varicocele is a very serious and delicate disease, and necessarily requires skilled, expert treatment. I am treating many cases daily, and have gained a national reputation as being successful in the treatment of Varicocele and its results — Nervous Debility and Lost Health.

I Also Cure to Stay Cured

Stricture, Contagious Blood Poison, Nervous Debility

and all reflex complications and associate diseases and weaknesses of men. To these maladies alone I have earnestly devoted the best years of my life. Physicians having stubborn cases to treat are cordially invited to consult with me. I make no charge for private counsel and give to each patient a legal contract in writing, backed by abundant capital, to hold for my promise. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes?

STRICTURE.

It matters not how long you have suffered from Stricture or how many different doctors have disappointed you. I will cure you just as certain as you come to me for treatment. I will not do it by cutting or dilating. My treatment is entirely original with me and perfectly harmless. It completely dissolves the stricture and permanently removes every obstruction of the urinary passage. It stops every unnatural discharge, allays all inflammation, reduces the prostate gland when enlarged, cleanses the bladder and kidneys, invigorates the vital organs and restores health and soundness to every part of the body affected by the disease.

BLOOD POISON.

Specific Blood Poison was for ages supposed to be incurable. This ancient idea still exists in the minds of many physicians, who continue to salivate their patients with potash, mercury and other dangerous mineral mixtures, which, instead of forcing the disease out of the system, drives it deeper in, where it lies dormant for a time, and then breaks out again in the form of some frightful skin, blood or bone disease. I cure Specific Blood Poison to stay cured forever. I challenge the medical world for a case in any stage that I cannot positively cure, never to return, in from sixty to ninety days. My treatment for this disease is endorsed by the best physicians of America and Europe. It is purely vegetable in composition and perfectly harmless in effect.

NERVO-VITAL DEBILITY.

Men, many of you are now reaping the result of your former folly. Your manhood is failing and you will soon be lost unless you do something for yourself. There is no time to lose. Impotency, like all vital diseases, is never on the standstill. With it you can make no compromise. Either you must master it or it will master you and fill your whole future with misery and indescribable woe. I have treated so many cases of this kind that I am as familiar with them as you are with the very daylight. Once cured by me and you will never again be bothered with emissions, drains, prematureness, nervousness, failing memory, loss of ambition or other symptoms which rob you of your manhood and absolutely unfit you for study, business or pleasure. My treatment for weak men will correct all these evils and restore you to what nature intended—a hale, healthy, happy man, with physical and mental powers complete.

ASSOCIATE DISEASES.

In curing a disease of any kind I never fail to remove all reflex complications. If the case is Varicocele, the weakness caused by it disappears. If it is Stricture and has developed into Prostatic, Bladder or Kidney affections, the injured organs are all restored to a perfectly healthful condition. If it is Contagious Blood Poison, any and all Skin, Blood and Bone diseases arising from the taint are entirely and permanently eliminated from the system. If it is Impotency, the many distressing symptoms following in its train and indicating a premature decline of physical and mental power are totally removed and rapidly replaced by the youthful energy of robust manhood. Hence all resulting ills and reflex complications which may be properly termed associate diseases, and which, in fact, are often more serious that the original ailment that gives rise to them—all, I say, disappear completely and forever with the cure of the main malady.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Most cases can be treated successfully at home. One personal visit is preferred, but if it is impossible or inconvenient for you to call at my office, write me a full and unreserved history of your case, plainly stating your symptoms. Physicians having stubborn cases to treat are cordially invited to consult with me. I charge nothing for private counsel and give to each patient a legal contract in writing, backed by abundant capital, to hold for my promise. Address all communications to

Safe From Summer Complaints

All mammas, and papas too for that matter, dread the heat of summer with it's danger for the little folks, especially the babies. It is simply heart-breaking to read year after year about the great death rate among children caused by the summer's heat. Yet it is easy to protect the infants against all summer complaints, because we know that all these fearful perils have their beginning in stomach and bowel troubles, and we have a perfect family medicine that will keep the delicate machinery in a child's body clean, regular and in healthy working order in the hottest weather—CASCARETS Candy Cathartic. The plump, bouncing, crowing baby shown here is a CASCARET baby. He feels that way winter and summer. Nursing mammas take a CASCARET at bedtime, and it makes their mother's milk mildly purgative and keeps the baby just right. Older children like to take the fragrant, sweet littie candy tablet, and are safe from colic, gripes, diarrhoea, summer rash, prickly heat and all the mean troubles that summer brings with it.

SERVICES IN DULUTH HOUSES OF WORSHIP

Rev. J. T. Moody Becomes Assistant Superintendent of Bethel Religious Work—Dr. Weston to Preach at First Presbyterian Church—Prof. Noble of Iowa College at Pilgrim Church.

Rev. J. T. Moodyhas arrived in Duluth to fill the position of assistant superintendent of the Bethel. Mr. Moody and his family will reside at the Branch Bethel on West Superior street.

The new assistant superintendent has had an interesting career. He was born in St. Louis, Miss., August 16, 1872, his father being a leading physician of that city. His parents moved to Arkansas when Mr. Moody was a small child and here his father died. Mr. Moody and his mother then moved to California, and he finished his education at the town of Riverside. His first business was that of running a restaurant.

In 1894 he was converted at Moody's mission in Chicago and the next year entered the Moody Institute and after completing the course there was ordained as a minister of the Congregational church. His first pulpit was at Evansville, Ind., where he was very successful in building up his church. Before leaving that city it was necessary for the congregation to construct a larger church to accommodate the crowds which were attracted to hear him.

Later he succeeded in closing up the REV. J. T. MOODY.

"open" town of Newburg, Ind. He was elected to the position of town clerk of that community and the inhabitants were immediately treated to the spectacle of a revival of the old blue laws which were as vigorously executed as in the old Puritan times.

His work in Newburg was graphically described in one of the New York dailies which gave a complete history of the manner in which the pastor reformed and succeeded in enforcing the laws.

The tent work of the Bethel will begin next week under the direction of Mr. Moody and Rev. S. W. Spoonts.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Washington Post: An Indiana minister is attracting some notoriety by preaching sermons in his sleep, thus reversing the old custom of preaching while his congregation slept.

Kansas City Star: One of the most touching incidents of the flood was the case of the Armourdale clergyman whose barrel of old sermons was destroyed. A great wave of sympathy will go out to this unfortunate man from Methodist preachers all over the country.

Chicago Chronicle: Clerical gentlemen who assume to sit in judgment upon other clergymen, not even of their own denomination, need to be reminded that there is an eleventh commandment, which is of great value even though it was not graven on the Sinaitic tablet. It reads: "Mind your own business."

Indianapolis Journal: The last of the Spanish Catholic dignitaries of the Philippines has resigned and will soon leave the islands. The vatican has Americanized the Roman Catholic clergy of the islands very quietly, but none the less thoroughly. And it is impossible to overestimate the effect of this change on the problem of governing the archipelago.

Philadelphia Ledger: Rev. P. W. Bilderback, pastor of the Fourth Methodist Episcopal church, has introduced a new feature for his Sunday evening service, that of a choir of thirty young men whistlers. The choir made its first appearance the other night before a large congregation and whistled several selections. Some of the boys in the gallery joined in the chorus.

Springfield Republican: They have been having a long-continued drouth in New England, which led Rev. Dr. Withrow, of Boston, to preach last Sunday on the question of whether or not it is right to pray for rain. He argued that it is right to ask the Lord to save perishing crops, assuring his hearers that if they did their part the Lord would do His. As heavy rains have fallen in and about Boston since Sunday, the assumption is that the reverend doctor's congregation went immediately home and began praying.

CURED BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE.

Father, Mother and Daughter Are Now Enthusiastic in Their Praise of This Wonderful Remedy.

Miss Stella Reeves took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People with such good results that her father and mother were induced to try them.

That in itself is a strong recommendation and the fact that all three were entirely cured and are now enthusiastic in their praise of this wonderful remedy, make a statement of the cases an important one to all sufferers.

Mr. Reeves lives at No. 182 Crescent avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., and is overseer of the Pythian temple. His daughter, Stella, was suffering from that tired, run-down feeling peculiar to young girls. She says: "I was pale and thin and always tired, my blood was in a dreadfully poor state and I didn't have any strength at all. Any little exertion made me short of breath and I felt miserable. Then my mother decided to have me try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and before I had taken half a box the good results began to show themselves."

"Yes," said her mother. "They did her so much good that I began to take them myself. I had been ailing for some time with a spinal trouble which was so bad that I could not stand up for more than five minutes at a time. My back ached constantly and there was a numb feeling at the back of my head. I had no appetite and from constant suffering became very weak. But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People did more for me than all other medicines.

"Mr. Reeves," she continued, "also took the pills with the best results. He was so worn out with hard work that his limbs would get numb and stiff. They pained him horribly. His whole nervous system became unstrung from his sufferings, and he was discouraged until he saw what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were doing for Stella. He began taking them when I did and they did wonders for him, too.

"We are all very grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and try to persuade every ailing person we know to try this excellent remedy."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an unfailing specific for all diseases arising from impoverished blood or shattered nerves. They have cured rheumatism, locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, nervous headache, after-effects of the grip, of fevers and of other acute diseases, palpitation of the heart, anaemia, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness. At all druggists, or direct from Dr. Williams Medicine company, Schenectady, N. Y., fifty cents per box; six boxes for two dollars and a half.

Thieves Steal Wagon Load of Goods at Viborg.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—A telephone message from Viborg says the hardware store of M. V. Olson, a well-known business man, was robbed Thursday night. About $400 worth of goods, consisting of razors, shotguns and pocket knives were carried away. The thieves also broke into a Viborg saloon and carried away the cash register. It is believed they were provided with a horse and wagon to carry away their plunder.

An important order has been issued by Judge Jones in the divorce suit of Delia Whitman vs. Joseph H. Whitman. The defendant is a wealthy resident of Sioux Falls, while the plaintiff resides on one of the aristocratic boulevards in Chicago. She recently came to Sioux Falls with her sister and took her 8-year-old son, Charles, back to Chicago, the kidnaping being one of the boldest in the history of the local divorce colony. A few days ago the boy was returned to his father. Judge Jones has directed that the father shall have the sole care and custody of the boy pending the termination of the divorce suit. Mrs. Whitman, however, is given the right whenever she is in Sioux Falls, to interview and visit with her son at all reasonable times. The court further ordered that Mr. Whitman pay his wife $40 a month temporary alimony until the suit comes up for final hearing. The defendant has also been enjoined from disposing of or encumbering any of his real estate pending the action.

Deadwood—Dr. Alexander MacConnell, for nine years pastor of the Congregational church in Deadwood, died Tuesday at his home at Webster City, Iowa. He resigned his pastorate four years ago because of ill health and returned to Iowa, where he had a son in business. He was recognized as one of the ablest and most scholarly ministers ever recognized in western South Dakota. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, a Scottish Rite Mason and a Knight Templar. He left a wife and three children.

Watertown—Politics for the campaign of 1904 are beginning to take on a lurid hue. The chief matter of interest here at present is over the judgeship of the third circuit. It is presumed, of course, that Judge Bennett will be a candidate to succeed himself, and the man who beats him out of the Democratic nomination will have to do some tall hustling. However, John B. Hanten, of this city, the old wheel-horse of the Democratic party of Codington county, has announced himself as a democratic candidate, and as he is a potent political factor there is a good chance of a clash between the Bennett and the Hanten interests. The only avowed aspirant for the position on the Republican ticket is George W. Case, one of the best attorneys in the circuit. Others are after the plum, however, but have not as yet openly announced their candidacy.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—Attorney General Frich and Judge Corliss, of Grand Forks, appeared before the supreme court Friday afternoon to discuss the matter of a special term of the court for the hearing of the state institution bond cases. The court will probably set a time for the hearing this afternoon.

The city board of equalization has adjourned, after completing assessment of city property. The total valuation of the real and personal property is about $1,390,060.

The mercantile establishment of H. L. Michelson & Co. is in the hands of trustees, who will manage the business until the debts of the firm are paid. The assets are ample to pay the liabilities, but the trusteeship was agreed to by the various interests. C. B. Little, of Bismarck, and Messrs. Jumper and Parsons, representing George R. Newell & Co. of Minneapolis, and Marshall Wells, of Duluth, will probably be agreed upon as trustees.

Kindred—The editors of Cass county are expected to meet at Kindred next Sunday and will spend most of the day in th epark on the Cheyenne river. There will be a ball game and a concert by the Kindred band.

The machinery for the creamery has arrived and will be installed at once. There is every promise of it being a great success, as this point is in the center of the dairy district.

Springfield—Probably the most unique affair of the kind will be the Fourth of July celebration at Springfield. One of the attractions will be an old-time war dance by a band of Sioux Indians from the Santee reservation.

MINING IS DEAD

All the Propositions In Rainy Lake District Closed Down.

Mining Too Expensive—Country Prospering In Spite of This.

Capt. John Monaghan and M. F. Chalk, the United States steamboat inspection officials at Duluth, have recently returned from a trip through the Rainy lake and Rainy river district, where they have been on their annual tour of inspection in the United States international waters.

"The gold mining in the Rainy river district has been abandoned entirely," said Capt. Monaghan, in speaking of the trip today. "I made numerous inquiries at various points at which we stopped as to whether any of the mines were being worked, and if so, what results were being obtained. The answer that I received everywhere was that the mines had been abandoned, and the mills, if there were any, closed down. I was told by natives of that district that there was not a gold mine in the Rainy river district producing gold at the present time.

"Last year there were a number of mines which were being worked more or less, but this season none of them seem to be produeers.

"The reason for it is that the country is so uneven and hard to work that the value of the gold received does not pay the cost of the mining. The formaton in that district is very much broken up, and even though a rich vein may be struck, the chances are that it will run out after it has been followed for a short distance. Then such a vast quantity of rock has to be worked over and removed in order to get at the vein that it does not pay to mine in that locality, according to the stories told me while there.

"But in spite of the failure of the gold mining industry, the country is in a very prosperous condition. Those who have abandoned mining have found employment in agriculture, and the district is becoming well settled. The land is not second to even the noted Red River valley for richness, and the miners are beginning to realize this and are taking up homesteads and becoming independent by farming instead of mining. The increased population has caused one or two new steamers to be built on the waters in that district, and we found our list of boats to be inspected increased by the addition of one or two new names.

"The increase in the population of that country was plainly noticeable, and we saw many changes that have been made since our trip up there last summer.

"I was particularly impressed, however, with the manner in which the Canadian side of the border is filling up. At Rat Portage, on the Canadian side, we met a trainload of immigrants. The train was divided into five sections, each section having ten coaches and every one of them filled to its utmost capacity. The immigrants were bound for the Canadian Northwest, and I was told that such parties as the one we saw were common occurrences."

We wish all who recognize the importance of clean, wholesome, digestible milk to inspect our plant, which has been equipped with all the latest scientific apparatus for aeriating, clarifying, bottling and delivering milk to customers.

Is your supply delivered from cans, dipped out into vessels and then exposed to the dust and impurities of the street? Or, if delivered in bottles, are the bottles filled in the streets, in rooms, stores or cellars of private houses, and are the bottles thoroughly cleansed and sterilized before being filled? These are questions of the utmost importance and should be carefully considered by every consumer.

We have adoped the bottle system of delivery to residences. All milk and cream as soon as clarified is put in sealed bottles ready for delivery.

We are established in a modern, sanitary building with a cold storage plant and all scientific facilities for clarifying milk and cream, washing and sterilizing cans and bottles and filling bottles expeditiously.

Come and make a personal investigation of the milk which you use. Is your milk free from sediment? Test it and see, or come and see tests here before and after clarifying?

Every Duluth citizen should see to it that his milk is pure. Scientists and physicians will all tell you that many diseases owe their origin to impure milk.

The methods of caring for milk which we have adopted have been endorsed by the medical and scientific world.

Our cans and bottles are not only washed but sterilized by steam. We will show you the milk room—a large cold storage room, kept at a temperature of 33 degrees, where milk and cream are deposited awaiting delivery to our customers. You can also see where and how we churn daily 3000 pounds of

Former Michigan Man to Be Hanged In Washington.

Grand Marais—Advices received from the West are that Angus McPhail, formerly engaged in the saloon business at Grand Marais, has been sentenced to death for murder, and that he will be hanged on Sept. 10 next. McPhail left Michigan three years ago and embarked in the liquor business at Arlington, Wash. According to the story he recently became involved in a fight in his saloon with another man and shot and killed him, his conviction soon following.

The Marais Lumbering company has closed a deal for the sale of the entire cut of its mill this season. The product will amount to about 30,000,000 feet and all of it will be shipped to purchasers in the East. The consideration has not been made public. The company's sawmill was destroyed by fire a few months ago. The company purchased a sawmill at Cheyboygan and it was just fifty-seven days from the time it began demolishing the plant to transfer it to Grand Marais that it was again in operation.

Houghton—The Mishwabik Mining company is the result of a merger of the Mishwabik Development association, the Federal Copper company and the Union Land Copper and Mining company, just effected in Boston, and incorporated with a capitalization of 100,000 shares of a par value of $25 each, under the laws of Michigan. H. F. Fay, president of the Fay group, will be president. Over 1200 acres are comprised in its tract.

Sault Ste. Marie—In excavating for the Carnegie library, the workmen made several gruesome discoveries in the way of bones of soldiers who were buried when the place was used for a military cemetery many years ago. The only relics remaining were a few skulls and other bones, together with brass buttons, to some of which fragments of faded blue cloth still clung. One name-plate found bore 1854 as the date of burial.

Ishpeming—Mining men who have returned from the newly-discovered iron range near Baraboo, Wis, are of the opinion that, next to the Mesaba range, the find will prove the most important in recent years. They were surprised at the showing. The ore is similar in appearance and general character to soft ores of the Marquette range, and ranges around 60 per cent metallic iron.

The extent of the deposit is as yet unknown, but iron has already been found with a considerable radium, and the scores of diamond drills being employed in the exploratory operations are expected to show up important continuations of the veins.

A particularly notable showing is being made at the Illinois property, being developed by the Deering Harvester company. The shaft there is already about 500 feet in depth. At the 300-foot level drifts have been extended east and west on the vein for a distance of 400 feet, and they are in ore all the way, the vein at that depth averaging about 30 feet in width.

The vein also has been encountered at the 20-foot level, and, while a cross-cut has not yet been made at that point, it is believed the vein will be found to have increased materially in width. The Baraboo formation is in the shape of a crescent, so far as proved, and its trend is northeast and southwest. Numerous miners from the Lake Superior district have been imported to the new district.

THE LAKE LEVELS.

With the annual increase in the commerce of the great lakes it is natural that the questions looking to the improvement of this great internal waterway should receive considerable attention. An international commission is desired to investigate and report on the conditions and uses of the waters of the great lakes and adjacent streams, and President Roosevelt has already asked Canada to join in a commission of this kind. An effort was made a few years ago to realize the same idea, but it met no response whatever from the Canadian side, and this request forms a renewal of the endeavor to have uniformity of action with respect to this important subject.

It is said that the levels of the lakes have been lowered to some extent by the deepening of the channels to a 21-foot average between Duluth and Chicago in the West and Buffalo in the East, and by the great Chicago drainage canal. It is also said that the canals of power companies have affected the height of the lake, but this is improbable, for the water that is utilized for such companies is returned to streams below. How much the levels of the lake have been reduced and what is the effect upon commerce is a matter more largely of speculation than of knowledge. It is impracticable to do anything for the maintenance of the lake levels except by concert of action between the two countries interested. It is held that the solution of the entire question is a dam at the head of Niagara river, the outlet of Lake Erie, but there are some who do not agree to this. With the great tonnage of the lakes, and which is constantly increasing, it is certainly important that the question of improved navigation should be carefully and promptly considered.

THE NORTHERN SECURITIES CASE.

Professor C. C. Langdell is generally recognized by the bar of the United States as the highest example of the learned student and teacher of the law. He was a practising lawyer until 1870, when he accepted an appointment as Dane professor of law at the Harvard law school. In the same year he became dean of the law faculty and held this position for twenty-five academic years. The occasion of his resignation in 1895 was made memorable by an address delivered by Sir Frederick Pollock, the great English lawyer, who had come to America for the express purpose of attesting to the world-wide reputation of Professor Langdell, and the extraordinary results of the so-called "case system" of instruction in the law, originated and established by Professor Langdell, which has been the basis of the legal education of thousands of his pupils, now actively engaged at the American bar. After thirty years of service, in 1900 Professor Langdell retired from active teaching, being continued as professor emeritus in the Harvard law school, where there has recently been established in his honor the Langdell professorship of law.

Professor Langdell has written often and always authoritatively upon subjects of legal import and interest, not only in the Harvard Law Review, but in other periodicals. In a recent issue of the Legal Review there is a notable article from his pen on "The Northern Securities Case and the Sherman Anti-Trust Act," which has attracted much attention in legal circles throughout the country. Professor Langdell dissects the decision of the United States court of appeals in this case, and claims that it is opposed to a correct interpretation of the law and to the facts. The Herald presents the full text of Professor Langdell's article on Page 17 of this edition. Throughout his long career as a lawyer and teacher, Professor Langdell has been distinguished for the freedom and force and accuracy of his analysis of judicial decisions, and it is quite certain that there are no lawyers at the American bar, and few judges upon the American bench, whose opinion concerning a pure question of law is rated more highly than that of Professor Langdell.

Scientific agriculture is to be taught in the schools of the rural communities of Canada. The plan is to provide two or three acres of land adjacent to the most important school in several districts in each country, and with the addition of about six other schools there will be formed one garden center in each district. Upon the day appointed for the visit of the instructor, the boys from the seven schools in the district will meet at the central school, where special practical instruction will be given in elementary forestry, elementary horticulture, etomology and its relation to agriculture and horticulture, and physics and chemistry of the soil. The value of this instruction lies in its practical characteristics, each pupil being brought in contact with the actual work in the particular branches of the study. In addition to this special course for boys, a domestic science course will be introduced for the benefit of the girls upon a similar plan.

WILL PAYNE RESIGN?

Rumors come thick and fast from Washington regarding Postmaster General Payne. Some say that he is about to resign because his health, which has been poor for several years past, is getting worse under the strain of the investigations into the management of his department and the disclosures which have scandalized the whole country. Other reports claim that he has no intention of resigning and that President Roosevelt has the utmost confidence in the postmaster general's intention and ability to probe the scandals and drive out of the department the officials who have been false to their trust. Still other reports say the president has determined that the postoffice department should have a new head and has summoned Senator Hanna to Washington to consult with him regarding the selection of a successor to Mr. Payne. Which of the rumors is true it is impossible to decide, but the indications are that Mr. Payne will not remain long at the head of the department, and his resignation may be looked for at an early date, ill-health being the excuse.

Mr. Payne has made many blunders since the postoffice scandals became public property. "Say you asked the postmaster general and that he just laughed." Fifty newspaper correspondents stood around Postmaster General Payne's desk in the postoffice department when he made that remark on May 1 last. They represented all the great newspapers in the United States. Postmaster General Payne had on his desk the charges of maladministration, irregularities, diversion of funds, padding of rolls with political favorites who did not work and the scores of other instances of corruption that had been preferred by Seymour W. Tulloch, former cashier of the Washington city postoffice.

These charges went into detail. They named places, men and dates. They were complete and specific. Mr. Payne had been talking about him to the correspondents. He had examined the typewritten pages and he said: "There are three pages that may need attention and forty-seven pages of hot air. They are a mass of glittering generalities. They remind me of a stump speech. This man Tulloch is a windbag. If what Tulloch says is true most of these officals he names ought to resign office immediately. His interview reflects upon the department generally. True, it does not reflect upon my own administration, but it touches that of my immediate predecessor. If these officials disprove what is said of them then Mr. Tulloch should be branded as a calumniator and a slanderer."

With a flourish, he called on Mr. Tulloch to substantiate his charges or be branded as a liar. Tulloch came immediately to the front. He filed fifty typewritten pages with the postmaster general and he gave names and dates and instances of irregularities and corruption with fullness of detail. They never touched Payne. "Hot air," he said, and all the rest of it. Still, the postmaster general, thinking to confound Tulloch entirely, asked the persons named by Tulloch for their denials. Former Postmaster General Smith, Perry S. Heath, the ex-first assistant postmaster general; John A. Merrit, postmaster of Washington, and Comptroller Treadwell of the treasury, responded with alacrity. "Absurd," they all said; "nothing in it. All lies." Perry Heath grew declamatory about his denial. He said he was proud of his part in the postal administration and pledged his life and his fortune and his sacred honor, or words to that effect, that everything was all right.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow also replied. He did not write much, being a man of few words, but he filed as exhibits with his reply copies of the reports made on the things complained of by Tulloch. He got his reply in on May 4, three days after the postmaster general asked for it. The others came straggling two or three weeks later. These efforts were given out. Bristow's was suppressed. Finally, John R. Proctor, president of the civil service commission, stepped to the front with a report on the abuses Tulloch mentioned. He sustained Tulloch. Then, forced by public demand, Payne gave out the Bristow report, but very grudgingly. He said nothing about "hot air" this time. The Bristow report also sustained Tulloch in every particular. No wonder President Roosevelt winced. The great intellectual propositon from Wisconsin, the clever politician and all that, had slipped a cog on Tulloch. It was a blunder of the first magnitude, and Payne has not tried to explain, because he cannot.

But he made other blunders. At the start he pooh-poohed the charges of corruption in his department, closed down on all investigators and went away on a pleasure trip. Before he came back, the president had ordered a general inquiry. Payne would not hear a word against Machen, and on the night before he was suspended said he was all right. He also stood by Gen. Tyner, until Tyner's wife went to the postoffice department and rifled a safe. Then, with the exception of "hot air" characterization of the investigation of the Tulloch charges, came the greatest purely intellectual feat of the investigation. Postmaster General Payne, seeing that Heath must be smirched and his comrades, Hanna and the rest, inferentially at least, brought in by the Bristow report, he hopped nimbly behind President McKinley and former Postmaster General Smith and said, in his statement that accompanied the Bristow findings: "The charge of Mr. Tulloch is in its essence against President McKinley and Postmaster General Smith. President McKinley is no longer living; Postmaster General Smith, who carried out President McKinley's policy, has answered for himself." This was a gratuitous and uncalled for slur on the martyred president. Was it made because twice President McKinley refused to take Payne into his cabinet? It is not strange that Secretary of State Hay was prompted to remark: "Some of Mr. Payne's utterances have been humiliating and embarrassing to the administration."

In view of this record of facts, the rumor that President Roosevelt is looking around for a new postmaster general will hardly cause any surprise.

WHERE ASPHALT IS CHEAP.

It is stated that not far from Ardmore, in the Indian Territory, and partly within the corporation limits, there is an asphalt mine which is thought to be extensive enough to pave all the streets in Indiana and Oklahoma territories. Ardmore purposes to build her streets of native asphalt. She will be prodigal in the use of asphaltum, for the reason that it is more economical than crushed rock and cement. The plan is to take the asphaltum as it comes from the mine and make a foundation 6 inches thick. This will be pounded and rolled until compact. Upon this will be spread a coating of the same material, crushed into coarse gravel size, mixed with the powdered material that results from the crushing. This also is thoroughly tamped and rolled. The last coat is made of the same material ground to a powder and then heated. No wagon ways have been made, but many sidewalks have been built in this manner and they are giving most satisfactory results. The crude asphaltum can be laid upon the streets at about half the cost of crushed stone.

Duluth cannot help envying the Indian territory town which is able to pave its streets with native asphalt at a merely nominal cost, when it is forced by the asphalt trust to pay over $2 a square yard and then its officials have to fight against poor asphalt being laid on the streets under contract.

FLOODS AND FORESTS.

Some men of science contend that deforestration is the primary cause of the floods that cause such great damage in various sections of the country. John P. Brown, secretary of the International Society of Arboriculture, who claims forty years of observation and study, declares that an era of floods has set in, and that as a consequence of deforestration the disastrous experience of Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri in 1903 will be repeated every year in other parts of the continent; moreover, that within fifty years the great agricultural region will be as sterile and unproductive as Arizona. Mr. Brown attributes China's decline in productiveness to its treeless condition, but it is a fact that Americans have destroyed more timber in fifty years than China has in 3000.

It may be admitted that scientists are correct in their contention that the destruction of trees may cause sterility. But what evidence is there that floods are conneced with deforestration? The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recalls that the great flood of 1844 came from a virgin forest, untouched by the pioneer's ax. What, then, becomes of the scientific theory? In 1858 conditions were not materially changed. What caused those great overflows? The theory of men of science is that, the forests having been cut away, the snow, unprotected by the trees, melts quickly and the rivers are suddenly filled with great volumes of water. This seems probable, but do the facts approve the theory? Apparently they do not, and the conclusion is forced that floods and deforestration have no connection whatever.

THE CHANGE IN IMMIGRATION.

Dispatches printed in Thursday's Herald showed clearly the wonderful growth in immigration to the United States during the past year. All records will be broken, while the character of the newcomers is greatly changed. This year's immigration is remarkable for emphasizing the tendency, in shifting the base of supplies from Western to Eastern Europe. Thus in the last completed fiscal year, that ending June 30, 1902, Austria-Hungary sent six times as many immigrants as it did twenty years ago, and Russia nine times as many. The group of nations made up of Austria-Hungary, Italy and Russia now take the place held in the early '80s by the United Kingdom and Germany. The seriousness of this change is that it furnishes to us material less desirable in itself and more difficult of conversion into Americans than the British, Irish and Germans who, two decades back, constituted the largest class of arrivals. Throughout the United Kingdom, Germany and the Scandinavian nations the progress of popular education is rapid. Fifty years ago the Irish immigration was largely illiterate; today what there is of it is literate. The Ireland of today is a pretty well-schooled country. Among Germans coming to this country, illiterates have constituted for a long time a very small percentage of the whole. If we turn to Eastern Europe we find a different story to tell.

Almost 50 per cent of the population of Hungary is officially returned as wholly illiterate. In Austria the latest accessible returns give the wholly illiterate as 9,605,337 out of a total of 23,895,413. Though Italy still has a long road to travel to attail a wholly literate population, she is making commendable progress and the percentage of illiterate conscripts, which was 57 per cent in 1871, was 33 per cent in 1900. E. P. Sargent, United States commissioned of immigration, in an article in the New York World, succinctly exhibits the results of the tendency noted, when he says that the illiteracy rate in immigration has increased in the last twenty years from 7 per cent to 25 per cent.

The only value of the preponderating element in our present immigration is largely physical. It represents muscle rather than brain; common, not skilled labor, and is rapidly absorbed by the demand for diggers, ditchers and "navvies" from contractors and mining corporations. These people are not desirable and more stringent laws are absolutely necessary. The educational qualfications should certainly be adopted and the quality of immigrants would at once increase, if not the quantity.

When in Africa there is a section holding 40,000,000 people with but five missionaries; when in India a clergyman, native or foreign, meeting a brother clergyman, will see passing 139,199 other people before meeting another; and when our own country could send abroad 10,000 Protestant ministers, and yet have left, making allowance for the aged and infirm, one for every 1000 inhabitants, it does seem that we are not in any thrilling danger of overdoing foreign missions, pertinently remarks the Christian Herald.

THE SCIENTIFIC LIFE.

(Before the breakfast has been prepared or after it had been served or eaten, the housewife should add up the different amounts of proteid, fat and carbohydrate found in the foods. The computing cards should be used for each meal. In the evening you can find out whether you have taken too much of one kind of food or not enough of another.—Mary Moulton Smith.)

Mother's slow at figures, but she always has to count
The portelds to see that we secure the right amount;
She keeps a pad and paper and a pencil near the sink.
And estimates out victuals—all the things we eat or drink.
She lists our carbohydrate and she scribbles down the fat.
And our specific gravity—she always watches that.

Mother's slow at figures, but she wants to do her best,
She's listened to the lectures until she is possessed
Of scientific demons and a regulating card—
And while she chews her pencil all the eggs are boiling hard.
She gets bewildered with it and she has balance up.
And the coffee is so sturdy that it almost cracks the cup.

Mother's slow at figures—so our breakfast's always late;
The portelds and the hydrates make the task for her too great.
We never get a luncheon, for she figures on till noon,
And finds we've oredone it, and that almost makes her swoon.
Mother's tabulating every pennyweight we eat—
Except the meals we smuggle from the restaurant down street.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Modesty gets awful reckless after it has been married a while.

In her own house a woman gets homesick when somebody else who ought to be there is away.

A woman is always willing to share a man with some other woman if he isn't willing to be shared.

The later a man comes home at night the surer he is that he didn't make any noise when he stumbled on the stairs.

The only thing that makes a wife madder than for her husband to want to know all about another man's photograph which she has had for a long time is for him not to care a rap about it.

Just Plain Human Nature.

New York World: "Scratch a Russian and you find a demon," says Dr. MacArthur. Oh, no; you just find a man with about the ordinary allowance of human nature. Put a Mississippi negro-burner in Russia, with the muzhik's particular brand of ignorance, and he would probably want to kill Jews. Put the muzhik in Breathitt county, Kentucky, and he would be likely to shoot his enemy in the back from behind the court house door.

Rainmaker's Hard Lines.

Philadelphia Ledger: One of the cruelest things that ever happened to a scientist was the occurrence of a violent thunderstorm in the Adirondacks just as Prof. Myers, the rainmaker, was about to send up his balloons. The professor had been imported from Texas, at great expense, to break the drouth, and but for an unfortunate delay in the arrival of the apparatus he would have discharged his bombs in air before the storm arrived and would have thus earned Dr. Seward Webb's honorarium and demonstrated the efficiency of his practice. We think that he is as much entitled to reward as he would have been had the storm followed and not preceded the experiment, but to reflect upon the chance of a happy sequence so narrowly missed must be heartbreaking.

Grades in Graft.

Washington Post: Missouri boodlers who refused to look at anything smaller than a $1,000 bill will be shocked to learn that Pennsylvania grafters are demanding a rake-off from school teachers whose salaries average about $33 a month.

Arms and the Brooklynite.

Brooklyn Eagle: In this city 20,000 people, some of them women, are carrying revolvers. All except the police carry them for an evil purpose. Twenty thousand potential murderers represent the lowest moral element in the community.

Sufficient to the Day.

Philadelphia Press: "I was just telling my daughter," said Mrs. Noosens, "that it's really a shame for her to play the piano on Sunday."

"Why did you mention Sunday particularly?" asked Mrs. Pepprey.

A Lost Opportunity.

New York Mail and Express: It was a great oversight that some Virginia judge did not think of an injunction against the Monitor in 1862.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Native copper has been found in Cook county under conditions which makes it probable that the specimens are from an extensive vein.

Postmaster C. A. A. Nelson, of Lutsen, Cook county, was at the St. Louis hotel this morning. He came down from home on the America and is just here looking around.

"About two weeks ago the first specimens were found and brought over for inspection. They were found by Adolph Carlson, who was working on his farm near the lake front a half mile from Lutsen.

"The specimens are as fine native copper as I have ever seen. Carlson brought them in about two weeks ago; that was the first I saw of them. He is now clearing the land on which he found the mineral, and will probably make a systematic search for indications as soon as the timber is off. He is not doing any work on it at present.

"The property on which the specimens of ore have been found is on the Onion river, near the lake, and the next quarter section to it is owned by Jones, a pension bureau official at Washington, who formerly took up a claim here, and more recently left the department and is still living East."

* * *

The visit of Mr. Nelson and the coincidental appearance of G. H. Feldtman, of Port Arthur, are of no significance, though it is a fact that Mr. Feldtman has been working on copper prospects for years. He was the representative of the English capitalists who set out on a fruitless search for copper on Isle Royale, and he for a long time conducted the explorations and search that was made.

Mr. Feltdman arrived in the city this morning and is at the St. Louis hotel. He says there is nothing particularly fresh or new about Port Arthur.

Mr. Nelson, of Lutsen, is a great hunter, and once a year has been in the habit of going out hunting. He shut down on it a little this year.

He says there are a great many wolves over in Cook county, and the people over there don't mind them enough to care to shoot them for the bounties. The bounty is $7.50, and Mr. Nelson said that one man who said he saw a pack of half a dozen the day before, called on him some weeks ago. Mr. Nelson asked him why he didn't shoot and kill a few. He said there wasn't enough money in it at $7.50, and he thought he'd let the wolves breed awhile before he started to slaughter.

All the hotels today were making ready for the big excursion coming this afternoon over the Great Northern road. The hotels were notified that there would be 1500 people or more on the train, the first section of which will arrive from Evansville, Minn., at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. The excursionists will remain in Duluth till tomorrow afternoon.

F. J. O'Donnell, press agent for Forepaugh-Sells, and J. B. Stowe for the same show, are at the St. Louis hotel. The show is coming here from Calumet, and the aggregation will not move into Duluth till early Monday morning. It was found that if the circus took its time and came over leaving Calumet Sunday morning it would not get in till 10 o'clock at night, and so they are going to feed and rest the whole show for a day, and it will be in great shape when it hits Duluth.

Mr. Whittam will probably remain here over Sunday and perhaps will attend the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. and tell of the work of the order at that place.

"How Seon We Are Forgotten."

Philadelphia Press: Shortly after the death of Capt. Gridley, who commanded the flagship in the battle of Manila bay, there was an enthusiastic movement among the people of Erie—the late captain's city—to raise a fund for a suitable monument. That was not so very long ago, but apparently it is long enough for the project to be lost to view, since the newspapers are now asking what has become of it. It is not a new experience.

Protest of Patriotism.

New York Tribune: The old Liberty Bell is an interesting object, and it is to be wished that every American might see it. But it ought not to be carted around the country as though it were the band wagon of a circus. Its place is in Independence hall, and there it should be kept for all time.

Schooling Per Capita.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Statistics show that the average amount of public schooling per capita in this country is 998 days. That is, there would be 998 days for each inhabitant if it were distributed around. Fifty years ago the average was 420 days, and at the beginning of the nineteenth century it was but 82 days. The nation gives the school children of today twelve times as much schooling as the youngsters received 100 years ago. This certainly is a gratifying showing.

AN OPTIMIST.

"Oh, aged man, pray, if you know,
Now, answer me the truth!—
Which of the gifts that the gods bestow
Is the greatest gift of youth?

"Oh, aged man, I have far to fare
By the divers paths of Earth.
Say which of the gifts that with me I bear
Is the gift of the greatest worth?

"Is it the might of the good right arm,
Whereby I shall make my way
Where dangers threaten and evils harm,
Holding them still at bay?

"Is it the strength wherewith I shall climb
Where few before have trod—
To the mountain tops, the peaks sublime
That glow in the smile of the god?

"Is it the never-failing will,
Invincible in might,
Which, armed against oppression still,
Shall vanquish for the right?

"Or is it the heart, thou aged man!—
The heart, impassioned, strong—
Which shall be blest, as naught else can,
In perfect love ere long?"

The old man smiled; the listening breeze
Grew whist on the sun-lit slope;
The old man sighed: "Ah, none of these!
Youth's greatest gift is hope."

He Didn't Understand.

Boston Traveler: A little fellow out West Roxbury way, some 10 years old, perhaps 12, bested his grandmothers the other day rather neatly. All three were at the table, when one of the ladies casually mentioned the name of the family nurse. Immediately the little fellow wanted to know who the lady was. One grandma innocently remarked that it was the nurse that took care of the boy when he was born. "But why didn't mamma take care of me? I was her baby, wasn't I?" queried the little fellow. "True," says grandma, "but you see mammas don't understand how to look after little babies, particularly the first one, and so have to have nurses who have learned how in the hospital." That seemed to settle it, but all of a sudden the little fellow blurted out, "Well then, who took care of Cain?"

What Ailed Herriman.

New York Times: "I don't understand how E. H. Harriman got up about two weeks after his operation for appendicitis," said one of a group at the club, "when it took me six weeks to get on my feet."

"Oh, well! your time was not as valuable," etc., from the crowd. Meanwhile the doctor in the group had been silent.

"You heard, of course, what they found?" he ventured. General interest—"Why, the appendix was full of undigested securities, and all they had to do was to cut the coupons off."

Whence All But He Have Fled.

New York World: Postmaster-General Payne objects to playing the lone part of the boy on the burning deck.

Perish the Very Thought!

Chicago News: Senator Beveridge is far too young and beautiful to pass into the vice presidency.

Unsolicited Evidence.

New York Times: Bishop Cheshire, of North Carolina, was recently amusing a group of his New York friends with stories about the late Senator Vance of the bishop's state. The senator was famous for turning a joke on his opponent when he practiced as a lawyer, but there was one time, says the bishop, when the tables were the other way.

The senator was defending a man who had been arrested for biting off another fellow's ear during a fight. After the trial had progressed all day, Mr. Vance had been unable to put on the stand a single witness who actually saw the fight, but finally he secured a man who declared he had been there from start to finish.

"And you did not see this defendant bit off this plaintiff's ear, did you?" asked Mr. Vance.

"No, sir," replied the witness.

The senator turned triumphantly to the jury and the judge.

"You see, gentlemen," he cried, "there is a witness who saw the whole fight, and if the ear had been bitten off, surely he would have seen it."

The witness leaned forward in his chair, unsolicited, and said to Mr. Vance in a hoarse whisper that could be heard through the court room:

"But, senator, I seen him spit it out."

Five Dollars For 1902 Pennies.

Philadelphia Telegraph: A Tenth street business man who is somewhat of a joker wished to see just how valuable printers' ink is in attracting crowds. The other day he caused an ad. to be inserted in one of the local dailies to the effect that he would give "$5 for 1902 pennies." Of course, nearly everybody that read the printed notice scraped up all the coppers of last year's coinage they cold find and brought them to the address given, expecting to meet some aged and affable gentleman who had perhaps gone daft on the question of numismatics. On the contrary, they were met by the dapper young business man, and, as each presented a penny bearing last year's date, he or she was cooly and politely asked where the other 1901 were. Those in the crowd who had paid carfare from Wingo-hocking, Swampoodle, Camden and the Neck didn't think the joke a bit funny, and told the man so. Meanwhile a photograph of his business place was indelibly stamped on many of their minds, and this is just what he was after.

Judge Lochren Goes Into Them In His Strike Injunction.

Text of His Discussion of the Freight Handlers' Case.

Judge Lochren's decision in the case against the striking longshoremen, granting an injunction against interfering with the work of Knudsen & Eden, freight handling contractors for the Northern Pacific, has been received at the office of the clerk of the United States court here.

It is a clear and succint line-up of the respective rights and limitations of employer and employe. It is as follows:

"The principles that govern this case are pretty well settled. Of course, there are some differences in the language used by different judges in such cases, arising more from the varying circumstances than from any real difference in the apprehension of what the law is governing cases of this kind.

"The acts herein charged constitute an interference with interstate commerce, and I suppose some matters are stated mainly to show that it is a case over which a federal court has jurisdiction. As congress alone has exclusive jurisdiction over commerce among the states and with foreign countries, it is therefore the duty of the federal courts to safeguard the exercise of interstate commerce, and to see that it has protection under the law.

"Now, there is no question but that an employe may leave the service of his employer without incurring liability to be required by a court of equity to continue in the service; even if he has contracted to serve for a stated length of time. A breach of such contract may give a right of action at law, but performance would not be enforced in equity. A party may leave the service of his employer, and in the same way an employer may discharge a servant for cause or without cause. When a servant leaves, or an employer discharges a servant, the connection of the servant with the service ceases; and this is especially so when the employe leaves of his own accord. He has the right to do so if he demands higher wages and the demands are not so complied with by the employer. He may leave, but if he does, he has no right to insist upon re-employment, or to take means to compel the employer to take him back at higher wages. He has no further interest in the service. Whomsoever the employer may afterwards engage to perform the service is a matter of no concern to the former servant, and he has no right to interfere with the matter any longer. He has left the service, and the only way he can return to it is by making a new contract with the employer, who may receive him back or not, as he sees fit. He has no right to do unlawful acts, or to interfere with the business or property of the employer, to coerce or compel the employer to reinstate him, or to accord him higher wages.

"The right of laborers to consult together and form unions, if they please, for the purpose of their own advancement and for the obtaining of higher wages, is conceded; and, I suppose, employers have the same right to form unions for the purpose of depressing wages, if they shall see fit to do so. It is a voluntary matter in the one side as well as on the other. The employe has no right to coerce the employer to give employment at a rate which he shall name, than an employer has to coerce a servant to work at such a rate as he shall determine and dictate.

"As this case stands, these individual defendants are not in the employment of the complainants. They have no interest in complainants' business, and they have no right to interfere with that business in any way. The testimony shows that they are interfering. They admit it themselves. They admit it to the extent that they have been placing pickets, as they call them, to observe who is being employed, and for the purpose of inducing such employes, whether by anything further than by persuasion or not, to leave the employment of the complainants.

"Fellow workmen may agree together to leave at once the service of their employer; but having done so, and being no longer interested in the matter then, notwithstanding certain dicta in cases that have been read from, it does not seem clear to me that they are acting lawfully when they are persuading the servants of the former employer to break their contracts and leave the service. It is a matter that does not concern them any longer. It is a matter that is apparently injurious to their former employer. It seems to me that such an interference in a matter with which they have no rightful concern, and which is injurious to another, is unlawful.

"But whether it be so or not, it appears in this case, without any dispute, that there have been some unlawful acts, respecting which some of these defendants pleaded guilty to an indictment charging the mwith such unlawful acts in matters complained of here. The affidavits of police officers and others also show that there have been assaults and threats made by defendants who have been employed by the complainants in this work, against new employes, and that these matters have been continued, and there have been some such occurences since the issuing of this injunctional order.

"That the moving of this freight is a can be no question. So, in the transmatter of interstate commerce there ferring of all freight from railroads to shipping in the harbor of Duluth, which is in the extremity of the state, there must be either merchandise or articles of commerce coming into the state from other states, or other countries, or going out of the state to such other places.

"It seems to me that this injunction must be allowed, and I think it may fairly extend to any interference, not only with the employes of the complainants, while they are at work, and in places where they are performing service, but also to interfere with them by pickets, and other ways of waylaying and meddling with them while going to and returning from their work; and especially restraining assaults of any kind by force or violence, or intimidation by threats of force or violence."

WILL VISIT AT HOME

Congressman Bede Will Let Washington Run Itself For a While.

Has Put In Much Time Forming Acquaintances In Departments.

Congressman J. Adam Bede arrived in the city this morning, and left this afternoon for Pine City, where he will spend Sunday with his family.

He left Washington last Sunday, and spoke yesterday at a G. A. R. encampment at Annandale, Wright county. He will address the Chautauqua at Devils Lake, N. D., on patriotic subjects, July 4, and July 7 he will address the Chautauqua at Big Stone Lake, S. D. He will then return to Duluth and will spend some little time here. The object of his visit this morning was to meet Henry F. Greene, for whom he recently secured the position of United States civil service commissioner.

"I have been in Wahington practically four months," said Mr. Bede this morning. "I reached thero Feb. 20, and I have been there ever since with the exception of a week which I took to come to Duluth for the Garfield Republican club banquet. I have been engaged in getting acquainted and cultivating the people with whom I have to come in contact during my service in Washington, such as the president, heads of departments, and especially the heads of the postoffice departments.

"By the way, it should be noted that people seeking more free rural delivery routes should be patient for a time. The investigation of the postal department is causing a slight tie-up in affairs, but when that is over the matter of rural routes will be taken up again. Hereafter they will be systematized so that they will be taken up in the order in which they are asked for, everybody will have a fair show. Of course everything is in a tangle now, but matters will soon be straightened out.

"Hibbing becomes a second-class office July 1, and this means that there will be a much larger allowance for clerk hire, which will permit that office to be conducted in a satisfactory manner. The remarkable growth of Hibbing has been piling up postoffice work while the clerk hire allowances have been left as they were until now, so that even by paying out most of his salary for clerk hire the postmaster was not able to keep the office up to its demands. Under the new deal matters will run smoothly.

"I am glad to hear that the appointment of Henry F. Greene, as civil service commissioner, meets with general approval here. While the office does not carry a particularly large salary, it is very important, especially while Roosevelt is president. He is in almost daily consultation with the members of the commission on appointments, and the commissioners are so close to the president that their positions practically amount to cabinet protfolios. Mr. Greene had a record and a reputation as an expert in this line that helped him amazingly. His appointment was made without the president having first met him personally, which is quite unusual.

"I had the pleasure of riding most of the way home with Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, the next speaker of the house. The extra session is definitely settled upon for Nov 9.

"I have been getting acquainted with people and departments so that I feel sure that I am in a position now to go down there and do business. That is what I have remained there for all this time. Having had the land district matter settled up so that Duluth gets an eminently fair deal, I have accepted the invitation of my wife to come home and visit here, feeling that I had a right to do so."

Suit Over Trees.

Franz O. W. Kohlts has begun an action in district court against Joseph Wargin to recover for a pine tree valued at about $10 and other trees valued at $5, which the defendant is alleged to have destroyed when he removed the pine trees off land claimed by the plaintiff in section 18-50-15. The defendant has filed an answer claiming ownership to the same property and making a counter claim that the plaintiff removed several mountain ash trees worth $3 cash aid destroyed other growing trees in getting them out.

AT WEST DULUTH

The big Fourth of July celebration which was being planned for West Duluth has be nabandoned. It was decided at the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club last evening that it was too late to arrange for a celebration befitting the occasion, and the members agreed to abandon it until next year, when arrangements could be commenced earlier and arrange for a better demonstration. The decision was a disappointment to the members who had been agitating the celebration, but it met with the favor of the majority of the members, who did not believe that a desirable program could be prepared in the limited time at their disposal.

It is likely that the victorious Woodmen team will journey to Hibbing to give an exhibition of their work there. Capt. Salter has received an invitation from that city, but he has not yet definitely decided whether to accept it or not. Hibbing will have the principal celebration on the ranges this year, and it is expected that large crowds from the adjoining towns will participate.

The West Duluth baseball team has also a game scheduled at Hibbing for July 4, and a large delegation from this part of the city may go to that city to spend the holiday.

ADVERTISE WEST DULUTH.

The West Duluth Commercial club has decided to advertise the western portion of the city among the summer excursionists and has had a number of bills printed telling of the industries that are located in that portion of the city, and inviting the excursionists to visit West Duluth while in the city. The bills will be distributed among the excursionists.

It is claimed that the greater part of these visitors never see the western portion of the city, where such an important part of the manufacturing is done, and the Commercial club decided upon this step in order that West Duluth might get its fair share of the trade and advertising that results from the summer excursions.

CHURCH SERVICES.

There will be special music at both services.

Needed Hits Gives Winnipeg the Game Over the Cardinals.

Winnipeg Has High Respect For Playing of Duluth Team.

NORTHERN LEAGUE.

| Clubs— | Won. | Lost. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Winnipeg | 25 | 7 | .781 |
| Grand Forks | 23 | 10 | .700 |
| Crookston | 19 | 14 | .575 |
| Duluth | 12 | 22 | .352 |
| Fargo | 10 | 25 | .312 |
| Superior | 8 | 23 | .257 |

* * *

All those elements that bear on the final result broke in favor of Winnipeg yesterday and another game lingers with the missing.

The hits were even and few. Both teams played a fast and brilliant game. When the champions needed a tally the required swat was forthcoming. When the Cardinals were in the same fix somebody cut large gashes in the air or jammied the ball where it did no good.

Winnipeg is so fascinated with the clever game the Cardinals are playing that the fans up there claim the team is fully as good as their own and cannot see what license the other clubs on the circuit have to beat the Duluth bunch.

The game last evening was pronounced the best seen in Winnipeg this season, the home team winning by a lucky two-sucker in the eighth. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|

Pitchers—Shaw and Bemis. Summary—Earned run, Winnipeg. Stolen base—Kelly. Left on base—Duluth, 9; Winnipeg, 3. Two-base hits—Kennally, Anderson, Bemis. Struck out—By Bemis, 4; by Shaw, 9. Hit by pitched ball—Bemis, Freeman. Struck out—By Bemis, 9; by Shaw, 9. Wild pitch—Bemis. Time of game—1:30. Umpire—Cusick. Attendance, 1125.

* * *

The rowdyism of the Superior team met with an umpire yesterday that refused to tolerate it. The tough guys had never seen an umpire like that before and resented his interference with their system of winning games. In the sixth inning Mr. Owens forfeited the game to Fargo 9 to 0, and went to his hotel. Later he was attacked by First Baseman Abbott, Second Baseman Cassibone and Pitcher Hall. These three players were promptly arrested, locked up in the Fargo city jail and subsequently bailed out by A. Leech, one of the owners of the Fargo team.

The trouble began in the first inning when Abbott was put out of the game for questioning a decision in an ungentlemanly manner. Lager went to first and Hall to right. In the fifth Cassibone began his customary rowdy tactics and was told to get out of the game. Pitcher Morris being the only other Superior man in uniform. Morris seized an opportunity to secretly leave the park during a discussion, evidently trying to force Umpire Owens to let Cassibone continue playing. This was refused and the game forfeited. The score up to that point leaves little doubt but that Fargo would have defeated the rowdies easily.

| Superior | 1 2 0 1 1 0—5 | 7 | 6 |
| Fargo | 2 0 1 2 3 x—8 | 9 | 3 |

Pitchers—Burns and Hall.

In connection with Superior's disgraceful performance at Fargo yesterday the fans of this town have been expecting just such an outbreak. During the Duluth-Superior series the Superior team played such dirty ball that even its own rooters said it would do more injury to the Northern league than anything they could conceive. Two of the Superior fans agreed to back up this paper if a formal protest was made to President Laxdal, but in view of the fact that Superior was beating Duluth in the series it seemed that such a protest might be looked on in some quarters as being inspired by disappointment. It was then decided to let the kick come from some other city and Fargo seems to have made it in a most effectual way.

However, in connection with the dirty work in the Duluth series it might be advisable for the league officials to send Mr. Bray or Mr. Owens here to umpire future series between Duluth and Superior. Umpire Cusick was not asleep during any of the games here, nor is he blind. He, therefore, must have seen the dirty ball playing but gave no evidence of being equal to the emergency. While umpiring the series in Duluth Mr. Cusick stopped over at West Superior at the same hotel with the Superior team, and, while not charging collusion, it seemed that he was overly friendly with the Superior players. In the future it might be wise for an umpire officiating in this city to stop on this side of the bay—just for appearances' sake, if nothing else.

Grand Forks took the series from Crookston yesterday, scoring the only ten runs made in the sixth inning. At that the winners only made five hits and altogether it was one of the freak exhibitions that creep into the game every once and awhile. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Crookston | 1 0 0 0 1 0 0 1 0—3 | 9 | 6 |

Pitchers—Freeman and Harris.

The police department has always treated the newspaper men of the city with the utmost courtesy. In following out this policy they allowed a second-rate team known as the News Tribune aggregation, unusual privileges at Athletic park yesterday. The score:

| | |
|---|---|
| The Worst | 3 0 1 4 8 0 2 3 0—22 |
| The Finest | 0 3 2 0 0 1 4 1 0—11 |

Winnipeg Free Press: "In the Duluth team the Maroons have found opponents in every way worthy of their class. In yesterday's game the visitors outplayed the locals, and when it is considered that they went directly to the ball park after a long threesome train ride, while the Winnipegs were fresh from a good night's rest and a day off, the showing of the visitors was really remarkable."

The Coming 4th of July.

As this popular holiday approaches it brings to mind the terrible struggle of the Colonists for their freedom, recalls heroes of the past and inspires patriotism for the future. Every true American will accordingly assist in making the day's celebration one that will surpass all others. The first essential, however, for a proper celebration is good health. If you are weak and run down and in need of a tonic, we urge you to try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, because it is universally acknowledged to be the best health restorer in existence. It will restore the appetite, purify the blood, strengthen the nerves and cure sour stomach, heartburn, belching, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia and malaria. Women will also find it beneficial as a regulator and strengthgiver.

AMATEUR NINES

Two Games In the Wholesalers' League—Menice Is a Phenom.

Interesting Game Between Freimuths and Big Duluths on Sunday.

WHOLESALERS' LEAGUE.

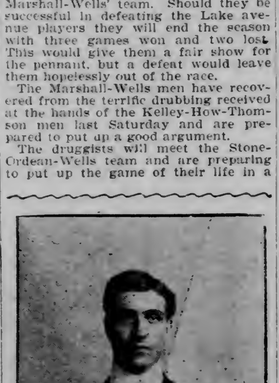
| Kelley-How-Thomson Co. | 2 | 0 | 1000 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Gowan-Peyton-Twohy | 1 | 1 | 500 |
| Marshall-Wells | 1 | 1 | 500 |
| Stone-Ordean-Wells | 1 | 1 | 500 |
| F. A. Patrick & Co. | 2 | 2 | 500 |
| Leithhead Drug Co. | 0 | 2 | 000 |

The above is the standing of the Wholesalers' league to date. Two interesting games are to be played today, however, which will materially change the condition of the percentage tables.

The dry goods men will play their last game of this schedule, meeting the Marshall-Wells' team. Should they be successful in defeating the Lake avenue players they will end the season with three games won and two lost. This would give them a fair show for the pennant, but a defeat would leave them hopelessly out of the race.

The Marshall-Wells men have recovered from the terrific drubbing received at the hands of the Kelley-How-Thomson men last Saturday and are prepared to put up a good argument.

The druggists will meet the Stone-Ordean-Wells team and are preparing to put up the game of their life in a last attempt to get into the race. They have still three games to play and have still a good show for finishing the season near the top of the list. The team has been playing good ball and has only been defeated by narrow margins.



SAMUEL MENICE.

An amateur pitcher of some promise who has been developed by the games in the Wholesalers' league is Menice, of the Kelley-How-Thomson team. It is largely due to his good work in the box that the Fifth avenue men occupy first place in the league. Menice has pitched two games in the league this season, winning them by the score of 33 to 0 and 10 to 4.

The Gowan-Peyton-Twohy nine and the Kelley-How-Thomson men will take a lay-off tomorrow unless a practice game is arranged for. The leaders have won the first position by two of the most decisive victories that have been reported in amateur baseball this season. Menice, the pitcher for the fifth avenue hardware men, is reported to be a wonder, and has proved an unsolvable mystery to the batters who have faced him.

* * *

Probably the most interesting amateur game to be played at the head of the lakes tomorrow will be the one between the Freimuth and the Big Duluth teams, at the Northern league grounds in Superior. The rivalry between the two teams is very keen, and they appear on paper to be very evenly matched. A wager of $50 has been put up by each team on the outcome of the contest. Both teams are making extraordinary efforts to secure the best possible line-up for the game, and it will doubtless be a fast exhibition of baseball. The following is the line-up of the two teams, subject to some changes:

| Freimuths. | Big Duluths. |
|---|---|
| Lowe ..... pitcher ..... | Lovell |
| Wageman ..... catcher ..... | Campbell |
| Lundgren ..... first base ..... | Dennis |
| Carroll ..... second base ..... | Rondeau |
| Jack ..... short stop ..... | Winters |
| Gerard ..... third base ..... | Peterson |
| Stowell ..... outfield ..... | Burke |
| Kelley ..... outfield ..... | Allan |
| Rocklin ..... outfield ..... | Irvine |

Up to the present time the Freimuth team has played four games, winning three and losing one, to Cloquet. The Big Duluths have played five games, winning three and losing two to West Duluth and Cloquet.

* * *

The employes of the various offices in the steel building have two interesting games for this afternoon. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern team will meet the Pittsburg Steamship company and the Duluth & Iron Range nine will lineup against the miners.

The miners and the Iron Range men have a percentage of 1000 each and the other two teams have not yet succeeded in winning a game this season. The percentage table will, therefore, present an altered appearance after today's two games.

BIG LEAGUE GAMES

Baseball Fans Following Pennant Races With Much Interest.

New York Is Baseball Mad—Pirates Doing Wonderful Work.

Exciting races for the pennant in the two big leagues are being watched with absorbing interest by the fans throughout the country, and in Duluth the interest is as keen as anywhere.

In the National league Pittsburg, New York and Chicago are bunched for first place, with the odds slightly in favor of last year's champions from the steel city.

Gotham is baseball mad this season. It has always been a saying among baseball men that New York was the best town in the country to support a winning team, but that a losing team would always get a frost. The truth of this saying is being seen this year in the record-breaking crowds which the National league club is drawing. McGraw's men are playing winning ball and the management is busy counting the shekels.

The Chicago Nationals have been making a desperate effort to gain the first place in the race, but the recent disastrous series with the New Yorkers was a sad blow to their pennant-winning aspirations.

The Pirates are the favorites in the race, and many are willing to bet that they will never again be headed. It is generally admitted that the steel city men are playing at present the fastest and most consistent ball of any of the league teams, and have a comfortable lead over the other two leaders. The recent record of the Pirates in whitewashing three of the best teams in the league in six consecutive games is a sample of the kind of ball the former champions are putting up. New York was blanketed twice, Boston three times and Philadelphia once.

* * *

In the American league Boston and Philadelphia are fighting it out for first place, with St. Louis, Cleveland and Chicago pushing them hard. The recent toboggan slide taken by the Chicago Americans was a sad blow to the fans in that city. From having a cinch on first place the Chicago white stockings slid gracefully into fifth place largely due to his good work in the box that the Fifth avenue men occupy first place in the league. Menice has pitched two games in the league this season, winning them by the score of 33 to 0 and 10 to 4.

Last year's champions, the Athletics, Philadelphia, are playing great ball and see-sawing with the bean-eaters for first place. The Western trip of both the leading teams has resulted in a slight falling off in their percentages.

St. Louis and Cleveland are pushing the leaders closely and only waiting an opportunity to pull them from their positions.

CORNELL'S DAY

Lads From Ithaca Win All Three 'Varsity Races.

Wisconsin Third In Eitgh-Oared By Narrow Margin.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 27.—'Varsity four-oared races, two miles: Cornell, first. Time, 10 minutes 34 seconds; Pennsylvania, second. Time, 10:34 4-5; third, Wisconsin. Time, 10:55 3-5; fourth, Columbia. Time, 11 minutes and 14 seconds. Best previous time in four-oared race, 10 minutes 51 1-5 seconds, made by Pennsylvania in 1900.

Freshman race, eight-oared, two miles: Cornell, first. Time 9 minutes 18 seconds; Syracuse, second. Time, 9 minutes 22 1-5 seconds; Wisconsin, third. Time, 9:32; Columbia, fourth. Time, 9:41; Pennsylvania, fifth. Time, 9:45. Best previous time 9:19 1-2, made by Yale in 1895.

'Varsity race, four miles, eight-oared: Cornell, first. Time, 18 minutes 57 seconds; eGorgetown, second. Time, 19 minutes 27 seconds; Wisconsin, third. Time, 19:29 2-5; Pennsylvania, fourth. Time, 19:33 3-5 seconds; Syracuse, fifth. Time, 19:36 2-5; Columbia, sixth. Time, 19:54 1-5. Best previous time, 18 minutes 43 1-5 seconds, made by Cornell in 1901.

For the first time in years there were distinct surprises in the intercollegiate races here yesterday. Two crews of practically unknown quantities, and whose coaches had not predicted, and had not hoped for, them anything better than fourth or fifth places in their respective races, each finished second in the two most important races of the day. The Syracuse university crew took such close honors in the freshman race that for the last half mile it was a serious question whether her boys would not pull to victory. Georgetown university, in the 'varsity race, while finishing a very bad second to the phenomenal crew put in the race by Cornell university, walked away from the other four crews in the race, old timers, with the exception of Syracuse, in a manner that made the rowing sharps simply throw up their hats for joy. Columbia university crews, from which very much had been promised, finished in the worst possible shape, although in the betting, in the general predictions and in the prognostications of her coach, she was supposed to have an excellent chance in both the four-oared and 'varsity races. As it was, she finished last in the four-oared race, being beaten out even by Wisconsin, which had put a green crew in the field in a shell borrowed from Columbia. In the freshman race she was the fourth crew, and a poor fourth; Wisconsin was third, with Pennsylvania, from whom nothing had been expected, as her crew had been materially changed in the last few days, a close fifth.

In the 'varsity race Columbia finished last, being at least six lengths behind Syracuse, the fifth crew in the race, and at least four out of her eight men collapsing in the boat as the finish line was crossed.

It was, as it has been for the past two years, Cornell day. As in last year's regatta, Cornell won all three races, and while only one record was broken, it was the general consensus last night that had the Cornell 'varsity crew been hard pressed, the record would have been broken even in the race. The 'varsity race, as a matter of fact, was a miserable walk-over, Cornell taking the lead before the mile post had been reached and rowing away from her competitors in a manner so easy that at no time was she pressed for the third place. The result was that in the mile where it pushed she would have rowed from 31 to 33 strokes per minute, she held a 28-clip almost to the finish, crossing the line at not over 30 strokes per minute and fully nine lengths ahead of all competitors. As has been indicated, the work of Georgetown in the 'varsity race was a great surprise. Her crew, instead of being, as in previous years here, vacillating in stroke and form, was in both respects extremely steady.

At the second mile, when it was supposed that both Georgetown and Syracuse would have been practically finished for any place, except fifth or sixth, this remarkable crew, with a slight increase of stroke, pulled steadily out of the bunch and while absolutely unable to reduce the enormous lead of Cornell, shoved their superiority over all the other crews in the race.

During the first half of the race second and third places vere contested for by the crews, Cornell safely in first place, in two divisions, Georgetown, Wisconsin and Columbia, for second and Pennsylvania and Syracuse fighting gamely for third.

Just above the bridge, however, the spell was broken and the long pull began to sort out the superior mettle. The rear eights crowded upon Columbia, which was falling behind. First Syracuse and then Pennsylvania passed Columbia, whose spurt at the outset had taken all they had and which even finally dropped far to the rear.

The brilliant feature of the race was the contest for fourth place, which put Wisconsin upon her best efforts even to defend third. Down the last mile they came in a bunch, amid the roaring of cheers, the deafening din of whistles, Cornell leading by a good ten lengths, easily pulling a stroke not exceeding 30 to the minute, eGorgetown safely second, Wisconsin holding third by the output of her best efforts, and Pennsylvania all but in a dead heat for fourth place, Columbia hopelessly in the rear. And so they finished.

GETTING IN SHAPE

Lacrosse Players Training Hard For Fourth of July Contest.

Port Arthur Will Send Big Contingent With the Team.

The Duluth Lacrosse team has an off day today. The men are practising hard for the game with the strong Fort William team next Saturday, July 4. A big excursion is to be brought down from the Canadian city by the steamer Easton, and it is likely that a large number of lacrosse enthusiasts will come down to help celebrate the Fourth and attend the lacrosse game to encourage their home team.

Fort William has for a number of years placed a fast team in the field, and this year's twelve is fully up to the mark, having defeated Port Arthur and other Canadian teams.

The line-up of the Duluth team has not yet been announced, but it is certain that there will be a number of changes since the first game with St. Paul played here. New material has been added and the team will not only show a change in its make-up but will exhibit the effect of several weeks' hard practice and the experience of two close contests. The men have improved wonderfully in their team work under able coaching, and they are confident of a victory over the Canadians.

The home players are very anxious to take the game from the Fort William twelve and are making every effort to put a winning team in the field. They feel that lacrosse is at a critical stage in Duluth, and that a win would mean greatly increased interest in the game. Two or three prominent Duluth merchants are backing the team, and the boys are anxious to get together a team that will merit such interest on the part of the devotees of the game.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Low Temperature Has Curtailed Trade In Some Lines.

New York, June 27.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review says: No definitely unfavorable element is apparent in the business situation but there are several uncertainties that engender conservatism in regard to distribution of merchandise the long period of low temperature has curtailed trade in dry goods, clothing and other seasonable lines.

Stocks have accumulated and prospects for semi-annual inventories are not altogether encouraging. Railway earnings thus far available for June surpass last year by 10.10 per cent and exceed those of 1901 by 17.4 per cent. After further moderate concessions in prices of iron and steel, especially in pig iron and partly finished shapes, the market has steadied and there are indications that no additional reductions of consequence are probable for the present. Buyers are still uncertain as to whether the bottom has been reached and there is no eagerness to place contracts. Concessions are no longer readily obtained, however, and the tone is improving.

While it is well known that a large amount of new machinery is specified in plants in course of rection, or contemplated, there is an inclination to delay the placing of contracts as long as possible. Much of interest has developed during the past week in regard to the foreign situation. Contracts for steel rails were placed abroad, presumably because of early shipment required while rebate of duty on materials for manufacture and export encouraged foreign trade, which has begun to revive as the domestic market quiets.

Manufacturers of cotton goods have again advanced quotations in several lines, notably sheetings, although there is no attempt to secure prices in proportion to the present position of the raw material. Production is being steadily curtailed and supplies of goods will soon be abnormally light. No improvement is reported in the character of reports from jobbers or retailers at chief points of distribution, except that moderate success has attended the semi-annual clearance sales by local jobbers. New lines of light weight woolen for next spring are still confined to narrow and low grade goods. Only a fair supplementary demand is noted for men's heavy weight woolens. Wood is unchanged and quiet. New England shoe shops are busy on fall footwear, with sufficient orders on hand to assure activity for some time.

Failures this week were 223 in the United States, against 200 last year and 19 in Canada, compared with 20 a year ago.

TENNIS IS ACTIVE

Tournament at the Endion Club Grounds Is Progressing.

Seven Players Survive Third Round—Semi-Finals Next Week.

The attention of the tennis players of the city has been centered during the week on the tournament which is in progress on the courts of the Endion Tennis club on East Superior street. The third round is now in progress.

The play has been dragging, some of the players being unable to get together to play off their games. It was hoped to have the finals run off this afternoon, but this will be impossible, as there still remains one game in the second round to be played. Hopkins and Bagley have yet to decide which shall enter the third round. The other players who have survived the second round are Peck, Palmer, Grady, Ingalls, Graff, Ames and Gridley.

Only one game was played yesterday afternoon, Ames defeating Gridley in two straight sets 6-3 and 6-0. Ames thus enters the semi-finals with three well-won victories to his credit.

Hopkins and Bagley will play their game this afternoon and the winner will meet Peck to decide who shall enter the semi-finals.

Grady, who has entered the third round without playing a game, having won all of his matches by default, will play Palmer, and Ingalls and Graff will come together.

Next week promises some fine exhibition of tennis when the semi-finals commence. The management will make an attempt to have the games played without the delays which have so marked the tournament during the past week, and the winner will have a run for his money before he secures the handsome tennis racquet which is offered as a prize.

COMPROMISE IS EFFECTED

Between Railroads and State Commission on Freight Rates.

St. Paul, June 27.—A compromise has been reached in the controversy between the railroads and the state railroad and warehouse commission involving the question of a reduction of rates on coal and lumber from Duluth to various points in the state. The commission inaugurated the investigation of the rate at the instance of a merchant at Litchfield, who complained that the rates were excessive. Since last January numerous hearings have been held, and for two days past the commissioners and the representatives of the railroads have been endeavoring to reach an agreement satisfactory to both and which would not entail an appeal to the courts to test the validity of the rates established. Late yesterday a compromise was agreed upon.

The agreement calls for a reduction on lumber, beginning at about forty miles and grading up to seventy-five miles, where the reduction shall be 15 per cent to all points beyond. It also calls for practically a 10 per cent reduction on hard coal rates for all distances up to 300 miles. Bituminous coal is not to take a higher rate than hard coal. This rate, however, will not apply between Duluth and the Twin Cities, the commission finding that the present rates are as low or lower than between any two points in the country similarly situated. At a few points the reduction in coal rates will not apply, but in each of these cases there is at present a rate of less than .8 cents per ton per mile.

The roads taking part in the conference were the Chicago & Northwestern, Great Northern, Minneapolis & St. Louis, Omaha, Rock Island, Chicago Great Western and Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

Great Northern Low Rates.

The Great Northern railway offers the following very low rates for the round trip:

Saratoga, N. Y., July 4 and 5, $30.15.

Atlanta, Ga., July 5, 6 and 7, $36.95.

Detroit, July 14 and 15, $16.35.

O'DEA DUE SOON

Wisconsin University Team Trainer to Arrive the Coming Week.

Boat Club Will Have No Regatta During This Summer.

Preparations have been completed for the opening dance to be given this evening in the new quarters of the Duluth Boat club. The large hall has been decorated in a manner suitable to the ocasion and everything points to a very successful opening. Local society will turn out in force to the event, which will be one of the most brilliant of the summer. Over 400 people are expected to be present to avail themselves of the opportunity offered by the boat club to inspect the luxurious new quarters on the point.

The dance this evening is but the first of a number of similar events to be given during the summer months. It is planned by the members of the club to give a dance at least once every two weeks and possibly every week. The new club house has an excellent hall for the purpose and the dances promise to be most enjoyable affairs.

The members of the crews are not yet in active training for the season. Coach O'Dea is expected to arrive in Duluth about July 1 and the men will then commence their work under his watchful eye. The big eight-oared shell has not yet been launched this season, although the four doubles and single shells have been out a number of times for practice spins. A number of new men have made their appearance and there is much promising material from which Coach O'Dea can doubtless develop some fine crews.

There will be no regatta held in Duluth this summer by the boat club, nor will any teams from the Duluth members feel that they cannot afford the expense after the heavy expenditure to which they have been put in the construction of their new club house and it is the intention to lie low Boat club visit other cities. The this season until the finances of the club are on a sounder basis. The men will, however, put in some hard practice and it is hoped that sufficient good material will be developed to warrant the sending of crews to neighboring regattas during the summer of 1904, and possibly make arrangements for holding a regatta in Duluth, open to competition of crews from neighboring cities.

A SLUMP IN WHEAT

Decline In Wheat That Runs Close to Two Cents.

Flax Shared In the Weakness and Oats Also Dropped.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 27.—The bulls in wheat are not having an interrupted course their way. Yesterday there was an advance averaging about 1½c, today a drop that runs close to 2c. St. Louis, which is the point from which the bull sentiment has been flowing, lost most heavily, the decline there being 2⅜c for the July and 2c for the September. Chicago showed losses of 1⅝c for the July and 1⅜-⅝c for the September. Northwestern markets were about the same as Chicago, Minneapolis dropping 2c on the July and 1⅝c on the September and Duluth 2c on the July and 1⅝-⅜c on the September.

The Northwestern markets do not join in the bull movement, although it is the crop situation in their own territory that is creating the bulge. It is a movement which emanates from Chicago and the Southwest. There has been heavy buying in Duluth, but it is for outside account and not prompted by any reports that emanate from here. Practically the same is said to be true of Minneapolis. The character of many of the reports used to force prices up is shown by one which was in circulation yesterday. It was to the effect that Oliver Dalrymple was authority for the statement that his farms would not yield from one-eighth to one-quarter of a crop. A telegram to Mr. Dalrymple sent from here this morning brought the response that what he did say was that not more than one-eighth or one-quarter at the most, of the acreage was even at a standstill now, but the crop generally is promising very well.

The break in the market today was due to the better weather condition in the Northwest. The weather map issued this morning did not show much that was favorable but later reports of showers in various sections were received and all points reported the weather as threatening. This led to considerable realizing by interests that hardly care to carry grain over Sunday in such a market as this.

The Liverpool market was ½d higher. Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 216 cars, and at Chicago 24, a total of 240 cars, against 254 last week and 347 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 304,000 bus., last year 460,000 bus. Shipments, 363,000 bus., last year 340,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 242,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 654,000 bus., last year 301,000 bus. Shipments 197,000 bus., last year 156,000 bus. Clearances were 171,000 bus., July corn in Chicago broke 1⅜c. In Liverpool it was ⅜ to ½d lower. July oats fell 2¼c.

Trading in the Duluth market was rather quiet as compared with the past day or two. The opening of September was at 79¾c asked, but the first sale at a moment later was at 79c. From that point it fell to 78¾c at 9:30, rallied to 79c at 9:47 and then dropped to 78c at 10:50. After that it worked back and forth between 78¾c and 79c and closed at 78¾c.

Cash sales were rather large for Saturday, aggregating 35,000 bus. Prices were unchanged at July price for No. 1 northern and 1½c under for No. 2.

Flax shared in the weakness of wheat, the being induced by the better weather. July fell 2c to $1.03 and closed there. The high point was $1.04. September closed with the same loss and October was off 1¾c.

There was a decline in oats of ¼c.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 hard, 86c; No 1 northern, 84½c; No. 2 northern, 83c; July, 83¼c; September, 79¾c; December, 75¼c. Flax, in store, $1.02; to arrive, $1.03; on track, $1.03; July, $1.03; September $1.04½; October, $1.04¾; November, $1.06. Oats, to arrive, 34½-⅝c; on track, 35-⅝c, 29c. Rye, to arrive, 52c; on track, 52c. Barley, 35@51c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 50; last year 38; oats, 8; rye, 1; barley, 2; flax, 33, last year, 7.

Receipts—Wheat, 43,941; oats, 100; flax, 19,616.

Shipments—Wheat, 1064.

Oats opened lower along with the weakness in other grains, but July especially weak, that option being from 1c to 1¼c lower at 41¾c to 42¾c, while September was down ⅞c to 39-⅝@⅞c at 34½c to 34¾@½c. Liquidation was quite general the first half hour and July continued on the down grade selling off to 41c. Shorts covered on the decline and caused a better tone. Local receipts were 200 cars.

Provisions were quiet with opening prices steady in spite of the lower prices in hogs. The market received some support from many who sold yesterday, but prices showed little change. September pork opened unchanged, at $16.60; September lard was unchanged to 2½c up at $8.42½ to $8.45, while ribs were unchanged to 5c lower.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: "If it were only a crop problem now I should feel inclined to say wheat had advanced enough," says Theron Logan. "There is usually exaggeration in describing crop troubles of any sort. But there are some features to the situation about which there is no room for dispute. We know the stocks everywhere are inadequate if we eliminate the No. 1 northern wheat here at Chicago, which is at a premium, there is about 1,200,000 bus wheat to supply the short sellers and to serve every other purpose the crop may afford. We know there is only 18,000,000 bus in the visible, with the prospect of some further decreases. It is possible that very small stocks may carry the market higher, irrespective of how much exaggeration there may be at the moment in the stories of crop troubles."

That the export demand is not having anything to do with the wheat advance in these days is made apparent by the Southwestern situation. Wheat is offered at Galveston at around 78¾c September shipment, or about 5c cheaper than the relative price at Kansas City. If this situation continues the wheat through the Southwest, except from a limited area which can only ship to Galveston, will come north to Kansas City rather than move directly South, as it did last year.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market is active and weak. It is a natural reaction after so great an advance and there was, moreover, a few light showers in the Northwest. The situation in that direction naturally makes the market a nervous one. The trade is paying more attention at the moment to the crop conditions than they are to the legitimate situation. There is no change in the general character of advices from the winter wheat thresher. Views as to the extent of the damage already done in the Northwest are conflicting, but we are rather of the opinion that the damage so far is not great. That crop has, however, been damaged, is acknowledged. We are inclined to think that there is not much money on the short side. On the other hand wheat may easily sell much higher. We would buy it on the breaks. A moderate decrease in the visible is likely on Monday.

Corn—The market was active and weak. This, too, is a natural reaction from the rather strained conditions of the market. The weakness in wheat also was a factor. Receipts in this market are liberal. There is no question but that the crop generally is very uneven and the weather is decidedly unfavorable. We regard the price of corn as the most bearish factor connected with it.

Oats—Market is weak and lower. This also was partially in sympathy with the weakness in other grains. Receipts are pretty fair and the demand hardly as good as it has been. Reports generally indicate that the crop is doing well. Unless strongly supported by strength in other grains we are inclined to think oats are high enough and should be sold. With good crop prospects, receipts here are likely to increase.

• • •

W. H. Laidley & Co.: Wheat—Reports of rain in Northwest where most needed brought a lower openingand market sold off rapidly two cents a bushel. It is only natural that profit-taking should take place after such an advance as we have had and that local longs would not care to carry their wheat over Sunday. Any favorable weather will bring lower prices again Monday, while a continuation of drought in Northwest is liable to bring higher prices. Sentiment is not so bullish and one man's opinion is as good as another's. It looks as though St. Louis would get all the wheat they want.

Corn also opened somewhat lower and continued to sag off in sympathy with wheat and free realizing. Receipts considerably in excess of estimates and show good proportion of contract grade. With favorable weather somewhat lower prices should be seen.

Oats followed other markets, opening lower and selling off quite rapidly. They are in the same position as other markets. Farmers have held off marketing their crop and failure to receive high price for it.

McKinnon of Chicago: I still feel that for the time being, at least, wheat profits should be taken on the hard spots. There is quite a little company on the bull side and a reaction from these prices would be in the natural order of things.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

General Liquidation In Wheat Caused Weak Prices.

Chicago, June 27.—General liquidation of September wheat by longs, who seemed afraid to carry their lines over Sunday resulted in a weak opening in wheat prices that month, being 3@3½c to ¾@⅞c lower at 79¼c to 79⅝c, while July was unchanged to ⅝c lower at 82c to 82½c. The break at St. Louis, Minneapolis and Duluth, together with the rather indifferent cables, was the cause of much of the selling, but the favorable harvest weather in the Southwest was also an influence. The market continued weak the first hour, September declling to 78¾-⅞c with July down to 81⅞c. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 216 cars, which, with local receipts for the three points of 240 cars, against 254 cars last week and 347 cars a year ago.

Liquidation continued the entire session and the market was inactive, July selling down to 80½c and September to 78c. The close on July was 1⅝c lower at 80⅝c, with September down 1⅞c at 78¾@⅞c.

Corn opened weak on lower cables and in sympathy with wheat, July being ½@⅝c lower at 50⅝c to 50¾c, with September off ⅜c to ⅜c, at 50⅜c to 50¾c. There was heavy liquidation by local longs who were influenced to some extent by the liberal receipts, while commission houses had selling orders and with little support, prices declined still further, September selling off to 50¼@⅜c, with July selling at the same figure. Covering by shorts caused a fair rally later in the day. Local receipts were 608 cars, with 74 of contract grade.

The market followed wheat in its decline and July closed 1⅝c down at 49⅝c, with September 1⅞c lower at 50c.

STEADY IN STOCKS

Increased Surplus Shown By Bank Statement Caused Strength.

Trading Was Dull and Only Small Blocks Changed Hands.

New York, June 27.—Pennsylvania opened ⅞ higher than last night and then reacted ⅜. Baltimore & Ohio and Missouri Pacific rose ⅝. Small fractional gains were shown elsewhere. But few stocks were traded in at all and those only in small blocks. Stock prices improved slowly on a light demand. St. Paul, Erie second preferred, Amalgamated Copper and American Car rose 1@1¼ and other leaders were fractionally above the opening prices. A few losses were scored, including 3 in Lackawanna, 1½ in Ice preferred and 1 in Metropolitan Street Railway and Toledo, St. Louis & Western. There were fractional reactions throughout before 11 o'clock. The increased surplus disclosed by the bank statement caused Pacifics to harden. The movement from the rally was unimportant. Pennsylvania advanced to 124⅞. Hocking Valley rose ¼ and reacted a point and the preferred rose 1⅛. Wheeling & Lake Erie and Railroad Steel Spring preferred gained 1 and Iowa Central preferred and Denver & Rio Grande preferred ex. dividend lost 1. The closing was dull and steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was dull and firm. Price are generally fractionally higher. The volume of trade is small and mainly professional. The bank statement is favorable and shows an expansive tendency. The market is still without any pressure from long stocks. While we do not look for any great activity for some weeks to come, we still regard good stocks as worth the money and think they should be bought on the soft spots.

• • •

W. H. Laidley & Co.: Stocks opened firm at slightly higher prices on the strength of the London market, and although very dull, showed firm undertone and closed around the top prices at a fair advance over yesterday. The bank statement was very favorable. We do not believe in any big bull movement at the present time, as bankers do not seem to care to be loaded up with loans which they will be obliged to call in this fall. We believe the market will remain a trading affair and that stocks can be bought on any little decline for small profits.

• • •

Chicago-Record Herald: Very little is expected of the United States Steel preferred dividend in the market this summer. The syndicate that is managing the conversion plan is still busy buying the preferred stock selling the bonds against it. The privilege is enjoyed only by the syndicate itself and the bond conversion scheme, so far as it applied to outside preferred shareholders, expired several weeks ago. The syndicate alone has the right to convert preferred stock into bonds. J. P. Morgan & Co. as managers of the steel syndicate are picking up thousands of shares of preferred stock in the market, but at the same time they are endeavoring to keep the stock down to a level that guarantees a fair profit between it and the bonds. The syndicate will continue to arbitrate between the preferred stocks and the bonds until the first of next October, and not until then do shareholders expect to witness any activity in the issues of the United States Steel corporation.

• • •

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The market showed some disposition to rally but there is very little buying power. Heavy selling of Pennsylvania said to be by the underwriters against their rights, has unsettled the market for some days. Today being the last day of said rights, it is predicted that prices will advance 5 or 6 points next week. If so the rest of market will doubtless follow. My opinion is that yesterday was the day to buy for good profits next week. There are thousands of people waiting for strength and activity to come. Much of the July disbursements will soon be put into securities especially if stocks look strong. Purchases of the leading shares are strongly indicated.

• • •

Bache to Paine, Webber & Co.: Cheerfulness characterized the opening this morning. There was a combination of circumstances which inspired a better feeling, among which was the publication of a statement of the Erie, showing an enormous increase in earnings for the month of May and the successful placing of the new Pennsylvania stock issue. London was also an encouraging factor sending higher prices for American securities. The stock market continues the same old dullness, which has been in evidence for some time. After the appearance of the bank statement, the market showed renewed strength and the close was firm.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today opened steady and inclined to be strong on good buying in Pennsylvania. Later the market became very dull and transactions light. The bank statement was really better than expected and caused some little short covering. We look for a somewhat better market next week as the Pennsylvania subscriptions are satisfactory and after July 1 disbursements there will be lots of money for investment. The money market remains quiet, which is a good sign. The feeling is more hopeful.

• • •

Waldorf to Co. Commission Co.: Speculative interests tonight suggest continued dullness. Professional speculators are generally bearish while representative commission brokers are as a rule conservatively bullish. Railroad men too are more optimistic, the exception being the Rock Island people, who are said to hold skeptical views as to the immediate future. Quite a determined effort is being made to break Pennsylvania below 120 and it emanates from the Wall bear party. But the men who should be in touch with the principals behind the steady buying of this stock on a scale down feel that the bear campaign in it will in the end, prove costly to its backers. The privilege subscription to buy the issue of the Pennsylvania stock expires tomorrow and reiterated this evening that the syndicate which underwrote it will be called on to take but little if any of the new securities. The passing of this affair is expected to have a good influence market-wise and there are some who believe that it will be the signal for a sharp recovery throughout the list. The short interest being large liquidation no longer urgent and needed warmer weather being apparently at hand an early upturn in prices is considered probable. Despite predictions of a poor bank statement competent opinion is that financial conditions at the lose of the week are much better than a week ago. The large receipts of cash from the interior are regarded as significant as the sharp drop in exchange.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The whole market showed more strength today than for a long time past. The bank statement was better than expected. Coppers acted as well as anything on the list. Traders seem to be taking a more hopeful view but if the rally carries pices some higher we do not think it advisable to hold on to stocks too firmly, however, on strong rallies would sell and be prepared to buy back on the reactions that are sure to follow.

• • •

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Our market continues very dull but with a stronger undertone in sympathy with strength of Amalgamated. At this level there appears to be no stocks for sale and any activity would be on oupward side.

Washington, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorney General W. B. The state of Minnesota is claiming this property, consisting of some thirty acres, under the swamp land act. It appears that a valuable iron mine is located upon it, and the claim of the state to it is being fought. The surveyor general of the state has made a report favorable to the state's contention, and the contending parties have been so notified. The parties interested will be allowed thirty days in which to file a formal protest, and then the case will be considered by the commissioner of the general land office and the secretary of the interior.

Lumber Shipments and Coal Receipts Beginning to Pick Up.

Coal Boats Lying at Anchor Waiting to Get to Dock.

Lumber shipments and coal receipts are the feature in the shipping of the port at present. After a temporary lull the coal shipments are again arriving in large number and the boats are beginning to pile up at the docks. Already one or two are anchored unable to find docks at which to unload and a large fleet is expected tomorrow and Monday. It is not thought that the blockade will again be as serious as the recent one when some vessels were delayed for from three to ten days.

Lumber shipments are also showing an increase over last week when the lumber business from the head of the lakes was almost at a standstill. Five vessels have arrived in the harbor during the past twenty-four hours for lumber and a number of others are on their way up the lake.

TUGMEN HAVE THE FEVER.

The tugmen in the employ of the Great Lakes Towing company have organized a baseball team, and are getting into shape to meet all comers. The nine cooks on the nine different tugs have challenged the eighteen firemen to a finish fight, the game to continue until the ball is lost in the bay. The challenge has been accepted a game will take place as soon as the details of the battle are completed.

CHARTERED A SCHOONER.

Menominee, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—As a result of the deadlock between merchants at Milwaukee and Green Bay on the one hand and the Goodrich line on the other, is the charter of the schooner Charles Wyman by Smith Thorndyke & Brown to carry groceries between their houses in Milwaukee and Marinette. The schooner is now making her first trip. Chicago merchants may follow the same course. The Wyman has been in the lumber trade for maly years, but is in good condition.

DEALS IN ACREAGE FEATURE IN REALTY

Farm Land Deals Active This Week and Visitors In City Buy Considerable Amount—Summer Home Suburb at New Duluth Is Platted.

Sales of acreage are more frequent at the present time than of local realty; in fact, the feature of the real estate market for the past week, if there has been any feature, was the sale of farming lands near the city. The Norwegian Lutheran convention in this city brought hundreds of ministers and delegates of that denomination from all over the Northwest, and the Boston & Duluth Farm Land company alone has sold between $7000 and $8000 to those who were attending. A number of others have been making inquiries and looking over lands, with the promise that they will be heard from at a very near date.

Sales of local realty, both in improved and unimproved property, have been made right along this past week, but the market has not yet pulled out of the summer quiet period, and some of the real estate men are taking advantage of the lull in business to take their summer vacations.

* * *

A. C. Volk & Co. have platted Riverside Park addition to Duluth, and the property is being put on the market. The new park addition is a delightful location for summer homes, situated along the St. Louis river just above New Duluth. The lots all front on Hudson boulevard and carry riparian rights. The land has an elevation of about fifty feet above the river, on a plateau which offers a splendid view of the whole river valley. There are forty-two lots in all, each containing about half an acre, and to which the firm is guaranteeing absolute titles under the Torrens system of title registration. Some of the advantages enumerated for this new park locality are postoffice, telegraph, telephone, electric light, railroad and steamboat facilities.

* * *

Stryker, Manley & Buck report a fairly good business in the sale of lots and improved property for the past few days, considering the generally quiet period. The firm has sold lots on Sixteenth avenue east to C. A. Peterson, L. Wanvick and C. F. Peterson, each of whom will improve with new dwellings; three houses in West Duluth, one to G. A. Rakowsky for $900, one to Arthur Graves for $1100, and another to Frank Moran for $800, the buyers being represented by J. Allan Scott, of West Duluth; a house and lot on the boulevard, owned by Philadelphia parties, to Louis Dorvall, for $750.

* * *

The Lakeside Land company has made a recent sale of three houses in Lakeside and has a number of other deals now negotiating. W. C. Sargent reports the close of a number of small deals, including several lots, on Park Point.

* * *

Mr. Lyons, of W. M. Prindle & Co., reports a very good business for the firm during the week. Among the sales were a store building at the corner of Seventeenth avenue west and Piedmont avenue, for $2400; a lot at the corner of Twenty-ninth avenue west and Second street, for $1200, and a house and lot on Eighteenth avenue east, for $1250.

* * *

Hill & Bray, architects, have plans completed for two frame residences on East First street for George Crosty & Co.

* * *

J. J. Wangenstein, architect, has received bids for the addition to the Floan & Leveroos store, near the corner of Third avenue west and Superior street and the contract will be awarded today. Mr. Wangenstein has completed plans for two ten-room modern frame residences for John C. McGreevy, on the southeast corner of First street and Nineteenth avenue east, also plans for a modern brick residence for A. L. McGregor on Jefferson street, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second avenue east, and plans for a four-room school building at the new town of Nashwauk, on the range. Plans will be out next month for a fine brick residence for J. M. O. Tufty, on Second street, between Fourth and Fifth avenues east.

* * *

Joseph Vincent has leased from the William Lindeke company and others a vacant lot on the upper side of Superior street between Seventh and Eighth avenues west and has begun the erection of a two-story brick building. By the terms of the lease the building is to cost $4000 and is to become the property of the lessors after fifteen years from July 1 next. The building will be used for saloon and hotel purposes.

* * *

The residence property at the corner of Twelfth avenue east and Third street, owned by Elizabeth S. Morrow, has been sold to Evangeline Novon for a consideration of $2950.

* * *

Dr. D. D. Murrray has purchased from W. S. Smith for a consideration of $4500 the residence property he now occupies on East Superior street. The property is described as lot 7, block 54, Endion division.

* * *

George H. Crosby says regarding the real estate situation: I can report great inquiry for loans for building and improvement purposes and have placed a number of loans within the last ten days. Have sold a modern house in Lester Park and 160 acres of land, to an outside party, on French river. During the last week I had the pleasure of seeing some of our Eastern clients and they expressed themselves as very sanguine over the future of Duluth. I have a number of deals under hand, some of which will be made public in the course of a couple of weeks.

* * *

The Dickerman Investment company has purchased of F. S. Easton lots 5 to 10, inclusive, in the re-arrangement of block 15, Highland Park addition. The consideration was $3600.

* * *

H. D. Campbell has made a large acreage sale of lands in 59-20 and 60-20 to F. W. Boness for $8750.

* * *

Another large acreage sale of the week was of lands in 61-17 and 12, 13, 14, 15-18 from Alexander McDonnell to the Interstate Iron company for $9500.

* * *

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY

THE JUNE GROOM'S SONG.

I'm sick at the song of the bride and her bloom—
Just harken to me for a while—I'm the groom.
I know I have no right in the case, but alas—
That's right—all I get in the case is a lass;
I know I'm supposed to be silent and meek,
But, hang it! I'm bound to get reckless and speak.
They're buzzing about what the bride is to wear;
They're quarreling over the bridal bouquet;
I listen in silence in all that they say,
They treat me as though I was chained to my doom—
Alack! What am I? I am only a groom.
The best I can don is some black and some white,
A horse collar vest and a bad case of fright;
My hair will be combed as it's combed every day,
I'd surely get mobbed if I lugged a bouquet;
I've got to be meek and try bravely to smile—
The meekness will stand me in hand after awhile.
Sing on of the beautiful bride and her bloom;
But don't mention me—I am only the groom;
Just say, "he dressed in conventional black,"
Then kindly forget me, and hasten right back
To rave o'er the bride till your black in the face—
I'm only the groom, and I'm learning my place.
—S. W. GILLIAN, in Baltimore American.

The wedding of Miss Clara Marian Hector and James F. Walsh Tuesday evening was a handsome and beautifully appointed affair. Pilgrim Congregational church was the scene of the wedding, and in the way it lends itself to the decorator's art. The church was decorated by a number of women of the church, complimentary to Miss Hector, who has been the contralto soloist there for a number of years, and in the scheme white and green were used with charming effect. From the organ loft nets were hung and the greens and white flowers were strung in these, giving an impression of daintiness in the whole. The flowers used were snowballs and syringas and the graceful bridal wreath. The pews were marked off with a single graceful peony at each.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. J. N. McKindley and Miss Rena Smith gave a musical program, and at 8:15 the wedding march was played and the party entered by the east aisle. The ushers, Messrs. John F. Martin, C. P. McCormick, Elmer Whyte and L. Keith, of Eau Claire, were followed by the maid of honor, Miss Stella Hector, and the bride walking alone. They were met at the altar by Mr. Walsh and his best man, Charles O. Baldwin, and Dr. S. P. Long of the First Methodist church performed the ceremony.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding march from "Lohengren" was played and the party left by the west aisle.

The bride's gown was a very beautiful one of cream crepe de chine, with underdresses of taffeta and chiffon. Real lace and pearl trimmings were the garnishings. The gown was made with a long train cut in points and the bride wore a veil. The bridesmaid's gown was of sheer batiste trimmed with lace and she carried American Beauties.

Following the service at the church an informal reception was given at the home, 1017 East Third street.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh left on the North West for an Eastern trip. The bride's going away gown was of panne finished cheviot trimmed with black, and a blue hat. After their return Mr. and Mrs. Walsh will be at home on Park Point, where they have built a cottage.

One of the most charming of the home weddings of the week was that of Miss Hannah Theresa Neff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Neff, to Francis Sydney Cullyford. The wedding occurred Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride, 610 Fifth avenue west. The house was prettily decorated, wild flowers being used entirely. The ceremony was performed at 2 o'clock under an arch of greens thickly studded with wild roses. In the hall greens and blue flags made an effective decoration.

The service was read by Dr. Long of the Methodist church. The attendants were Miss Katherine Neff and Alex Cullyford. The bride was gowned daintily in white, trimmed in lace, and the bridesmaid's gown was of champaign-colored crepe de chine.

Mr. and Mrs. Cullyford left on a late afternoon train for St. Louis, Mo., where they will be at home after Aug. 1.

NEW YEAR CALLS IN 1871.

This is a picture that brings up laughable recollections among the old residents of Duluth.

It is a party of Duluth society young men of 1871, making New Year calls. Not only does the recollection of the old fashion of going about from house to house on New Year's day bring up memories of the past, but the peculiar manner in which these seven young men made their calls is interesting.

Jan. 1, 1871, these young men discovered that some other young men had got in ahead of them and hired the only nice rig in town for their own use. Not to be outdone, they got a wagon and an ox-team, and started out, using birch bark calling cards.

They stopped in front of the Clark house, Duluth's old hostelry, which stood on the north side of Superior street, between First and Second avenues west, about where the Metropolitan block now stands, and had this picture taken. One item that does not show in the picture was recalled by one of them this morning. The nigh ox had just come out of the woods, where a large raw spot had been worn on its shoulder. This was covered up with a large square of canvas.

George Spencer, now of the grain firm of Spencer, Moore & Co., is the driver. Nobody could be found who could recall all of the party, but in the seven were M. J. Forbes, now president of the Consolidated Elevator company; Richard Watrous, R. F. Marvin and Ed Reiguel.

FORMER SHERIFF LOSES.

W. J. Sommer Heavily Indebted to Douglas County.

Former Sheriff W. J. Sommer, of West Superior, is indebted $11,500 to Douglas county, Wis. This is the decision of Referee Louis Hanitch to whom the claim was referred. The amount is made up of the principal $10,888.19 and the balance is interest. The referee found that the amount due the sheriff in salary and fees during his term of office was a little over $4000, while the debits against him were over $14,000.

The accounting is the result of a dispute over the question of sheriff's salary and feesr. Mr. Sommers, when he took the office did so on the assumption that it was a fee office and the county board allowed him to do so, being under the same impression. At this time legal proceedings were pending, some of the former sheriff's bills having been held up on the ground that the office was a salaried one under the resolution of the county board in 1896 fixing the sheriff salary at $1500 per year. This amount was to cover all work performed by the sheriff for the county.

Sheriff Sommer held office fourteen months before the supreme court held that the resolution was binding. The county board immediately began disallowing the sheriff's bills and suit was instituted to recover what had already been paid out. The court appointed a referee. The matter will now be argued before the court on the referee's report.

Former Sheriff Sommer believes he has a legal claim against the county and has instituted an action to test the validity of it. The test case is a claim of $80 for taking an insane man to Mendota.

Hawker had been attending the services at Moccasin, and after the services were concluded, and the lights had been extinguished, he was heard to remark: "Where was Moses when the lights went out?" The next heard was a groan from Hawker, as some one stabbed him to the heart with a knife.

SHIRT WAIST SUITS FOR SUMMER GIRLS

Are the Most Popular Dress of the Year—Various Ways of Cutting the Skirt So That It Will Flare.

New York, June 24.—The most popular dress of the year is the shirt-waist suit. Never has any other article take as strong a hold upon feminine fancy as this. And deservedly does it win its high place, and because of its merits does it hold its own through all fashion's fickle changes.

The shirt-waist suit solves the complex problem of the separate waist, which was not quite dressy enough for nice occasions, and the full suit costume, which was too pretentious and too expensive for general wear.

The shirt-waist suit is a pleasant compromise between the black skirt and the colored shirt-waist and the full costume, which lacked jauntiness and was more for mature figures than for fresh young forms.

There was something for a prejudice, too, against the full cloth costume, for it made a woman's figure look heavier, and it had certain features which were not adapted to daily wear. Then, too, unless of the most expensive type, it was not chic, and without this queer little French quality no suit is admirable.

But the shirt-waist suit of the present season is a compromise between the two styles, and if you will gaze upon it a moment you will see that it combines all the desirable traits of the shirt waist without parting with any of the dressiness of the so-called "costume."

The shirt waist has a neat little waist with a blouse front or a semiblouse front. Its neck is provided with a nice little adjustable collar or stock. There is a very pretty little belt or girdle to wear with it, and the waist is trimmed in some youthful fashion to bring out the yoke or to show the nice straight lines which may make any waist so graceful on the figures.

The skirt of the shirt-waist suit is cut very modishly and is up to date in every respect. It is tucked or shirred, as the suit requires, and it is made to fit the figure as snugly as fashion may dictate. Thus the shirt-waist suit is very much in the fashion, and at the same time is very comfortable.

There is another point in favor of the shirt-waist suit, and this is that it can be made at home, which is an economical consideration.

The old-fashioned suit, which we used to call a "costume," can not be made at home very well, for it is so tailored, or so very much betrimmed, that it requires the hand of a professional. But with the shirt-waist suit it is different, and any woman with a few yards of batiste and a little lace for trimming can make a shirt waist and skirt to match and be very sure that her work will come out well.

The proper cut for the skirt depends upon circumstances, upon the material, upon one's individual preferences and upon the figure of the woman who is going to wear it.

In these days, when skirts are made all sorts of ways, it is difficult to lay down an exact rule for the skirt of a shirt-waist suit, for so many different modes are in use.

A rule which governs a certain very fashionable modiste is that the material, if it be thin, shall be shirred or gathered around the hips. She runs many lines of shirring from the belt down to the hips. Below this the skirt hangs as plain as possible to the foot, where it flares by means of cunningly contrived ruffles.

Another modiste lays her skirt in sun-plaits and fits the plaits to a hip yoke, which she covers with lace. Still another sun-plaits the whole skirt from the belt down to the floor.

A great many women do not like the gathered skirt, nor the plaited skirt, as they feel as though such a skirt made the hips larger. But there are certain slender figures that can wear this sort of skirt to advantage. For those to whom it is becoming the gathered hip yoke is charming, for it is new and stylish and shows off the material well.

For those who like a plainer skirt there is the skirt that is made plain with two tucks running down the front about six inches apart. These tucks are about three inches wide and are stitched flat, so that they, somehow, resemble panels. There is no other trimming upon the skirt, and the skirt depends for its beauty upon the foot flare, which is managed by cutting the skirt wide just around the foot.

There are various ways of cutting the skirt wide so that it will flare, one of these being the very simple one of making the breadths wider at the foot. But there are other ways, and one is the old expedient of setting in side plaits, and another is the fan method, which is still the vogue with lace and other fine material used in the fans.

One of the pretty features of the shirt-waist suit is its skirt, which, instead of showing the plain features of the tailor-made, is usually very much trimmed and always to match the waist. If there be lace upon the waist there will be lace upon the skirt, and if the skirt has its trimmings of ribbon or velvet, or cording, or what not, the waist will be sure to show the same features.

Paneling, which is so much in style, is used upon skirt and waist, and lace panels, panels of tucking and panels of trimming of all kinds, are seen upon the skirt and repeated upon the waist.

A very pretty shirt-waist suit was recently sent home to Miss Alice Roosevelt. Its material, which was a linen stuff, was in a shade of blue bordering on turquoise. The skirt was plain down the front, but was laid in side plaits at each side of the front, the plaits pointing away from the front. At the back there was a wide box plait.

The plaits were released about at the knees, and around the skirt there was laid a very wide band of lace, which was stitched flat. Through the middle of this lace there was run a black ribbon, which could be pulled out when the dress was cleaned. Another wide band of lace went around the bottom of the skirt and there was a ribbon through the band of lace also.

The waist was plain in the middle of the front, with a bunch of little plaits at each side of the front panel. Then came wide sleeves, bagging over the long, tight cuffs, and there was a little shoulder cape of blue linen, with a shorter cape falling over it. Both capes were trimmed with ribbon and were buttoned upon the waist with big, white pearl buttons.

The girdle was a wide, crushed band of linen, folded around the waist and brought down to a low point in the middle of the front.

A shirt-waist suit, intended for a Washington girl, is made of ecru cotton goods, highly mercerized. The skirt has the tiniest tucks around the belt, all laid in pin clusters, while below these little tucks the skirt stretches away in one unbroken sweep to the very tip of the demitrain. Around the foot of the skirt there is a little trimming in heavy white insertion, laid upon bands of deep blue cotton goods. The waist has its trimmings of lace on bands of blue, its tucks and its plain unbroken lines of bust and sleeves.

While a great many of the shirt-waist suits preserve the features of the shirt waists in that they have a simple little waist with a skirt to match, a great many of them are made elaborately with shoulder trimmings.

And of all the shoulder trimmings none is as popular as the shoulder cape. This is made of lace and is as deep as the shoulders, and a little deeper, falling over the upper arm.

This deep lace shoulder cape comes in very nice lace and costs a little fortune. But you can buy it in cheaper laces, and then it can be had for very little. It dresses up a shirt-waist suit wonderfully and makes it seem more fit for street wear. More than this the lace shoulder cape is warm, for lace has a warmth of its own, and it can be thrown around one in driving or sailing, or on cool evenings. It thus becomes a useful as well as a picturesque article of dress.

But the lace shoulder cape can be made somewhat newer if it be trimmed. One way of treating these lace capes is highly approved by modistes. They take a lace cape that comes down well over the shoulder seams and line it with liberty to match the suit. The cape is now quite a pretentious little article of dress, and can be worn instead of a coat, if need be.

Capes that consist of bands of insertion, each band sewed separately upon ribbon, are sewed together and thrown around the shoulders. They are deep enough to give the long slope to the shoulders, and so they go a great way toward creating the fashionable figure.

There is a shoulder cape that is made of ruffles and rushings of chiffon, laid upon a foundation, with little ruffles of lace set in between the rushings of chiffon. These are very airy looking and very comfortable on a cool day. They can be cut with long, graceful stoles and can be caught under the chin with a wide, handsome pin. The hat must, of course, match this cape.

The object of the shoulder trimming, or the lace cape upon the shirt waist, is to make the shoulders look drooping. Anything that will accentuate the shoulder line is to be desired, and the cape certainly does this. But, at the same time, it has a tendency to make the figure a little mature, so that the woman who is going to wear anything of this kind must be sure that it is a very short cape, not one that falls to the waist line, which is a very ugly length.

All sorts of shoulder capes, and capes in all sorts of conditions, are being worn, and you can scarcely go amiss in making such an article of dress, if you will fix it to your shoulders and fasten it in the front with long ends.

The foulard shirt-waist suits are so pretty and so capable of varied treatments that one cannot make a mistake in purchasing foulard for the purpose of making one of the suits. Foulard has the great advantage over most other materials of being a dressy fabric as well as one intended for daily use, and it can be made up so that it is good enough for a bride's gown for a mid-summer wedding, or plain enough for marketing.

A July bride is to wear a cream foulard traveling dress, picked out with tiny pink blossoms and trimmed with pink silk lawn. Her hat is a turban shape, covered with arbutus flowers, and her parasol is pink, her gloves white.

Another very dressy foulard is made in cream-colored ground, with blue flowers scattered over it. The trimmings in this case are bands of silk, bands of Irish crochet and bands of Valenciennes, the three lacy trimmings being used alternately around the skirt. This foulard suit, which is a shirt-waist suit, has a wide box plait down the front of the waist and another wide box plait down the front of the skirt. There is a box plait in the middle of the back of the waist and another in the middle of the back of the skirt. The box in every case is covered with lace.

And, since of foulard suits there is no end, one which may be described was made of faint pink foulard, with flowers and figures in deep pink, deep blue and yellow, a veritable mixed goods. This suit was trimmed with figured cotton net and was set off with a three-quarter black taffeta coat faced with pink.

The summer costumes are certainly gay from a standpoint of color, and, though black and white dresses predominate, or dresses that are either all of black or all of white, there are a great many of the more lively costumes to set off the wardrobe.

Even navy blue is enlivened by Armenian embroideries and by Oriental trimmings that combine every color under the sun.

A lovely navy blue taffeta shirt-waist suit had a deep sailor collar of white canvas, trimmed with Armenian embroidery, and there were deep cuffs trimmed in the same way. There was a belt of the same stuff, and the hat was a red chip trimmed with many ruchings and folds of red chiffon.

What kind of a hat to wear with a shirt-waist suit is a question which agitates many a woman. But to this she can reply that any kind of a hat can be becomingly worn.

The day of the severe tailored hat seems to have gone by and a woman can wear any hat that is becoming to her without regard to the character of her gown.

The short-waist belts deserve a word in passing, for they are so jauntily made. One of the smartest of fashions is to sew straps upon the belt of the shirt waist and to run a belt of patent leather through these straps. The belt is hooked in front with a brass harness buckle.

A style of belt that is liked is made by taking a wide piece of liberty and threading it through worked rings of silk. The belt is now hooked around the waist with a pretty buckle.

The stitched belts of silk in all colors are worn, and so are the stitched belts of linen. They are very neat, and, not being expensive, they can be thrown away when soiled. There is a belt that grows upon popular fancy, and this is the wide belt of satin ribbon, with a handsome slide at the back and a pretty buckle in the front. You must, to be thoroughly in touch with the world of fashion, make your shirt waist buttons to match your belt buckle, and you must try to have a fancy pin, matching both, upon your hat.

Do not forget, in planning your shirt-waist suit, that there must be harmony throughout, and that, if the suit fit, and if the colors match, the battle is fought and the victory is won.

Miss Agnes Miller, of Chicago, speaks to young women about dangers of the Menstrual Period—how they can avoid pain, suffering and remove the cause.

"I suffered for six years with dysmenorrhea (painful periods), so much so that I dreaded every month, as I knew it meant three or four days of intense pain. The doctor said this was due to an inflamed condition of the uterine appendages caused by repeated and neglected colds and feet wetting.

"If young girls only realized how dangerous it is to take cold at this critical time, much suffering would be spared them. Thank God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that was the only medicine which helped me any. Within three weeks after I started to take it, I noticed a marked improvement in my general health, and at the time of my next monthly period the pain had diminished considerably. I kept up the treatment and was cured a month later. I am like another person since I am in perfect health."—Miss Agnes Miller, 25 Potomac Ave., Chicago, Ill.

PASSING OF JERRY FAHEY.

Salmon and trout fishermen hereabouts and far away will mourn for old Jerry aFhye, says the New York Sun. Jerry was acknawledged by the experts to be the best fishing-rod maker in—we won't say the world, because that is too small a place—but in the Greater New York. He wound up his line in his workshop at 151 Fulton street, and was found at rest upon his lounge surrounded by the paraphernalia of his calling.

Jerry began on the lakes of Killarney, but he did not confine his operations to those well-whipped waters. He traveled on foot to regions more remote and harder to get at. He was a born mechanic of the delicate kind. He made his own fishing rods, and they were wondrous casters. He used to say with a smile, he found the secret of "life in the butt." His fame ran with the currents of the streams, and soon he had the nobility and gentry of Ireland begging him, in the name of all the deprachauns, to make fishing rods for them.

Jerry became a professional fishing-rod maker and set himself up in business, backed by a strong trout trust. Tired of tools, sandpaper and varnishes, he came to the United States, and, failing to make a fortune, returned to his old trade and was satisfied. When he stopped fishing, he took refuge in fiddling, and he could play a fiddle just not quite so well as he could play a salmon or a trout.

From the wilds of the Adirondacks to the banks of the St. Lawrence and from the borders of the Restigouche to the edges of the Columbia the casting lines will whistle the sad tune, "Jerry is dead!"

Frock for the Fourth of July

Now that it is so fashionable to live out of doors the greater part of the time, quite a different style of dress is necessary, especially as all sorts of outdoor amusements are indulged in. At one time the only possible afternoon gown—that is, any very elaborate one intended for garden parties, receptions or any madly gay entertainment of that sort—was made in most elaborate design, with quantities of lace and many yards of ribbon, and, in fact, precisely on the lines of a summer ball gown, excepting that the waist was high necked. There are, to be sure, any number of such gowns included in every fashionable outfit of the summer, but at the same time these are not the only gowns required. There must be as well gowns of rather heavier material, not necessarily warmer than were those of the olden time, when high-necked and long-sleeved silk linings were deemed necessary, but such materials as heavy linen in all the fancy weaves, light clothes and even veilings, while silk, taffeta, pongee and foulard are all in favor for just such use.

Perhaps the handsomest gowns or the most effective of the times are those made of linen or trimmed with rich Irish lace or with embroidered lace of white and with some design chosen for the gown that is more or less simple as regards its lines—the skirt close fitting around the hips, but not tight, and a broad flare around the foot, given either by the way in which the skirt is cut or by the attached flounce; the waist blousing in front with large sleeves, full below the elbow, and on the front of the waist and down the entire length of the sleeves elaborate trimming or embroidery on the material or a band of lace. These gowns are made long and are in their way quite as useless as the very smart and more elaborate gowns of batiste and thin muslin, but they are most becoming and extremely smart. The lightweight cloth gowns or the gowns of any material that has wool in it are made on the same plan, and it really requires a close observer to detect at the first glance just what material is used, as the trimming is precisely the same. The pongee gowns are very popular, and white pongee is an extremely effective material, while pale blue with lace dyed to match and trimmed with quantities of little tassels of the same color is tremendously in favor, and pale gray is also most popular in this style of gown.

Quite appropriate for afternoon wear, especially if at any country club or at any tournament, are the so-called tailor-made costumes of lightweight cloth, pongee or linen. The coats are almost exaggeratedly long now and are made quite as often double breasted, with fancy buttons. Those in pongee and white, with pearl buttons, crossed with gold thread, are extremely attractive, and when worn with a shirtwaist of the same material or with one of the very fine batiste and lace waists are charmingly becoming and very cool-looking. At the races, at polo matches and at tennis tournaments this style of costume is seen by the dozen, and not only among the spectators, but, strangely enough, among the women who play, for it is now considered rather smart to wear most expensive gowns to play tennis or golf, and even when the skirts are more or less plain in design the waists are elaborate, and the very expensive waists with real lace and embroidery are not considered unsuitable. There are, however, some few women who go in for the very plain and, as they call it, appropriate style of dress, who have a very plain style of shirtwaist to wear with the tailor-made gowns, and break the rather severe effect only by a pretty lace and some more or less elaborate belt.

Red is becoming more and more fashionable, and the number of red foulard, red pongee and red mohair gowns that are made up for afternoon wear is astonishing. Red chiffon gowns, hitherto considered only appropriate for house or evening wear, are also fashionable for the afternoon. They are very smart and are smartest when unrelieved by any trimming of white or black, and even the hat to wear with them must needs be of the same color. Red hats also, that for a time were too popular to be fashionable, are being worn by the smartest of women, and white, black or even gowns of other colors. After all, red is becoming to the majority of women, which is probably one reason why the fashion has come in again, and back again also are the green hat and the green parasol. White hats, trimmed with green, white gowns worn with green hats and parasols and all green hats are quite as much in demand as they were last year, and, if anything, the shade of green appears to be more vivid. But then, in truth, this season it would seem to be more a matter of what is becoming and effective rather than the following blindly of any dictate of fashion.

Veiling, combined with chiffon, is one of the popular fashions of the season, and a most charming combination it is, for while veiling is a soft, more or less pliable material, chiffon is much softer and more becoming. For sleeves, fronts and pleatings the chiffon adds wonderfully to the veiling, which it must needs match exactly in color. An exquisite shade of mauve, an odd green and a brown are especially good in the combination of these new fabrics, all in light shades, for the darker colors are not thought suitable for afternoon wear, unless for a day's trip to town.

In palest gray are most exquisite effects. The sleeves slashed to show full undersleeves of the chiffon and the shirt, with two or three pleated flounces, half of veiling, half of chiffon, look most beautiful, soft and graceful; far more so than if only the veiling has been used. Chiffon waists, with veiling cloth or silk skirts, are always fashionable if the costume is on the coat and skirt order, and then it must match exactly the material in color. Even with light colors this rule is followed, and the pale blue chiffon or pale gray is even smarter, though not so cool as the shirt waists of batiste and lace.

Taffeta silk gowns, but not black ones, are immensely fashionable in afternoon wear, and oddly enough the fad is to make them up without linings and to have unlined lace yokes and sleeves. But this style is never worn without a wrap, for it is not considered smart to wear transparent gowns in the street, and consequently a multitude of dainty light wraps and ruffs are to be seen, made of chiffon or tulle, of absolutely no warmth, and yet charming as a finish to any gown.

SIMPLE NECKWEAR FOR SUMMER DAYS.

The ingenious woman is able to fashion an almost endless variety of stocks and collars suitable to be worn with shirt waist suits this summer. Odds and ends of embroidery, linen, lawn and canvas can be utilized in making the collars suggested by these designs.

Home Cooking In Kentucky Fifty Years Ago.

"Fifty years ago," said the old lady with the soft voice and the inflection that years of Northern residence had not destroyed, "when I was a young girl in Kentucky, an invitation to spend the day meant that one was expected for breakfast, dinner and supper.

"After a long drive one would arrive at about 9 o'clock and be received on the porch by a bright-looking mulatto girl, spick and span in her blue and white dress, black slippers, white stockings and bandanna handkerchief. The girl conducted her to the porch or parlor, where the mistress of the house was waiting. A stately lady, dressed in a white wrapper, with a flower in her hair, came forward, saying with a kind smile: 'I'm mighty glad to see you.' After the arrival of the guests, usually all old friends, a colored boy, dressed in white, came to the door and, with a beaming smile, announced: 'Breakfast is served!'

"In summertime breakfast was set under the trees on the lawn. On the table was a snow-white cloth, with a bouquet of beautiful Southern flowers in the center, and set with cut glass, handsome china and silver. The breakfast menu included the old-fashioned Southern fried chicken, biscuit and the invariable corn bread, which was very different from the corn bread of today, being made from flint corn, raised for that purpose and ground in the water mill, thereby retaining all the sweetness of the corn. There were delicious waffles and egg corn bread and, in the season, large cut-glass bowls filled with strawberries and raspberries, and a large glass pitcher of rich cream to pour over the fruit. Usually peach and plum preserves were also handed around. For the coffee, which was served from a large silver urn, there was a great silver bowl filled with the old-fashioned sugar, made in the loaf and broken up as needed. Two or three colored boys, in white, waited on one at every turn.

"Dinner was served in the middle of the day. In those days there were no oysters in Kentucky, so dinner began with soup, often chicken soup. Following that there were either boiled or baked fish, cold ham, boiled the day before with wine; lamb, with mint sauce and peas; sucking pig, roast duck, corn and other vegetables, eggs, boiled hard, cut in half and served with melted butter, and 'my pickle.'

"'Have you tasted my pickle? You must have some of my pickle,' the hostess would say.

"A generous slice of fruit cobbler, with rich cream poured over it, formed the dessert, and jellies of all kinds were on the table.

"After the dinner the guest was told, 'You are tired now; you must go up to your room and have a rest,' and up she went to her room with her colored girl. The rooms were large and opened on what they called galleries, running around the house. The maid gave the guest's hair a good brushing, took off her shoes and stockings, rubbed her feet and put her comfortably to bed in a night wrapper, with a pitcher of water and a glass beside the bed. After an hour or so she was called, and after dressing, came down to the porch and 'sat around,' talking of friends and the news generally, for the South then was like a big family and news was eagerly sought after. As soon as it was cool enough everyone went into the garden or strolled where she pleased, until tea was announced at half-past five. At this meal was served cold chicken, cold ham, biscuit, egg corn, bread and light rolls, smoking hot; several kinds of preserves, perhaps a light lettuce salad, and at least four kinds of cake, and coffee and tea, with a large pitcher of milk on the table, and usually a piece of old English cheese. After tea was over all the guests got ready to go home.

"'I'm so glad you came,' said the cordial mistress of the house. 'Do hope you'll come soon again. Give my love to all the folks at home.' Goodby and off for home, the soft Southern voices calling out laughing reminders and jests as one drives off, the negroes standing around the house looking as happy and feeling as though they were of the family, as in those days they were.

SOUTHERN BREAKFAST.

Fried Chicken. Corn Bread.
Biscuit. Waffles.
Strawberries. Raspberries.
Coffee.

Fried Chickens.—Cut up chickens; lay in pan of cold water to extract blood; wipe dry; season with salt, dredge and fry in lard. Have lard very hot; cover skillet and set back to fry slowly. When both sides are brown take up and keep hot. Put in skillet a half pint of milk, thickened with a teaspoonful of flour; season with pepper, salt and a few sprigs of parsley; garnish the chicken with parsley, and serve gravy in a bowl.

Southern Corn Bread.—One pound cornmeal, one teaspoonful salt, one cup sweet milk, three eggs, one teaspoonful butter, one teaspoonful baking powder. Pour boiling water on the meal until it is thoroughly moist; bake in well-greased muffin pans, in hot oven; grease with lard, as meal will stick if greased with butter.

Waffles.—One quart flour sifted, one tablespoonful salt, one tablespoonful melted butter, sweet milk enough to make a thick batter. Mix thoroughly. Add two well-beaten eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Stir well and bake in well-greased waffle irons. Two tablespoonfuls sugar may be added.

SOUTHERN DINNER.

Chicken Soup.
Baked Fish. Mashed Potatoes.
Lamb with Mint Sauce. Sucking Pig.
Peas. Apple Sauce.
Roast Duck. Creamed Potatoes.
Cucumbers.
Corn. Stuffed Tomatoes.
Peach Cobbler. Cheese.
Coffee. Corn bread.

Baked Fish.—Let fish remain in cold water, slightly salted, for an hour before time to cook. Place on the rack in dripping pan, with a little hot water in, and bake in hot oven. Just before done butter well on top and brown nicely. It takes a small fish half an hour, a large one an hour, to bake. Serve with melted butter, to which has been added chopped pickles and a little parsley.

Duck.—To cook a duck clean the fowl thoroughly, then put it in an iron pot. Grease the pot so that the duck will not burn. Brown this, turning it frequently. After the duck is thoroughly brown lift it out and pour off the grease. Chop three carrots and two onions. Put the duck back in the pot, adding the carrots, onions and a little salt. Pour on enough boiling water almost to cover the duck and let it simmer for two hours. Take the duck out. Add a little flour to thicken, leaving the onions and carrots in. They will be like a jelly. Pour all but a little of the gravy on a gravy dish and serve the duck on a platter with a little of the gravy over it.

Sucking Pig.—Rub with butter, cover with flour, and stuff with breadcrumbs like a turkey stuffing. Baste frequently and allow half an hour to a pound. Open the mouth with a stick. When done lay on a plate, take out a stick and put an apple in the mouth.

Stuffed Tomatoes.—Select large, smooth tomatoes, cut off seed ends and take seeds out. Make stuffing cup of dry bread crumbs, teaspoonful chopped onions, piece butter the size of a walnut, salt and pepper to taste. Stuff the tomatoes with this mixture, bake half an hour, and serve in dish they were baked in. Grated cheese sprinkled over top is an addition.

Egg Cornbread.—One pint cornmeal; pour sufficient boiling water on to thoroughly moisten; let it cool a little, then add yolks of two eggs, well beaten, teaspoonful salt; thin this to the consistency of muffins with milk. Put in heaping teaspoon baking powder and whip in the whites of the eggs.

Pound Cake.—One pound flour, one of sugar, one of butter; eleven eggs, beaten separately; one gill of brandy, one teaspoonful of mace. Beat sugar and butter to a cream; add yolks of eggs, brandy and mace; add flour, and lastly the whites. Beat all together half an hour to make light. Bake in a slow oven.

Spice Cake.—Half cup butter, two cups pulverized sugar, six eggs, one cup milk, one teaspoonful vanilla, three cups flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Cream butter and sugar, beat yolks well, add to the butter and sugar; add milk, vanilla and baking powder. Beat whites to stiff froth and stir in last. Fill layer pans with half the mixture, and to the remaining half add two tablespoonfuls molasses, one-half teaspoonful cinnamon, cloves, allspice and a little mace. Put icing between.

Black Cake.—Two pounds raisins, seeded; one pound citron, sliced; two pounds currants, one pound butter, twelve eggs, beaten separately; two pints brown sugar, one pint black molasses, four pints browned flour, one pint white flour, one glass of whisky, two tablespoonfuls ginger, two tablespoonfuls cinnamon, one tablespoonful cloves, one tablespoonful nutmeg, half tablespoonful mace, one tablespoonful baking powder. Cream the butter, add sugar, then yolks well beaten; then molasses, flour, whipped whites, whisky and spices. Beat well. Last add the fruit. Bake in slow oven.

Peach Cobbler.—Line a pan with pie dough and cut a square of the dough out of the bottom. Fill the dish with sliced peaches, sprinkle half a cup granulated sugar over and add two tablespoonfuls of water and one ounce of butter cut up in pieces. Put on a top crust and butter that. Bake in a good oven. Serve either hot or cold. Cherries and other fruits may be substituted for peaches.

A CHINESE COTTAGE

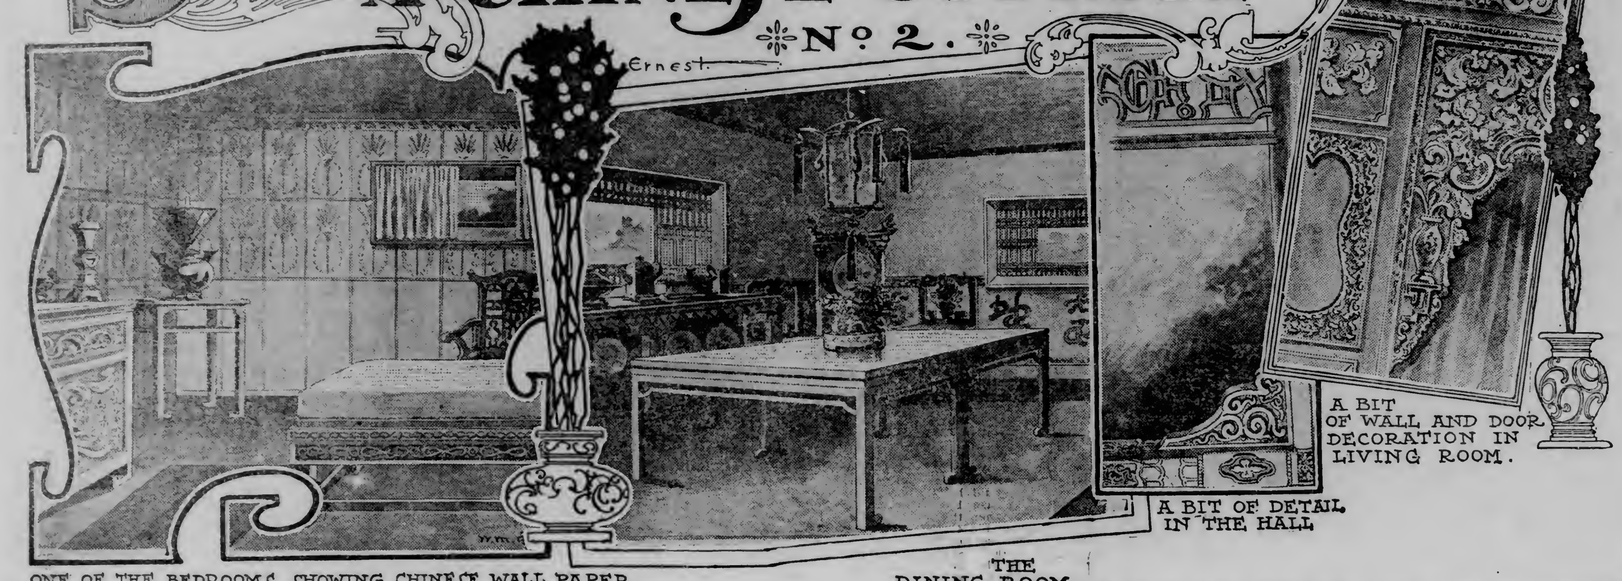
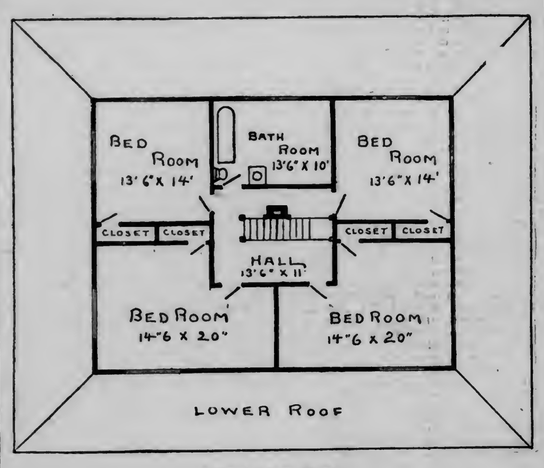
No. 2.



ONE OF THE BEDROOMS SHOWING CHINESE WALL PAPER.

A BIT OF WALL AND DOOR DECORATION IN LIVING ROOM.

A BIT OF DETAIL IN THE HALL



THE DINING ROOM.

Second Floor Plan.

Copyright, 1903, by W. M. Butterfield.

After the talk with Jones about his Chinese cottage, Jenkins went home and read up on China, so that when they took up the subject again he had a lot to say about the philosophy and religion of the Chinese as well as their art and architecture.

"I like your cottage," he said, "because it embodies one of the most admirable of Chinese principles. You know they have a religion of home life which, although somewhat fanciful, is strictly followed. Almost every Chinese house has either a 'hall of ancestors' or at least a closet where the ancestral tablet is kept. We have our albums and family Bibles, but it cannot be said that we show a reverence for our ancestors in any way comparable to that of the Chinese. Our crests and genealogical trees are far from having any connection with religion. Reverence for the aged and for the dead as it is known in China has an influence upon their political and social life. It influences the habits, the architecture and the adornment of the home as well as of the public edifice. Your cottage, therefore, is more than interesting. It is, as the architects say, 'significant of a thought.'"

Chinese Have Religion of the Home.

"Yes," assented Jones, "the Chinese have carried their religion into the home, and if we have not a religion of the home, we can at least cultivate a love for the home. More than half of our lives is spent there, and the architecture and fittings should stimulate our ambitions and as far as possible aid our pursuits. The physician often recommends a certain housing of the patient, a particular exposure or furnishing of a room. If these things are vital to the regaining of health it is no less important for us to live in a house properly constructed when we are well. Architects high in their profession are aware of all this, but unfortunately such talent is beyond the purse of the ordinary home builder. Although it is recognized that style is influenced to a great degree by location and climate, yet, this fact eliminated, sary features—drainage, ventilation, lighting and heating—are positively present in the arrangements for building. One can become familiar with style by reading up, as you have done with my cottage. It may be bothersome, perhaps, but upon the choice of style may depend the happiness and contentment of a family; the sanitary features may insure its health."

"I never thought of the house in that way," said Jenkins, "but it seems reasonable to suppose that the home surroundings amid which the hours of rest, contemplation and pleasure are spent will, to a degree, influence one's habits as well as avocation. That makes it a vital question not only to the family, but to the government, and one is ready to join hands with the Municipal Art League for the preservation and adaptation of suitable forms in building and decoration, although I question if that worthy society has gone so deeply into the matter as to assume that their reforms should start in the homes of the citizens. But we have had a serious talk over so trivial a matter as a summer home. I had no idea of leading you on like this when I referred to my Chinese researches.'"

"Nothing is trivial that pertains to the making of a home—we settled that. But here are the drawings I promised to show you last week. This sketch of the dining-room, you will notice, is plain and simple as compared with the living-room or even the hall. This is partly intentional and partly it is caused by a desire to use such furniture as I have been able to collect. In the corner is shown a temple drum, of which I am quite proud, and which is said to be very old. It once occupied a Shintoist temple. You will recall that Buddhism supplanted Shintoism in Japan in 552 A. D. It is quite likely that if genuine it may have considerable age. The windows are copies of those shown in a Chinese interior—a wood cut impression made in 1836. They are easily made and will cost but little.

Furnishings Collected Gradually.

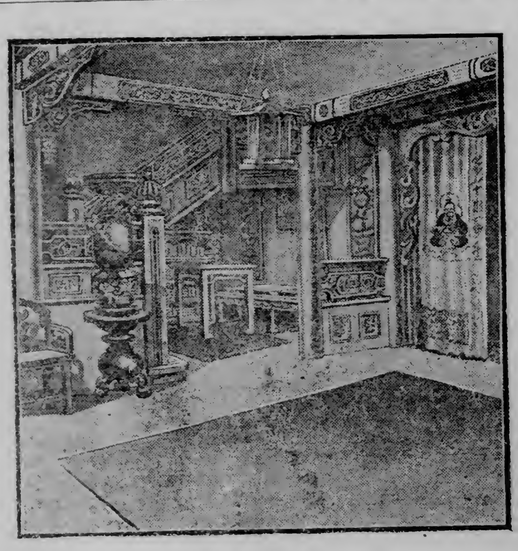
"The lantern was obtained for $2, the Bon signs of various kinds in plaster. Sometimes it is done directly upon the wall or object to be stuccoed, again the designs are stuccoed upon burlap and then nailed or glued in position. The frieze and panels upon the wall in the "living room" will be done upon burlap. The room when ready for this work will be carefully measured and outlines of the widths and heights of frieze and panels marked upon the wall that spacing and proportions may be correct, and from these measurements the moulds for the designs will be made. Afterward the stuccoed frieze in sections and the panels will be glued in position upon the wall. In these designs of the panels, frieze and a portion of the grill at the doorway a good idea of the designs and their appearance upon the wall can be had. The grill will not be stuccoed, but made of plaster, glue and hair, and it will be modeled and finished before putting in place. The designs upon the brackets and posts in the hall will also be of stucco, while the Chinese characters, which take the place of spindles in the hand rails, will be made of three thin pieces of wood, glued together to insure them against splitting and then cut into form with a jigsaw. The center rails and design are all in one piece. Here shown is a sketch of the arrangement of the ha.., and now we may say with the good Christian, 'We are done here below and are ready to go above.'"

"A floor plan always reminds me of a rebus or a particularly intricate hieroglyphic.' Nevertheless I make out that there are to be four bedrooms, a hall and bathroom. The lower roof is the one covering the porch, I presume. I also discover that there is a closet for each room, and that each room has two windows—a proof that consideration has been given to ventilation."

"You have read the conundrum correctly. Here is a sketch less difficult to decipher, a suggestion for one of the bedrooms. In front of the altars in the Buddhist temples upon which are placed the vessels of ashes in which the incense sticks are placed, and beside which is a shallow dish filled with pebbles and water, holding a growing narcissus, is a sort of carved bureau—you will see one of these affairs in the sketch. It is to be used as a bureau. In front of the altar in the temple is placed a large table, on which five bronze vases are placed—the end ones for flowers, the central one for the symbols of the three Buddhas and the others for candles. In the dining-room is this large Chinese table, which I shall use as the dining table, while upon the bureau you will see the bronze vases intended for candles.

"The bed is one made in China for an American, and brought here more than 60 years ago. Under the window you will see a chair made in England by Chippendale; it is as valuable a possession as I have. This great maker of furniture considered the Chinese ornamentation sufficiently worthy of his attention to make furniture embodying that style. This is one of the Chippendale chairs in Chinese style. The lamp is one of the common Japanese bronze incense burners converted into a lamp, but the shade comes from Kwanous Temple, Tokio, and is to be used as it is shown in the sketch. The wall paper used by the Chinese is designed in panels and put upon the wall with narrow strips of wood dividing them. I shall have the walls smooth finished, then the strips will be placed in position and the design stencilled between them. This will give the effect of the Chinese paper, without much trouble or cost."



The Hall and Den.

one can regulate the shape and period of a house as well as the size and cost. It is to be regretted that the difference between the builder and architect is not more generally known, for there is, unfortunately for those who are the possessors of or who want to build a low-cost house, a vast difference. One can construct a building firmly, but has little or no knowledge of style or true architectural adornment and its significance—such are the creators of most of our cheaply built homes; the other is not only familiar with the mechanical part of a building and its cost, but he prepares for the artisan plans that are always upon lines of proportion. He adopts a style and maintains it throughout. Drainage, ventilation, heating and lighting are features in his plans—they are usually overlooked by the quasi-architect, and if thought of at all are attempted after the building is fully under way or nearly finished. It cannot be wondered at that the result is so often unsatisfactory. For these reasons it is unsafe to undertake the erection of a house unless, first, one is sure that the style chosen is suitable to one's tastes and requirements and, second, the four neces- Kei, or miniature landscape upon the tray is in the center of the table. The chairs are the result of considerable effort. They were picked up one at a time, but as they are so nearly alike it will not occur to those who "draw up to the festive board" that this set is a mute but substantial proof of what can be done by the collector in the "one at a time" method. They cost about $10 a piece, and I have six of them. The table came from a Custom House sale, and cost $16.50. In one of the windows I will have made a simple sideboard in Chinese style, and as the table and chairs are black the woodwork and floor will be stained that color. The walls, divided by a plain band of wood with a bit of stuccoed design beneath, are to be red, the lower portion painted with a gloss, with Chinese characters stencilled upon it. The upper part will be of the same color, but in a dead finish. A plain strip of wood forms the frieze. The porcelain which will be used for decoration is Chinese. A red rug and the plain red lining of the portieres at the double doors will be ...e only draping used.

Elaborate Gowns That Weigh Less Than A Pound.

French women may surpass others in the frou-frou of their dress, English women in neatness, but the American woman has gone beyond them all in extravagance. The summer girl will expend an immense amount of money for what, in weight, is practically nothing.

Seven ounces is the least her summer gown can weigh; 14, and be quite correct, is the most, says one authority; but what she may pay for these few ounces is another matter. Her modiste's bills will run along the eighties and hundreds for even the seven ounce gown.

You cannot put a gown through a wedding ring as you could the proverbial white mull of your grandmother's time, but you can hardly feel its weight as you pick up waist and skirt of a chiffony texture, made over chiffon skirts and worn with a chiffony expression.

The object of the ten ounce go vn is, first, comfort. In hot weather the less you wear the more comfortable you are—that is mere fact; but the texture this gown is made of determines its expenses, and the underskirts play a great part in the appearance as well as in the expense of the gown.

A pretty gown in one of the closets of a Parisian modiste is made of cream lace net as fine as a spider web, and is embroidered in the lightest floss, with a dainty thistle pattern. The embroidery adds almost nothing to the weight of the gown and gives just the touch of trimming necessary.

Then there are the pineapple gauzes that look so simple and are really elaborate and expensive, and mean a deal of labor. They weigh scarcely more than a feather, but their cost would make the scales dip heavily.

White pineapple gauze and chiffon, a combination of two expensive stuffs, make a beautiful gown. The underskirts are made of the finest of lawn, weighing scarcely more than the gauze, and are ruffled with a single thread lace, effective and light. There are no tucks in the underskirts; they would be too heavy. The plain ruffle without insertion and only the lace edging is much in favor.

The pineapple gauze gown may be trimmed as elaborately with lace as may suit the wearer's fancy, provided she does not buy lace that weighs much. This is prohibited, and only the lightest, daintiest and, of course, the most expensive laces are used.

Chiffon takes the place greatly of lace, and, as with pineapple gauze, is made over a drop skirt of white silk. Between the drop skirt and the outer skirt is an interlining of chiffon that falls in billowy fullness at the bottom and makes lace ruffles unnecessary.

A yard of chiffon weighs but a fraction of an ounce. You can utilize a good many yards in making an ounce, and seven ounces is enough for a gown. Accordion plaited dresses are being made in these thin, light fabrics.

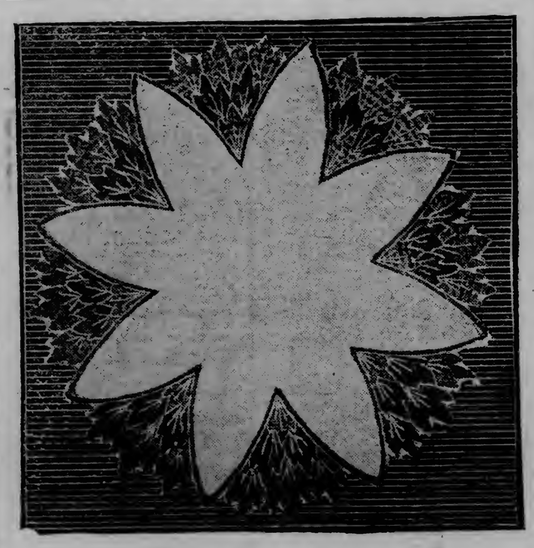
Aside from the gowns of lace net and chiffon there are those made entirely of lace. A Cluny lace gown will cost $200, perhaps, but to the summer girl who aims at lightweight clothes this is no objection, and nothing could be handsomer than a cream Cluny lace gown made over a pale pink chiffon, and surely nothing could weigh less.

The young girl is not alone in wearing these gowns. The woman who prefers dark colors can wear them, too. A black lace dress made with white point lace trimmings is beautiful for a dinner gown, and surely nothing can be lighter in weight than black thread lace over chiffon.

There must not be that tight fitting appearance that is permissible in heavier gowns. There must be enough fullness in the soft, thin material to do away with this sort of thing or else the effect is lost, and the way to accomplish this is to use yokes, tucks and shirrings.

A yoke of lace extending over the hips weighs nearly nothing; it fits well and on to this may be gathered the soft material. Three or four deep shirrs accomplish the same effect and lend variety, and a yoke made of little tucks is pretty. The tucks may be as deep or as shallow as the wearer wishes and accomplish the same end of giving the full fluffy effect.

The underskirts must be made perfectly plain across the top—almost habit backed—or else there would be a deal too much fullness and it would become bulky; but at the bottom they may be ruffled and frouffoned as much as one pleases.



A Doylie Worked in Rich Colors

To Wash Lawns.

To give lawns, white or printed, a look of newness that nothing else can impart, take two ounces of fine gum arabic, powder it put into an earthen jar and pour over it a pint of boiling water, cover and let it stand over night. In the morning pour it carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle and cork it. Make your starch in the usual way and stir into it a tablespoonful of this gum water. To whiten soiled white lace, baste the lace to a sheet folded twice and put it in the sun. When the starch is perfectly dry rub it from the lace carefully. If the lace is not clean repeat the process.

Some Novel Ideas.

In Europe there are a few persons who are certainly of an original turn of mind. One of them maintains that all wrinkles can be removed from a face by the constant application of an electric battery which is so small as to be almost invisible; another claims that fish can be utilized for the purpose of towing vessels; a third suggests that while a body is being cremated an orchestra should play funeral airs softly in the distance, this being in his opinion the most efficacious method of assuaging the grief of the mourners, and a fourth desires to have a law passed that every crematory shall be provided with a room in which appropriate elegies shall be recited by salaried poets while bodies are being burned.

The average duration of life in towns is 38 years; in the country, 55 years.

SUGGESTIONS FOR "THE FOURTH."

With cooks going out to celebrate, the children of the family too busy with their fireworks to lend a helping hand or scarcely stop and eat, guests imminent, and a host of outside issues for the mother of a family to look after, the cold Fourth of July luncheon or dinner, which may be prepared in the early morning or the day previous, will be found to save much waste of "gray matter."

The wide semi-covered piazza is the ideal place for the Fourth of July luncheon; but if this is impossible, the dining room, decorated in honor of the day, cool and shaded, will be all right. If the table is polished have it bare save for the pretty doilies and centerpiece. The flowers should be red, white and blue. All sorts of pretty favors and bonbon boxes, suited to the occasion, running the gamut from tiny drums at forty cents a dozen to silken flags and Uncle Sam hats at a dollar, may be purchased to add to the festal appearance of the board. The menu may be simple or elaborate, one something like this being suitable for a rather pretentious occasion:

Iced Currants.
Iced Bouillon. Cress Sandwiches.
Salted Almonds. Ripe Olives.
Cold Salmon. Sauce Tartare.
Coffee.
Tongue in Aspic. Rolls and Butter.
Fruit Salad. Cheese Straws.
Ice Cream. Cake.
Bonbons.

To prepare the tongue in aspic boil the tongue, smoked or fresh, on Thursday. On Friday make a good aspic jelly, using a pint of the liquor in which the tongue was boiled; one small cupful of beef or veal gravy, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one of kitchen bouquet and one of sugar. Dissolve two ounces of gelatine in a cup of cold water, pour a pint of boiling water over it and stir until the gelatine is thoroughly dissolved. Add it to the other ingredients and strain through a flannel bag. As it begins to cool and set place a large mould net in cold water in a pan of broken ice. Sprinkle a few capers or nasturtium buds in the bottom and cover with a thin layer of jelly. As it begins to harden put thin rings of hard boiled eggs around the edge of the mould and fasten with the jelly. When firm lay in the tongue whole, curled round and skewered into shape, or a layer of the slices. If the slices are used pour the jelly over the first layer, wait for it to set, add more slices and more jelly until the mould is full, having the jelly at the top. Cover and set where it will be as cold as possible. When ready to serve remove from the mould on to a platter and garnish with scarlet and white geraniums. In serving cut in slices, and put on to each plate with the tongue and jelly a spoonful of sauce tartare.

Ginger Beer.

Two and one-half pounds loaf sugar, one and one-half ounces whole ginger, bruised slightly; one ounce cream of tartar, two sliced lemons. Put into an earthenware vessel and pour over three gallons of boiling water. Let it stand until lukewarm, then add one-half penny worth of German yeast (about as much as a walnut), dissolved in a little warm water; mix well and let it stand over night to work.

In the morning strain through muslin, bottle and cork very tightly, tying the corks down. It will be ready for use in two or three days.

Strawberry Preserves.

Strawberry preserves are liked by almost everyone, but they are the despair of most housekeepers, because it is almost impossible to cook the berries and retain the lovely color, it almost always being either a dark or a light garnet color. The following recipe is used by a Southern woman famous for the flavor and the coloring of her strawberry preserves:

Select nice strawberries, not too ripe. The first of the season are better for preserving than those later on. Weigh and allow one pound of sugar to one and a quarter pounds of fruit. Put the sugar in an agate pot and thoroughly moisten with cold water. Boil until it threads; then put in the berries carefully to avoid breaking. Boil slowly 20 minutes. Take from the fire, cover the pan carefully, and put in a cool, dark place. Let them stand over night. In the morning rinse out the jars to be used with hot water and put the berries in the cold; then pour the syrup over them. Have the syrup fill the jar to overflowing. Seal air-tight. They should be put into small jars or tumblers.

THE NORTHERN SECURITIES

Review of Court's Decision By Prof. Langdell.

Law Has Not Been Correctly Interpreted.

The following discussion of "The Northern Securities Case and The Sherman Anti-Trust Act," by Professor C. C. Langdell, professor emeritus in the Harvard law school, which appeared in a recent number of the Harvard Law Review, has attracted much attention in legal circles:

Although the primary object of this article is to consider briefly the recent decision of the United States circuit court of appeals for the Eighth circuit, in the case of United States vs. Northern Securities company and others, yet, as that decision is founded wholly upon the Sherman anti-trust act, it is proper to begin by saying whatever it is proposed to say in regard to that act.

Considering the noise that it has made, the Sherman anti-trust act is very brief. It comprises only eight short sections, and occupies only a little more than a page in the supplement to the revised statutes of the United States. Section 1 declares illegal "every contract, combination (in the form of trust or otherwise) or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations;" and it further declares that "every person who shall make any such contract, or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," and be punished accordingly. Section 2 declares that "every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire, with any other person or persons to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations," shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished accordingly. Section 3 is not material for the present purpose. Section 4 invests "the several circuit courts of the United States with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this act," and makes it "the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the attorney general, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations." Sections 5 and 6 are not material for the present purpose. Section 7 declares that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by this act may sue therefor in any circuit court of the United States, in the district in which the defendant resides or is found, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." Section 8 will be stated further on.

The first observation to be made upon this statute is that, regarded as a piece of substantive legislation, it simply, in terms, declares certain acts illegal and criminal, and accordingly by implication forbids them. Has it also the effect of making such acts civil torts? No, clearly not. A civil tort must necessarily be an injury to some person in respect to his personal rights or his rights of property. The person injured by a civil tort may be a private person, a corporation or the state. That the acts forbidden by this statute injure anyone's personal rights will not be claimed; and it is also clear that they injure no one's rights of property, and least of all any rights of property belonging to the state. What are the acts which are forbidden? First, the entering into certain contracts, combinations or conspiracies. What contracts, combinations or conspiracies? Such as shall be in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations, i. e., such as shall be entered into for that purpose, or with that object in view, or such as will produce, or have an inevitable tendency to produce, that effect. Secondly, the act or acts of monopolizing, or attempting to monopolize, or of combining or conspiring with any other person or persons to monopolize, any part of such trade or commerce. It is not necessary to deny that the act of carrying into effect a contract, combination, or conspiracy, or that the act or acts which may be consequential upon securing, or attempting to secure, or combining or consulting with another person or other persons to secure a monopoly, may have the effect of injuring the rights of property of another person or other persons. And the authors of the statute appear to have thought such act or acts, or some of such acts, might have that effect. But it is impossible that the mere act of entering into any contract, combination or conspiracy, or the mere act of securing, or attempting to secure, or of combining or conspiring to secure, any monopoly should have the effect of injuring the property of any person whatever.

As, however, the Northern Securities case is an action brought by the state, i. e., by the United States, to "prevent and restrain" a violation of the act in question, it seems proper to inquire in what cases the state may maintain a suit in equity to prevent the commission of a civil tort. First, the state is an artificial person or body politic, and as such is the owner of property, and therefore it can, like other persons, whether natural or artificial, maintain suits in equity to prevent torts to its own property. It is not claimed, however, that any act or acts forbidden by this statute can constitute a tort to any property belonging to the United States. Secondly, it frequently happens that the state holds the title to property as representing the general public, the reason being that the general public, not being in law a person, can neither hold property in its own name nor sue in its own name, and hence it is represented by the state in both these respects. It follows, therefore, that the state has the same right to sue respecting property which it holds for the benefit of the general public that it has respecting property which it holds for its own benefit. The cases in which property is thus held by the state for the benefit of, and as representing, the general public, constitute two important classes, namely, first, cases of public highways of every description, including all railways, canals, navigable rivers and tidewaters. Sometimes such property consists of a mere right-of-way, in which cases, of course, it is incorporeal, and sometimes it includes the ownership of the soil. When it consists merely of a right-of-way, the ownership of the soil is generally in the owners of the adjoining land, as in the case of common highways or roads; when it includes the ownership of the soil, the soil, as well as the right-of-way, is generally vested in the state, as in the cases of navigable rivers and tidewaters, thought, in the case of railways themselves. The second class of cases in which property is held by the state for the benefit of, and as representing the general public, comprises all cases of property held upon public trusts, i. e., all property devoted to religious, charitable, or other public uses, but not including property owned by the state and held for its own purposes. Property thus held upon public trusts is generally derived from the munificence of private persons, and the legal title to it is generally vested originally in trustees; but when such trustees consist of natural persons, it frequently becomes impossible, after the lapse of considerable time, to trace the legal title to such property, or ascertain in whom it resides. What is the function of the state in respect of property thus held upon public trusts? First, to represent in all cases the general public as the cestuis que trust of such property, and to see that the trustee, if any, performs his duty; secondly, if there is no trustee, or none can be found, it is the duty of the state to supply the want of a trustee, and thus protect property against strangers.

With property of this last description it will be admitted that the statute in question has nothing to do; and though it has been held that the statute has to do with railways, that is not because the acts forbidden by it are liable to be committed against railways, but because they are liable to be committed by railway companies. In short, if the statute extends to railways, it is not because congress was seeking to protect railways, regarded as public highways, against the acts of tort-feasors, but because it was seeking to protect the general public against any attempts by railway companies to establish and maintain unreasonable rates. But such attempts, even if successful, would not constitute civil torts, nor could they ever ripen into torts, which could be restrained and prevented at the suit of the United States, as representing the general public. Thus, if two railway companies should enter into a contract with each other to advance the rates on their respective lines beyond what would be reasonable, no right, either public or private, would be infringed by such contract. Nor would the carrying out of such contract, by establishing and maintaining unreasonable rates, be an infringement of any right, public or private. If, however, any person should require either of those railway companies to carry his goods, and the latter should refuse to do so, except at the unreasonable rates thus established, it would thus infringe the personal right of such person to have his goods carried at a reasonable rate, and accordingly such person could maintain an action for damages; but the United States could maintain no action except for a refusal to carry its own goods at a reasonable rate.

Upon the whole, therefore, it is clear that the Sherman anti-trust act is a criminal statute pure and simple, i. e., that it simply declares certain acts to be crimes, and provides for their punishment. It also confers upon courts of equity jurisdiction to "prevent and restrain" the commission of such acts, and thus furnishes an instance of a statute which confers upon courts of equity jurisdiction to restrain and prevent the commission of crimes. Had not the act conferred this jurisdiction in express terms, it is plain that no court of equity could have entertained any suit founded upon the act.

The second observation to be made upon the statute is that section 2 has no application to railways or railway companies. There is not, indeed, in the act itself a single word which can lead any one to think that its authors had either railways or railway companies at all in their contemplation; and the only argument in favor of the view that the first section of the act extends to railways or railway companies is founded wholly upon the comprehensiveness of the following words in that section, namely, "all contracts, combinations and conspiracies." As, however, sections 1 and 2 are wholly independent of each other, the words just quoted have no tendency to show that the two sections are co-extensive in their application; and the extent of the application of section 2 must depend upon considerations applicable to that section alone. Section 2 declares that every person who shall do any of certain specified acts shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and if the acts so specified can be committed by railway companies as such, the words "every person" are sufficient to include such companies. Can, then, railway companies commit the acts specified in section 2? That question depends upon the meaning of the words "any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations." Undoubtedly, railways are by far the most important of all instruments of inland trade and commerce, but an instrument by means of which a thing is done, even though it be indispensable, is not the thing itself. Railways are also public highways, and as such are subject to the control of the state. Moreover, when used for the carriage of goods, the subjects of trade and commerce, from one state into or through another state, or other states, they become subject to the control of the United States. Trade and commerce, however, actually consist in buying and selling, though they may, perhaps, be also said to include certain necessary incidents of most buying and selling, as, for example, the carriage of goods bought and sold from the seller to the buyer. Thus, the buyer and seller must always take into consideration as an important item of expense incident to the buying and selling, and they should, of course, have a clear understanding as to whether such expense is to fall upon the buyer or seller. It is only, however, in the relation of the buyer and seller of goods that the carriage of such goods can be said to be an incident of the buying and selling of them. In its relation to the carrier, who performs the service merely for hire, the carriage of goods bought and sold has no more to do with the buying and selling of them than any other service performed for hire upon them or in relation to them, whether with a view to their sale or as an immediate consequence of their sale. It has been held that even so important a thing as the manufacture of goods by their owner, though done solely with a view to selling them, is not trade or commerce in such goods; and this would be true even of the manufacture of goods by a seller of them, under an order from the buyer. Nor is it at all material whether the service of carrying goods for hire be performed in one state only or in more ones; if it is not trade and commerce when performed in one state only, it is not interstate trade and commerce when performed in more than one state.

As, therefore, the only thing that a railway company can monopolize is the carriage of goods and passengers for hire, and as such carriage does not constitute trade or commerce, it follows that railway companes are not within section 2 of the act. The only monopoly which section 2 forbids is a monopoly of the goods which constitute the subjects of trade and commerce, so far as the trade and commerce in such goods is subject to the control of the United States. This explains the fact that section 2 forbids the monopoly of any part of such trade or commerce. To forbid a monopoly by a railway company of the carriage of any part of the goods carried by it would be absurd, as every railway company necessarily has a monopoly of the carriage by far the greater part of the goods carried by it, and no railway company could live without such monopoly. It is only at what are known as competing points that a "shipper" of goods has any choice as to the railway by which he shall "ship" them.

The next question is: What are the acts which section 1 of the statute forbids. Or, to put the question in the concrete, and, at the same time, limit it to the Northern Securities case, did it forbid the organization of the Northern Securities company for the purpose of acquiring and holding a majority of the shares in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railroad companies, and the carrying out of that purpose through the acquisition by that company of such shares? In answering this question in the affirmative, the circuit court of appeals professed to follow three decisions of the supreme court, made in cases arising upon the same statute, the circuit court holding that the Northern Securities case could not be distinguished from those three cases, and hence was governed by them. Was the court right in thus holding? No, it seems not. In two of those three cases, several railway companies had associated themselves together, under articles of agreement, for the purpose of regulating the rates to be charged for the transportation of goods on their respective lines or systems, and making such rates stable and uniform; and in the other case, several manufacturers of a certain class of goods had associated themselves together, under articles of agreement, for the purpose of regulating the prices at which goods manufactured by them respectively should be sold. In the Northern Securities case, on the other hand, there is only one person concerned, namely, the Northern Securities company. Nor is it material that that company is only an artificial person, i. e., a corporation. It was created by the state of New Jersey, has always remained in that state, and all the acts complained of were done in that state, and therefore the validity and lawfulness of those acts depend wholly upon the laws of New Jersey, unless they would have been made invalid and unlawful by the laws of the United States, if done by a natural person. Indeed, it is wholly immaterial to the United States whether any act done within the limits of a state is done by a natural or an artificial person, i. e., the validity and lawfulness of the act, under the laws of the United States, can never depend upon whether the person doing it belonged to the one or the other of these two classes of persons. Accordingly, the Sherman anti-trust act does not contain the slightest allusion to artificial persons, except in the seventh and eighth sections, and those two sections show conclusively that the act intended to make no distinction between natural and artificial persons; for section 7 declares as stated supra, while section 8 declares that "the word 'person' or 'persons,' whenever used in this act, shall be deemed to include corporations and associations existing under or authorized by the laws of either the United States, the laws of any of the territories, the laws of any state or the laws of any foreign country."

Would it, then, have been a violation of the act for any natural person to have acquired and owned either a majority of the shares in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railroad companies respectively, or all or them, or any number less than all? The court does not claim that it would have been, and that it would not have been is a proposition too plain for argument; for no person can contract, or combine, or conspire with himself.

The court, therefore, clearly regarded it as indispensable to show that several persons were concerned in doing the acts which it adjudges unlawful, and it attempted to do so by going behind the Northern Securities company, and treating the acts done by it as done by the natural persons who promoted and procured the organization of the company, and who caused it to acquire the shares in question; and accordingly the shares in question by the Northern court likens the acquisition of the Securities company, not to their acquisition by a single natural person on his own account, but to their acquisition by a "trust." But it is a complete answer to all this to say, first, that the acts adjudged unlawful were done, in point of law, by the Northern Securities company itself, and by no one else; secondly, that in doing those acts, the Northern Securities company was as completely within the law as any natural person would have been in doing the same acts; thirdly, that the procuring, inducing, or causing, of another person, whether natural or artificial, to do a lawful act, cannot possibly constitute an unlawful combination or conspiracy.

The next question is whether, assuming that the acts complained of violated the statute, the relief given in the Northern Securities case is authorized by the Sherman anti-trust act, or warranted by any principle of equity, if not authorized by the act, is plain from what has been already said, namely, that equity would have had no jurisdiction of the case, but for section 4 of the act. Was then the relief given authorized by section 4? No, clearly not. What did that section authorize courts of equity to do? Simply to "prevent and restrain" the carrying into effect of any contract, combination or conspiracy which the act makes unlawful. In order to apply this section of the act intelligently, it is necessary to distinguish between carrying into effect combinations and conspiracies, on the one hand, which create certain relations between the parties to them which are expected to continue, substantially unchanged, so long as the contract, combination, or conspiracy remains in force, and to which, therefore, the legal distinction between things executory and things executed is inapplicable, or as to which the distinction is merely a distinction between the future and the past—between things already done, and things remaining to be done, and, on the other hand, contracts, combinations and conspiracies, the carrying into effect of which will put an end to the relations between the parties to them which such contracts, combinations and conspiracies originally created, but will result in the immediate creation of new and different relations, and as to which, therefore, the distinction between things executory and things executed is vital. To the former class belong the three cases already referred to, while the Northern Securities case belongs to the latter class. In the former class of cases a court of equity may "prevent and restrain" the further carrying into effect of the contract, combination or conspiracy so long as such contract, combination, or conspiracy remains in force. In other words, it will never be too late for the court to give relief as to the future until all occasion for relief is past. In the latter class of cases, on the other hand, relief can be given by way of restraint or prevention only so long as the contract, combination or conspiracy remains executory. It is to be observed, however, that a contract, combination, or conspiracy may have two stages, both of which are executory, namely, a first stage, which, while it is the result of an execution of the first stage, is itself executory in turn; and, when such is the case, it must first be ascertained whether the statute forbids the execution of the first stage, or of the second stage, or of each stage; for if it forbids the execution of the first stage only, an injunction can be granted only so long as that stage remains executory, while if it forbids the execution of the second satge only, an injunction can be granted only after the execution of the first stage and before the execution of the second stage. If, on the other hand, the statute forbids the execution of each stage, an injunction granted any time before the execution of the second stage will be in time. The Northern Securities case furnishes a good illustration of these distinctions, assuming, of course, that the case is within the statute. The first stage of that case was the organization of the Northern Securities company, while its second stage was the acquisition by that company of the shares of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railroad companies. Whether the statute forbade the execution of each stage, if it forbade the execution of either, it seems not material to inquire, as no injunction was granted till long after the execution of the second stage, at least to the extent of the acquisition of more than a majority of the shares of each of the two railway companies, and, therefore, long after it had ceased to be possible to grant any relief by way of prevention, except against the acquisition of any more of such shares.

The conclusion, therefore, is, that the court was never authorized to give any other than negative belief in the Northern Securities case, i. e., relief by way of prevention, even assuming that the case comes within the statute, and that the time had long gone by when any such relief could be given that would do the United States any good or the defendants much harm; and yet the court has manged to make a decree which has been said in print more than once to be the most important decree that has ever been made. Whether that is so or not depends upon the meaning attached to the word "important." That a more iniquitous decree was never made may be asserted with much confidence. What, then, is the nature and character of this decree? First, while it is, in its terms, purely negative, it forbids what is not forbidden by the statute, either directly or indirectly, and what the court, therefore, had no authority to forbid; secondly, the negative relief was given solely with a view to compelling affirmative action to be taken by the defendants which the court well knew it had no means of compelling directly. That is to say, the Northern Securities company having issued its own shares in exchange for shares in the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern Railroad companies, and the statute having, as the courts say, thus been violated, and it being too late to give relief by way of prevention, the court sought to compel the parties to the exchange to undo what had been done by re-exchanging the shares in the Northern Securities company for the shares in the railway companies, and thus to accomplish the same object that might have been accomplished by giving negative relief, if it had not been too late to give such relief; and the court attempted to accomplish that object by declaring that the Northern securities company should never vote or receive dividends on any of the shares held by it in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railroad companies; and as these shares constitute substantially the only assets of the Northern Securities company, this was equivalent to declaring that the latter company should never pay dividends on its own shares issued in exchange for the shares in the two railway companies. Undoubtedly, the court expected its decree speedily to bring the parties to terms, especially as the only persons affected by the decreo were the Northern Securities company and its shareholders, and as the latter had, therefore, everything in their own hands. The court, accordingl, expected the restraints of the decree to be only of short duration, and it, therefore, intimated to the parties that they could free themselves from those restraints at any moment by making the re-exchange before referred to. These considerations do not, however, affect the character of the decree in the slightest degree. It is still true that the decree is a final one, and that the restraints imposed by it are absolute and unqualified; and the only question, therefore, is whether, as they stand, they are legal or illegal.

I. The United States does not claim to have the slightest right or interest in the shares in question, either on its ow naccount or as representing the general public, nor does it in any way impeach or question the title of the Northern Securities company to those shares. It does, indeed, claim that the acquisition of those shares was forbidden by the Sherman anti-trust act, and that the act of acquiring them was, therefore, a criminal offense; but that is no impeachment of the title of the Northern Securities company. The mere fact that the acquisition of property is made criminal furnishes no ground for impeaching the title of a person in possession of property can be impeached is by the assertion of a title to that property in opposition to his, and, in the case of the shares in question, thero is confessedly no person who does or can assert a title to them in opposition to the Northern Securities company, and, for that reason, as has been shown, the acquisition of those shares by that company did not, and could not, constitute a civil tort. But even when property is acquired by one person from another by fraud of a civil tort, the latter can never impeach the title of the former, unless the tort be a statutory one, and the statute expressly declares that no title shall be acquired by means of such tort. Equity may, indeed, sometimes give relief in such cases, but only by rescinding the transaction, i. e., by compelling the tort-feasor to reconvey to the person injured what he has acquired from him, on receiving from the latter what he gave him in exchange.

II. Such then being the title of the Northern Securities company to the shares in question, the decree declares that it shall never enjoy those shares except by alienating them. Moreover, so long as that company chooses to retain those shares, the decree produces two extraordinary results, namely, first, that two continental lines of railway are taken out of the control of a small minority of their shareholders; secondly, that the bulk of the earnings of the same railways, applicable to the payment of dividends, is absolutely tied up.

What, then, can be said in support of such a decree? The court claims that it is authorized by the statute, apparently on the theory that congress must have intended to authorize any proceeding which the court should find necessary to carry out the purposes of the statute. But the answer to that is that a lawgiver is supposed to mean only what he says, and greatest evils to public as well as to the railways; that, if the state itself should undertake the duty of rendering to the public the services which are rendered by railway companies, everyone would agree that its monopoly of such service should be complete and absolute; and when the state delegates to railway companies the right to render these services, and imposes upon them the corresponding duties, it becomes the function of the state, first, to see that those companies faithfully perform their duties to the public, and, secondly, to give them, so far as it is practicable, the same protection against competition that it would itself enjoy, namely, by permitting no railways to be constructed except under its own special authority, and by authorizing the construction of new railways only where those already existing are unable, or fail, to perform all the service which the public requires; that the ideal railway system would be a system comprising all the railways in any given state, and of course controlled by a single authority, namely, either by the direct authority of the state, or by the direct authority of those by whom the system is owned, acting, however, under such rules and regulations as the state from time to time sees fit to make; and such in particular is the system for which those who desire to see state ownership of railways should work; that, as has been already seen, the only competition possible among railway companies is at competing points, and that the only effect upon the public of unrestrained competition at all competing points is, first, to give those who "ship" their goods at competing points lower rates than they are in justice entitled to receive, and, secondly, to give those unreasonably low rates at the expense of those who can "ship" their goods only at non-competing points; and, finally, that it was such competition as that just mentioned that caused the only great and widespread dissatisfaction with railway rates that ever existed in this country, and that the dissatisfaction thus caused was so great and widespread as to lead to the enactment of the interstate commerce act.

Diseases Cured!

PAY NO MONEY IN ADVANCE.

Many sick people have suffered so much from unskilled and unscrupulous specialists that they have lost all faith in doctors. Many have paid large fees and have taken medicine for years to no benefit. They want to get well and are willing to pay a good price to be cured, but they very justly object to paying a large fee in advance. They want a trial treatment. To all such I make this—

REMARKABLE OFFER:

Simply write me, giving your name and address and stating as clearly as possible your trouble. When I have made a careful examination and diagnosis of your case and entered it in my case book, I will send you one package of medicine on trial, which you can take at my risk. If it gives any relief the cost will be $5. If it fails to help you it costs you nothing, and you shall be the judge.

ALL THE RISK IS MINE.

Can anything be fairer than this? I am making an offer which no other physician will make. They can't afford to. I refer to any bank in Duluth as to my financial standing and responsibility. This offer proves that I have great faith in my remedies. I KNOW they will cure, otherwise I wouldn't dare make this offer. It would ruin me, as I ship a hundred packages every day. I have tested this system for twenty years and I know that nine people out of ten are willing to pay where they get any benefit.

NO CURE, NO PAY.

is my motto. I do this to convince you who hesitate—who doubt all men's claims. I carry a line of specific medicines which cannot be had anywhere else in the state. Their power to cure disease is simply marvelous.

MODERN FABLES BY GEORGE ADE

The Modern Fable of the Business Partner Who Handled the More Important Details.

(Copyright, 1903, by R. H. Russell.)

Once there were two Nerve Specialists who had gone out into the Clover Belt to separate the Jays from their Bank Accounts.

When they arrived in the High and Uncrown they found that the gladsome Reub had been reading the Papers and their schemes flattened out. So they were trying to get back to New York.

In any part of the U. S. A. when a Pneumatic Enterprise blows up and leaves a Napoleon of Finance hanging on to the ragged Edge of the Jumping-Off Place, his one Desire in Life is to make a Swift Touch for enough to carry him to Jersey City. He figures that he can swim the rest of the Way.

The two polite Grafters were very keen to get back to the throbbing Metropolis, where so much is happening that one may go Broke without exciting Comment, and where the Carnation in the Button-Hole is often doing a Double Turn with the expired Meal Ticket.

But when they did the Committee on Ways and Means they found that they were sitting on the Hard-Pan, with no Assets except some Laundry ready to be sent out and several Letters wishing them all kinds of Luck.

In every Business Combination of two or more there is one Human Fox who is known on the Outside as the Brains of the Concern. He ribs up the Schemes and then allows Mr. Patsy Bolivar to climb over the Transom and take all the Chances.

If the Deal explodes he is sitting outside of the Danger Zone, fanning himself and explaining that his Partner did not follow Directions.

Any one who has attended a Physical Culture Soiree may have noticed that the Artist who gets the Decision, after losing all the Chances, why not the Long End for me?"

"You forget that it was my Master Mind that evolved the whole Plan," said the Manager. "I have promised to send you up. Therefore my Reputation as a Manager is at Stake. I think I am entitled to at least 25 per cent on account of the Strain on my Reputation. If you should let go of the Trapeze and splatter yourself all over the Landscape, think of the Injury that would be done to my Professional Standing. In addition to thinking out all the Details of this Undertaking, I conducted the Business Negotiations with that Skill and Sagacity which are usually lacking in the Common Skate known as the Producer. In other Words, I made them hand over the Currency. In Fact, I figure that I have done practically everything connected with this Job except the one minor detail of going up in the Balloon. You have been relieved of all Worries and Responsibilities. I have smoothed out the Preliminaries and now all you have to do is to make the Ascension."

"I can see that I am lucky to get Half," said the Mark. "Slip me the Fifty and I will take a Chance. I need the Money."

"I shall hold the Money until you come back," said the Manager. "I should prefer not to give it to you now. If anything happens, it will not be of any Use to you and might fall into the Hands of Irresponsible Strangers. It is the duty of every good Manager to protect the Financial Interests of those associated with him."

"But when I am up there, dodging Clouds, how am I going to keep Tab on you down here?" asked the Mark.

"Don't worry," was the Reply. "If you come out alive today, I'm going to send you up again. In fact, I think I shall keep sending you up until something happens. As long as you are good for the Coin, I'll never quit you."

MORAL: Never doubt a Business Man, walloped into a Pulp, never collects the Purse. The Coin is passed over to a pale Gentleman of thoughtful Mien who is known as the Manager. He attends to the Intellectual Part of the Game and holds out about 75 per cent of the Gross.

If a Manager is very Successful and owns a Spark-Wagon carrying five People he becomes known as a Promoter. If he can induce a large Bunch of Good Things to go out and connect with the Wherewithal and then bring most of it up and hand it to him where he is sitting behind the Front Porch, drinking his Rickey, then he is known as a Great Financier.

The Bunko Team stranded out in the Prairie Wilderness had a Manager, who had sufficient Gall to be a Promoter and who hoped to be a Great Financier some day. In case the Public forgot to lock up at Night.

The other half of the Outfit was the Customary Mark. He went out and dug up and then whacked with the Brains of the Concern. He was afraid to cut loose for the Manager often told him, "Anytime that you lose me you stop eating."

"And what would you do if you lost me?" asked the Mark, who was weary of splitting the Receipts.

"I can always find one," replied the astute Manager. "They are born at the rate of one a Minute and they never get next until it is too late. Do not desert me in this Crisis. If you stick, I think I may be able to find some Work for you to do."

It befell that the Village in which they were shell-roaded had advertised a Balloon Ascension for Independence Day. The Natives rejoiced in the Fact that the

THE ARTIST AND THE MANAGER.

Colonies had thrown off the Yoke of British Tyranny and Oppression and in order to give evidence of their belated Joy they were going to watch the man go up in the Balloon.

When the Natal Day of our glorious Liberty dawned on the Yap Settlement and the Local Population began to coagulate along the Main Street, it was discovered that the daring Aeronaut had been taken with Cold Feet and refused to go up.

The Committee was in despair. Now comes the Part showing the Value of a Manager. The Brains of the Concern went to the Committee and agreed to send his Partner up in the Balloon in consideration of 100 Plunks to him in the Hand paid. Then he sought out the Patsy end of the Sketch and broke the Good News to him.

"We get 100 Samoleons," he explained. "Where do you come in?" asked the Mark. "If I give the whole Show and take

MR. DOOLEY'S BARTENDER

Discusses the Kentucky Feud.

Cincinnati Enquirer: "Were ye iver in a Kintucky feud, Flannigan?" inquired Mr. Hennessy.

"I was not," replied the bartender. "I enjoy th' possession iv me limbs in a degree of pugnacity as anny wan iv me lonje line iv fighting ancistors, too. Th' fightin' blood iv th' Flannigans is celebrated in song an' sthory, an' if necessity arises I cud lade a First ward riot or cleaned out a saloon, but there are some histilities at which me sinse iv duty to humanity in gin'ral, to say nothing iv considerations iv me own personal filth and hygiene, compel me to draw th' line.

"Taking the most charitable view iv it, Hinnissy, Kintucky feud is too much iv a good thing. There's no place in th' immortality iv th' soul, but th' immorality iv th' scrap is repugnant to all th' better feelings iv me nature. It does not harmonize with me conception iv eternity at all, at all. I hate to think iv a deadly scrap exhandling fr'm inverlasting to ivertasting. guns without end, amin.

"I hate to think that whin a prominut citizen iv Kintucky, feeling it imperative upon him to assuage th' pangs iv thirst, asks his lifelong frind an' neighbor fr a jug iv bourbon, an' receives by mistake a jug iv rye instead, the life-long frind an' neighbor involved in a sea iv doubt an' uncertainty—I hate to think that th' offinded Kintuckian not only launches th' frind iv his bosom lickety-split into eternity, but starts an irrepressible conflict thundering down th' ages fr both families iv all succeeding ginerations to mix up in with ever increasing violence an' furore.

"I thought the scripchoors fixed a time-limit whin they said th' sins iv th' fathers should be visited upon th' childer unto th' third an' fourth ginerations," observed Mr. Hennessy.

"Th' holy scripchoors, Hinnissy, have nothing to do with London prize-ring or Marquis-iv-Queensberry, or Kintucky-feud rules. On sich occasions th' scripchoors are not permitted to sit in th' game. They are expicted to sthand aside an' not interfere with th' line-up. They can't even rise to a question iv personal privilege, without being ruled out iv order. Th' Kintuckian respicts th' law an' gospel in th' abstract, but whin he has a feud on his hands he uses thim fr gunwadding. No, Hinnissy, when a Kintucky feud starts, 'tis not to lower th' speed record. There's no circular track, no homestitch, no wire, no judges with stopwatches to split ye a quarter iv a second. No matter how good or how bad th' start, there's no finish. As I view it, Hinnissy, 'tis especially harrud on th' childer. 'Tis deplorable to teach th' doctrine iv hate an' th' theory an' practice iv assassination to babes an' sucklings. A Kintucky father rises fr'm family prayers an' calls his tin-year-old kid to his knee an' sternly reproves him fr getting too gay an' intimate with th' childer iv his mortal enemy across th' creek.

"'John,' he says, 'I saw ye yesterday on th' same side iv th' street with that Flickum kid. I have warned ye repeatedly that ye must have nothing to do with him until ye git old enough to kill him. John, ye are scandalizing th' family an' bringin' me gray hairs down in sorrow to th' grave. Be yer continued acts iv disobedience ye have inkloshed me patience. I am agin corporal punishment on principle, but me duty now is as plain as ye will find the application iv me gad severe. Why do ye not respict th' counsel an' advice iv yer good, kind, loving, anxious father, an' instid iv ruining yer morals with such low associates, spind yer time at th' target in th' back yard, learning to be a crack shot, so whin ye have reached th' age iv maturity an' discretion ye can pump thim full iv lead? I have been too indulgint an' lenient with ye. Come with me into th' woodshed till I whale some sinse iv filial affection an' family pride an' decincy an' honor an' chivalry an' manliness into ye.'

"'But, pa,' says John. 'Pa, ye wrong me. I merely spoke to that polecat Flickum kid to tell him I would slop an' spatter his blood all over Smearitt county befure Christmas.'

"'Ha, ye did, did ye?' says pa, snatching th' kid to his swelling bosom in a transport iv paternal love an' pride an' joy. 'Ye taold him that, did ye? Glory be, ye are a child after me own heart. Ye are th' apple iv me eye. Ye are bone iv me bone an' flish iv me flish. Ye are a credit to yer noble lineage. Ye are a bright an' shinin' ornamint to society. Now may I depart in peace, fr I have killed that kid's father, his four uncles an' I have begotten me a son who will follow in th' footsteps iv his sire an' kill th' risin' gineration iv reptiles with th' same untiring diligence an' unabated zeal. John, th' nixt time I go to Louisville I will buy ye a new Winchester, an' iv fightin enough to burn. 'Twould be ammunition enough to burn. 'Twould be premature fr ye to start in killing thim just yet, John, but yer precocity is pardonable an' does ye credit. 'Tis a healthy sign. If ye are as industrious as ye are ambitious, ye'll make a great man iv yersilf, John. Industry, ambition an' an aptitude to seize opportunities, thim are th' essential qualification that lead to succiss. Keep plugging away at th' target, John. Remimber, practice makes perfict. I have a few minutes to spare, so Johnny get yer gun, an' I will give ye a lesson!'

"Does he also teach John about th' origin an' purpose of the feud?"

"To th' extint iv his ability. Th' origin iv most feuds is lost in antiquity, but in some cases a few glimmerings iv it have been handed down be tradition.

"'Pa,' says John between assassinations, 'Pa, how did it happen and what is it all about.'

"'Ye must not be too curious, me son,' says pa. 'There are some things that defy scientific analysis an' set the human intellect at naught. Iv th' ripeness iv yer imintal facuities 'twill be enough for ye to know that ye exist, without goin' behind th' returns an' attimpting to trace yer lineage back to th' particular monkey that forefathered ye in th' wilds of Africa. 'Tis the same with the ancient an' honorable institution, our family feud. What though its beginning were obscure an' insignificant, see what it has got to now! Granted that it had a poor an' paltry genesis, that it was even at wan time in th' dim an' misty past without form an' void, mark ye its stiddy an' amazing development to its presint state iv perfection an' dignity, which fills th' wurld with astonishment not unmixed with a thrilling sinse iv awe an' horror an' alarm! But I will tell ye, me son, all I know about it. According to some authorities, 'twas in the year iv 1827, although other able historians set it down in 1712, an' still others say 'twas contimporaneous with th' building iv th' pyramids in Egypt. Anyway, as 'twas told to me be me father befure me, 'twas wan fine Sunday morning whin this particular wan iv yer remote ancestors was returning fr'm church with a fellow deacon, an' th' two iv thim fell to discussing th' sermon, wan iv thim holding that th' tixt was in th 'sivinth chapter iv Matthew an' th' other insisting 'twas th' wan hundred an' tinth Psalm. I think 'twas yer ancestor that advanced th' Matthew theory, but ye needn't worry yer head about that. I always objected to it as incompetint, irrelevant an' nonsinsical. But each bet tin barrels iv th' purest Kintucky moonshine he was right, an' th' minister decided that both were wrong, an' they called him a liar, an' he said they were no gintlemen, an' all three iv thim drew guns, an' th' shooting began, an' has been continued iver since with a few slight intermissions fr'r refreshmints an' funerals. Th' minister was a new-comer in Kintucky, an' as nobody iver appeared to avinge him, that branch iv th' fued became extinct on th' spot. But th' other two brave min had been so fortunate as to begat sons an' daughters enough to make a flourishing venditta iv it, an' as each family has stiddfastly pushed th' good thing along an' nobly pressed all their frinds an' relatives from all quarters into it, 'tis become wan iv th' largest, finest an' most desperate feuds in Kentucky, an' justly ranks as wan iv th' marvels iv civilization.'"

"Have ye any idea iv th' extinct iv th' casualty list?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"I have not. But I have read that in wan feud alone in th' past few years 142 min have been killed, ev'ry wan iv thim being shot in th' back fr'm ambush. Whin a man is going unconcernedly along a road, a gun in th' ambush is worth two in that fillow's hip-pockets."

COMING EVENTS AT THE THEATERS

"La Mascotte" and the "Pirates of Penzance" to be Sung at the Lyceum Next Week—"Charity Ball" to be Reproduced at Metropolitan Wednesday Night.

For next week two operas of standard merit have been selected by Manager Walle for the Northwestern Opera company at the Lyceum theater.

Audran's "La Mascotte" and Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance" are to be the bills, the former from Monday to Wednesday and the latter the balance of the week.

"The Pirates" will be sung with a chorus and surroundings probably as satisfactory as ever seen in summer opera in the West, with no interpolations. Miss Jenkins will have the part of Mabel and will have extensive opportunity to use her voice. The opera will have all the attention possible bestowed upon its preparation, and a fine performance may be looked for.

"La Mascotte" will be handled with as much care, and in this opera there will be a big Amazonian march by the Northwestern company's chorus, which has shown already some of its abilities along that line in the "Black Hussar." Miss Hayden will also introduce in this piece a new specialty number, to be sung with chorus, lights and effects, which will lend it strength.

Miss Jenkins will not be in the cast for the opening bill next week.

The fourth week of the Northwestern company's summer engagement promises to bring forth points in its success, which have not developed as yet. Some new voices will be added within a short time and surprises in the operas will be in store for the late summer. The company will remain in Duluth indefinitely, its success having been pronounced and the public generally taking an interest in it and tendering it deserving praise.

The company will be well cast for the coming week and Messrs. Young and Felch, who have become popular comedians, will have plenty to do. Mr. Felch, especially, is making a great hit with his dry humor and his intense local gags, which bring down the houses.

The company has been cast for "La Mascotte" as follows:

Lorenzo, the XVII, prince of Piombino..... .....Stanley Felch
Frederick, prince of Pisa..... .....Sylvan Langlois
Pippo, a shepherd..... .....George Lyding
Rocco, a farmer..... .....Dan Young
Matheo, an innkeeper..Harry Keough
Parafante ,a sergeant.....Earl Schwartz
Doctor..... .....Phil Watson
Bettina, the mascot...Bertha Hayden
Fiametta, the daughter of Lorenzo..... .....Sylvester Cornisa
Angelo, herald..... .....Allie Cooke
Luigi, herald..... .....Alice Stewart

The argument of the opera is as follows: The action is laid in Piombino, during the fifteenth century. Rocco, a farmer, is in the worst of luck. He sends a pitiful letter full of the anger and anguish of his hard lot to his brother, Antonia, a rich and prosperous farmer. This letter is carried by Pippo, who, upon his return, says that Antonia has decided to give him a royal present, that of Bettina, the maid-of-all-work for the rich brother, and a mascot. Bettina now arrives bearing a basket of fresh eggs and a letter of advice, which are received with coldness, not to say derision, by Rocco, and putting the letter in his pocket he leaves the scene. During his absence Pippo declares his love to Bettina, and is delighted to find that she reciprocates his affection, and as they are about to embrace, Rocco returns, and now almost frantic with grief and anger bids her begone. The maid gathers up her effects, and weepingly inquires whether there is any answer to the letter she has brought. He savagely takes the letter from his pocket and reads what amscot is. Sorrow is turned into joy and embracing Bettina he proposes to make her comfortable. Meanwhile a hunting party, among whom are King Lorenzo and his daughter, Princess Fiametta, have arrived and propose to rest their weary limbs at the farm. The prince being a rather poverty-stricken scion of nobility, learns that Rocco has a mascot, and with thec ustomary liberality of prnices in general, confiscates her and silences the apposition of Rocco and gives him choice of inhabiting a dungeon cell or a palace—in the former as a prisoner of state, or in the latter as lord chamberlain. Rocco chooses the latter.

The second act opens in the grand ducal palace of Piombino. Fiametta insists upon his consent to her marriage with Pippo. An idea occurs to the king that by so doing he rids himself of the great danger to his mascot. He graciously informs Pippo that he has created him duke of Villa Rossa, with the privilege of drawing 50,000 crowns a year from an empty treasury. Bettina, upon learning these facts, consents to marry the king, who intends it as a matter of form only for the further protection of his mascot. In the grand finale of the second act the two weddings are about to take place, when Pippo and Bettina desert their respective bride and bridegroom and escape.

The third act opens in the adjoining duchy of Pisa. Prince Frederick is at war with Lorenzo, who is dethroned by his people and is forced to flee with his daughter, Fiametta in disguise. Pippo and Bettina, after making their escape from Lorenzo's palace, join Prince Frederick's army, Bettina disguising herself as a soldier. Pippo, having a mascot by his side, performs great deeds of valor, is made captain, and leads Prince Frederick's forces to many victories. In the opening scene of the third act the war is about to close.

The cast arrangement for "The Pirates" is as follows:

Maj. Gen. Stanley, of the British army ..... .....Dan Young
Richard, a pirate chief ..... ..... .....Sylvan Langlois
Samuel, his lieutenant ..... ..... .....Earl Schwartz
Frederic, a pirate apprentice ..... .....George Lyding
Edward, a sergeant of police..... ..... .....Stanley Felch
Mabel, Maj. Gen. Stanley's youngest daughter .....Eleanor Jenkins
Kate, Edith, Isabel, Maj. Gen. Stanley's daughters...Bertha Haydn .....Ivy Teel, Alice Stewart
Ruth, a piratical maid-of-all-work ..... .....Sylvester Cornish

Frederic, when a boy, was ordered by his father to be "bound out" to a pilot until this 21st birthday. By the mistake of his blundering nurse-maid, Ruth, he was bound instead to a pirate, one of the celebrated pirates of Penzance—celebrated because of their great gentleness, as they had a rule never to molest an orphan, being orphans themselves. The opera opens with the chorus of pirates, who are drinking and making merry in honor of Frederic, who has today attained his majority, and is going to leave them for a more commendable occupation. Ruth desires Frederic to marry her and take her with him, and he promises to do so, never having seen any other woman. At that instant he hears girls' voices in the distance, and their fresh young beauty compared with his middle-aged nursemaid causes him to denounce her as a "gay deceiver." The girls are daughters of Maj. Gen. Stanley, of the British army, and have just landed from a British warship for a few hours' walk on land with their father. Frederic immediately falls in love with Mabel. The pirates return and discover the girls, and think here is an opportunity to all get married with impunity. But the arrival of the major general on the scene and his announcement of his being an orphan, melts the hearts of the pirates, and they allow the girls to go.

Act 2 takes place in the major general's ancient baronial hall, which he has recently purchased. He is discovered, surrounded by his daughters, drowned in remorse for having told the "terrible story" to the pirates of his being an orphan. Frederic and Mabel try to comfort him, after which they bid each other farewell, as Frederic is to lead the police in an expedition to exterminate the pirates. While Frederic is left alone for a few minutes the pirate king and Ruth come to him and show him the document by which he was bound out to them. It clearly states "until his 21st birthday," and as his birthday is on the 29th of February, he has seen only five birthdays. His sense of duty compels him to return with them once more. He is in turn with them to tell them of the major general's story of his being an orphan. Thereupon they swear vengeance upon the major general, and come by night to take him prisoner, but are overpowered by the police who are on guard. The major general orders the pirates to prison, whereupon they confess they are English noblemen "who still love their queen." Upon promise of giving up their piratical career, they are allowed to go. That releases Frederic and makes all happy.

"THE CHARITY BALL"

To Be Repeated at Metropolitan Next Wednesday.

"The Charity Ball," produced at the Lyceum last week and which proved to be a gerat success, is to be repeated by request next Wednesday night at the Metropolitan theater for the benefit of St. Luke's hospital. The announcement is received with much pleasure, as there were hundreds of people who were unable to see the beautiful performance last week.

The production of "The Charity Ball" last Friday was one of the greatest triumphs any local people have ever enjoyed. It is doubtful if the great society play ever had a more elaborate or artistic presentation. The performance next Wednesday will be exactly the same as given last week. The Silberstein & Bondy company will again take charge of the stage, and, if possible, the furnishings will be on a more elaborate scale than ever. The general verdict of the large and fashionable audience which witnessed the performance last Friday was that it was one of the most finished and beautiful plays ever seen on the Lyceum stage. As the curtain arose on the first act a burst of enthusiastic applause greeted the splendid picture.

The Metropolitan theater will certainly be crowded Wednesday evening, as a large number of tickets are being sold.

"BEN-HUR."

The most important booking for the coming season in this city is Klaw & Erlanger's massive production of "Ben-Hur," which will be presented at the Lyceum theater for four days, opening Wednesday evening, Dec. 23. This great spectacular drama will be mounted here exactly as first presented at the Broadway theater, New York, Nov. 29, 1899, where it ran for twenty-four weeks to the utmost capacity of the house. During the following three years it was presented in only thirty cities in the East and Middle West. Its record is 1075 performances in 131 weeks in thirty-one cities to receipts exceeding $2,50,000. All the original scenery and mechanical effects, including the marvelously effective reality, the chariot race, will be seen here. Three trained camels will also be a feature. The company, as in past seasons, will number 350 principals, chorus and ballet.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

"The Darling of the Gallery Gods" Presented.

New York, June 27.—Two Cincinnati girls are stars of the greatest roof garden entertainment which has been given in this country. They are Miss Emma Carus and Miss Trixie Friganza, and they head a great aggregation of talent at the Crystal Gardens on top of the New York theater. They made their appearance in a burlesque of Miss Blanche Bates's recent triumph entitled "The Darling of the Gallery Gods." The production is far more elaborate than the ordinary summer burlesque, and the book and music are in thorough keeping. Both Miss Carus and Miss Friganza have won well-deserved fame in this town, and each has a large and devoted personal following among the theater-goers here. With them are associated Miss Mamie Gilroy, Miss Mae Taylor, Junie McCree, D. L. Don, William Cameron, Joseph Kane, Pat Rooney, Emma Francis, Bedini and Arthur.

The gardens, which are under the direction of George W. Lederer, are an entire novelty in decoration and seating arrangements. Heretofore the New York Roof Garden has failed as a money maker, largely because it has been almost impossible for the entire audience to see the stage in front, and this difficulty has been completely remedied. Beginning at the usual time the performance is opened by three vaudeville turns, which last until 9 o'clock. Then come the burlesque, which is about an hour and a half's duration. Following this there are two great vaudeville turns, Prof. De Kolta, the magician, and Ned Wayborn's minstrel misses. This is a complete novelty for New York, as the turn opens with the ofo part of a minstrel show, during which the twenty young girls appear with their every day faces. Then they blacken up their faces in regulation style in full view of the audience, and begin the first part of the usual minstrel show. The performance winds up with an hour of review, of which George W. Lederer was the originator in this country. It is called "The Dress Show," and contains burlesques of "The Sultan of Sulu," "The Prince of Pilsen," and other successes of the season just past.

Miss Josephine Hall's return to New York was quite in keeping with the cold and clammy weather that prevailed last week. The only enthusiasm displayed by the critics was the unanimous opinion that the show was too bad for any kind of weather. Albert E. Aarons, under whose direction the production was made, feels naturally indignant at New York's lack of judgment, and declares that he will take his show away as soon as possible. So far there is no indication that any one will try to prevent him.

If anything can save "The Runaways" at the Casino from financial failure it will be the appearance of Miss Fay Templeton, who walked into the performance on Monday night and made good, as she always does. Already the box office receipts have been nearly doubled, and her personal popularity should be enough to carry it all summer.

Harry Conor in his part in "The Blonde in Black" at the Knickerbocker, is called upon to measure six of the show girls for dresses in the first act. This involves the appearance of the young ladies in corsets, which has naturally turned Conor's thoughts in that direction. The one thing which has troubled him of recent years has been his own appearance owing to too much good living and too little exercise. The other evening Conor surprised his comrades by appearing on the stage in a way that would have done credit to Berry Wall in his halcyon days. He explained later that with his mind fixed on the subject of corsets he had invented one for himself and his tailor had carried out his idea with great success.

George H. Broadhurst, the author, recently got the idea into his head that he wanted an automobile. Having some loose change at the end of the season he wandered into one of the places where these machines are sold and was taken for a little spin in the vehicle that most took his eye. He returned to the shop enthusiastic and asked how much that was. "Oh," exclaimed the salesman, "that one is very reasonable. It is only $12,000." Broadhurst looked at it again and sadly shook his head, then he retorted, with much feeling, "How did you know that I was the author of 'A Fool and His Money?'"

No sooner had Weber and Fields returned to town than their property man hailed them one afternoon and handed them two well-worn ten-dollar bills which had been an important feature during the season just closed. They represented the money, deposited at every performance in the center of the stage, being the amount of the wager between William Collier and Lew Fields as to which could choke Joe Weber the most scientifically. The two bills were regarded as properties and the man who has charge of all the stage accessories was held responsible for them of this load of care, and Weber and Fields promptly blew it is on champagne on them.

It is now thought that the first production of Victor Mapes's play, "Alexander the Great," with which James K. Hackett intended to open the new Globe theater in Boston early in September, will be made here. The production is so elaborate that Mr. Hackett thinks he will not be able to have it ready in time for the Boston date, and in that event he will save it for his first appearance in this city.

Edward E. Rise is busily engaged in writing the music for a new comedy entitled, "Too Pee the Belle of Zubu." He is working in collaboration with John J. Graham, musical director for the William G. Stewart Opera company, and the book is by Edward Van Zile, author of several popular works. The comedy is in two acts and deals with American expansion. The first takes place in Hartford, and introduces the governor of the state at the capital. The second act is on an island of Zubu in the Philippines during the war with Aguinaldo. Mr. Graham is the first conductor to direct a Gilbert & Sullivan opera in this country, and for the past three seasons has been conductor for "San Toy."

George Ade, whose "Sultan of Sulu" has made a fortune already, makes a radical departure in his new play, which he will call "The Country Chairman." It is strictly a rural plot, aiming to picture such life in the West as "Shore Acres" did in the East. The central character is a strongly drawn type of the country politician, a middle-aged lawyer, vigorous, bluff and honest.

Blanche Ring, now a popular Broadway star, is an example of how fast one can rise in the theatrical profession, especially in musical comedy. A dozen years ago she was living quietly in the Boston suburb of Nantasket. Both her father and grandfather had been connected with the theatrical business and early in life she was devoted to the stage. One of her first exciting experiences was when she had the role of a ballet girl in "A Parisian Romance." Richard Mansfield turned to her suddenly and handed her a glass of champagne. "I was nearly frightened out of my wits," said Miss Ring, but she didn't faint or break down, and Mansfield interested himself in her career.

"Not much more than a year ago," Miss Ring added, "I used to walk past the Broadway theater because I didn't have nerve enough to present my card at the box office. I was then in vaudeville, and few knew even that. The turning point in my career was when I went to Mrs. Osborn's playhouse to sing "The Belle of Avenue A." Before that, in "The Defender," that song, "The Good Old Summer Time," made some friends for me, but it was the other night that brought the substantial popularity. Daniel Frohman has advised me to stick to musical comedy, but I do want some day to try my hand at an emotional part."

Although Miss Ring does not look the part in public, she is devoted off the stage to her son, a sturdy youngster of 7, who directs the policy of home life without any opposition.

Vincent Serrano, who was formerly the leading man for Miss Annie Russell, and later added to his reputation by his acting in "Arizona," has signed a contract with Klaw and Erlanger to create the role of Taro Burton in Ononto Watanna's play, "A Japanese Nightingale." The part is that of a Japanese who has been educated in America and returns home to find his sister living with an English friend as his wife. It is understood that Klaw and Erlanger have promised, if Serrano makes good in the new play, to star him next season.

Victor Morley, the new Lord Somerset of "The Prince of Pilsen," has been a good deal of a globe trotter. He has been in nearly every part of the United States, and has appeared professionally throughout England, South Africa, Australia, India and China.

Miss Fay Templeton scored a triumph last Monday night in New York in the principal role in "The Runaways," which had been running six weeks and drew a first-night house that packed the Casino. It was nearly 12 o'clock when Miss Templeton's first night audience dispersed.

"The Yankee Consul," is the title given by Henry W. Savage to the new comic opera which he will produce early in September. The two acts are laid in a South American republic, and the doings of Uncle Sam's representative there supplies the principal humor of the wit. Henry Blossom, Jr., who hails from St. Louis, has written the book. He was at one time a newspaper correspondent in Mexico and South America, and has lately won fame in the literary world by two stories, "Checkers" and "The Documents in Evidence." The composer, Alfred G. Robin, is also from St. Louis, where for several years he has been the organist in one of the principal churches, as well as the director of the Apollo club.

The first production for next season will be an elaborate revival of "The Christian," under the direction of Liebler and Company, at the Academy of Music, on August 6. Edward J. Morgan will play his role of John Storm, and in the company will be Edgar Davenport, George Woodward, Mrs. Georgia Dickson, Frank C. Bangs and Miss Clara Blandick as Glory Quaile.

Miss Viola Allen evidently proposes that the performers engaged for her "Twelfth Night" production shall be able to speak blank verse correctly. Every player so far secured by Charles W. Allen for the organization has had cultural experience in the reading of Shakespeare, a special training that can only be acquired with companies of the first order. The selections already made are performers who made successes in Julia Marlowe's Shakespearean company and Beerbohm Tree and Ben Greet's companies in England. The latest players to be engaged are Frank Currier for the Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and Scott Craven for the Duke Orsino. Mr. Currier appeared as Sir Andrew with Miss Marlowe when she presented "Twelfth Night," and was also the stage manager of the company. He played Sir Andrew with George Dingold in Australia and was also the producer of the play. In both America and Australia Mr. Currier made great hits as Sir Andrew. Mr. Craven, who was leading man for Mrs. Langtry in England and was starred under George Edwardes' management in South Africa, enacted the Duke in Ben Greet's famous Shakespearean company, and at many special performances in England.

STORIES OF THE PAST

Historical Sketch Read By Hon. Peter White at Ishpeming.

Founders of the Iron Ore Industry Are Recalled.

Ishpeming, Mich., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the interesting features of the semi-centennial celebration of the Lake Superior Iron company was the historical sketch by Peter White. His address was as follows:

Mr. President: Many months ago I read a paper in this city at a great public gathering on the reminiscences of the then fifty years of its existence and operation in this place. The occasion was similar to this one, the celebration of the semi-centennial of a great sister corporation.

The invitation to perform a similar duty on this pleasant ocasion has sent me to my former manuscript and, on looking it over, I find that I must necessarily traverse some of the same ground. I could re-write such portions and change the language, but it would be a change merely for the sake of change, which is never desirable in itself, and in this case would be peculiarly difficult.

I am, therefore, constrained to ask your indulgence in repeating before you only some slight portions of my previous paper, with such additions as the lapse of time, or the names of persons peculiarly interested in this company have suggested.

During a portion of the year 1849 I lived in this township. There was then no town, village or city—only the unbroken forest, lakes filled with fish, an abundance of wild ducks, geese, deer, bear and other smaller animal life. When I came in May, 1849, there were only three men in all the territory that now constitutes Ishpeming. Their names were Capt. Samuel Moody, John H. Mann and Edmund Carthy Rogers. The first was killed at the battle of Franklin, Tenn., the second was drowned on Lake Superior in 1851, and the third became a celebrated physician in Chicago. He was a brother of Randolph Rogers, the great American sculptor.

When the town was to be given a legal organization, I had the honor and pleasure of giving Ishpeming its name. It is a Chippewa word meaning "On high" or "The highest." There is no other way to say heaven in the Chippewa language. It also means "the highest" place between two given points—thus Lake Michigan on one side and Lake Superior on the other. Ishpeming is the highest point, the dividing line. You have the Carp river running into Lake Superior and the Escanaba river into Lake Michigan—both running through your city, within one mile of each other.

The Lake Superior Iron company, in its inception and primary operation, came second only to the Cleveland Iron Mining company, beginning its operations in June, 1853.

Hon. Heman B. Ely and John Burt were the prime movers in the organization, exploration and development of this company. I presume that almost all know that Heman B. Ely was induced to come here and take the interest he did in this county, by John Burt. They came together, although Mr. Burt had been here many times several years previous. Mr. Burt was a son of the celebrated William Austin Burt, famous for his invention of the solar compass and also the first typewriter in the world. John Burt was from Macomb county, Michigan, and was a very active, farseeing and intelligent man. He was a large stockholder and many years a director of this company.

Up to 1853 there was no general mining law in Michigan. All companies organized before that had special charters granted direct to each company by the legislature. The new constitution of 1850 had just been adopted and ratified by a vote of the people, which forbad the legislature granting any charters except municipal, but provided that the legislature might pass a general mining law. It was so important for this part of the state to have an able man to represent us in the legislature of 1853 that we made sure to elect Hon. Herman Ely as our representative for the then coming session. He accomplished for us all that was good in the general mining law of 1853. The session of the legislature was then limited to forty days, and Mr. Ely told me that he never had worked so hard in his life. The farmers in the legislature wanted a general mining law that would have been worse than nothing. We owe a great deal to Mr. Ely for his work for us at that time.

Mr. Ely came from Rochester, N. Y., and joined with others in the development of this and allied interests. He was a man of education, great practical and scientific knowledge, with a wide experience. He had been admitted to the bar of the courts of New York, Ohio and Michigan, but had abandoned law practice and taken up railway telegraph construction, of a telegraph line westward from Buffalo to Cleveland, and westward from there, but the country was not yet ripe for such extensive telegraph lines, and he lost a large amount of capital on the scheme. His coming to Lake Superior was an effort to retrieve his fortunes, and in this he was heavily backed by his brother in Rochester and their friends. Coming here, he began the first railway, the one to the so-called Iron Mountains, and his influence in the community was at once conspicuous. He was a prime mover in everything which called for public spirit. We were indebted to him for our first public celebration of the Fourth of July and the opening of the completed ship canal at Sault Ste. Marie. I am sure no one would have noticed either but for him. Unfortunately, he died before he had been here very long, but his death brought us, as a natural result, the coming of his brother, Samuel P. Ely, a man in just as many respects remarkable. In the first two decades of this company I do not think it made any money, but it has always paid its debts promptly once a month, and in this connection I must not fail to give honorable mention of Richard S. Fay. He first became connected with this company in the late autumn of 1873, when the most damaging monetary panic ever known in the United States had swept over the whole country, when money could not be borrowed, even on a pledge of United States bonds of two for one. Joseph S. Fay, president of this company, called upon his nephew, Richard S. Fay, of Boston, to know if he could not, through his business (English), raise $200,000, as the company was just then sorely in need of it to meet liabilities speedily maturing and which couldn't be renewed at such a time. Richard's reply was: "I will cable London tonight and probably get an answer tomorrow." The answer came promptly, "Draw on us for $250,000 as you need it." This carried the company past its perilous crisis, and the directors were so well pleased with Richard that they at once made him general manager of the Lake Superior Iron company and its allied interests. When he took hold, the stock of the company was selling as low as $5 a share, and in a few months it advanced to par, $25, and later on for several years sold at from $50 to $80 per share.

After the death of Richard S. Fay, Joseph S. Fay, Jr., was made president and general manager of the company, and served as such very successfully to the time when substantially all its capital stock was sold to the present holders. The first captain of the mines of the company was Cullen C. Eddy; then came Gilbert D. Johnson, then Charles H. Hall, who was succeeded by the present Capt. W. H. Johnston. The company, under whatever management, has always been liberal and just to its employes and to the city or the public.

Thus company shipped its first iron ore and commenced its first work in June, 1853. In its first ten years it only succeeded in making ends meet and keeping even. In its next forty years it gave employment to thousands of men and shipped millions of tons of iron ore.

S. P. Ely was general manager of the Lake Superior Iron company from 1858 until 1872, when his interest in the newly discovered iron range in Minnesota became important enough to draw him away from us. He brought capital enough here to develop both the railway and the mines.

The company was organized Feb. 21, 1853. Its articles of association were recorded by me as county clerk on March 13, 1853. The stockholders were: Herman B. Ely, 2000 shares; Anson Gorton, 200 shares; Samuel P. Ely, 200 shares; George H. Ely, 200 shares; Alvah Strong, 200 shares. These same men were all directors for the first year. The prescribed capital authorized was $500,000; actually paid in, $20,000.

The Lake Superior long showed the value of the alliance of mines, ships and railways. We now see in the sister concern the attempt to handle all its own interests, with most attractive results. From simply producing iron ore of a certain grade, we now see the business scientifically expanded, and low grades are now profitably produced and mixed with better ones. They are shipped in the company's own cars, hauled over their own railroad, dumped into their own ships, freighted to their own wharves and furnaces. The company owns and manages limestone quarries, forests and wood-cutting camps, charcoal kilns and chemical works, furnaces and sawmills. They are about to make paper, and turn beets into sugar. They are platting towns and making settlements of farmers. On a model farm they are experimenting in cattle and sheep, and we are eating their glit edged butter. They are using and preparing to sell electric power from their water falls; they have entered on the preservation as well as marketry of forests, and are interested in the maintenance of fish and game.

In so doing they may be, for the moment, apparently making a monopoly, but they are rather accenting the possibilities of this greatly famed peninsula. In everything they are sellers in an open market, and they are giving many men chances they could in no other way obtain. They are offering premiums to brains and honesty, and, therefore, we celebrate their success, and the success of all such related enterprise. Of the trust, therefore, as of the man, the country asks but two things: Honesty and the remembrance of the commonwealth. And of the present as well as the past of the Lake Superior Iron company we may, therefore speak with confidence, and express to them our supreme good will.

Mr. White closed by quoting Kipling's "Recessional."

DULUTH'S FIRST ORCHESTRA.

This ancestor of Flaaten's skillful and artistic aggregation was made up of leading citizens, and the picture was taken thirty years ago, in 1873. Since that time all but three of the men shown in the picture have passed to the other shore, and but one of them, Henry S. Ely, now lives in Duluth. All of those shown, however, will be remembered by old-time residents of the city.

The orchestra used to meet for practice in a building that stood at the southeast corner of First avenue west and Superior street, where the Columbus block now stands. It was not a professional organization, by any means, but was made up for mutual pleasure and artistic rather than financial profit. It used to play in the social events of those bygone days, making a leading feature of musical programs.

Running from left to right, those in the top row are as follows: Porter Smith, then a bookkeeper for Newcomb Co., elevator men. He is now dead.

Henry S. Ely, then assistant postmaster, and still a prominent resident of this city.

— Peterson, tailor, now dead.

H. F. Thompson, attorney for the Duluth & Iron Range road for a number of years; died in Chicago.

W. H. Davy, then a member of the firm of Caswell & Davy, photographers, now a prominent citizen of Moorhead, Minn.

Those in th second row, from left to right, are as follows.

C. Ed Eyrter, Duluth's first druggist, who died in this city in 1876.

Franklin W. Ely, then employed with Newcomb & Co., elevator men; died in Florida in 1888.

C. H. Caswell, of the firm of Caswell & Davy, photograjhers; was living somewhere in Manitoba at last accounts.

Maurice H. Bywater, deputy collector of customs for many years and father of Maurice T. Bywater; now dead.

BEAUTIFYING THE CITY

Mrs. C. H. Merritt Tells What May Be Done to Add to the City's Appearance and Make It More Attractive to Resident and Visitor.

The nicety and skill with which the civil engineer will plan the road up the mountain side, making the erstwhile steep incline a comfortable path, over which thunders the iron monster, pulling its load of passengers, but demonstrates to us what can be done with skill and practice, to make our hillsides comfortable. The avenues are well planned. Now for the beautifying shade trees and shrubs to cover the barreness in summer and break the winds of winter.

Surely nature has done enough for our city, with its unsurpassed beauty of hills, rising gracefully from the edge of the "big sea water," but for man, is left that modifying of its rugged beauty by adding the leafy trees. As education, added to a clever mind, will make it brilliant and, too, a tardy education is better than none at all—just so this new movement in the right direction, because we have neglected our duty, and its beauty, in the past, is certainly the greater reason for our combined present effort.

Few of us are there that cannot recall the unsightly mass of stones where today we pride ourselves on Cascade park. Certainly no more forsaken spot could be found than that less than a decade ago; and today it is well worth the climb from Superior street to rest under its green branches. And what labor has done for that can be done with any place, and very often with small outlay of aught but patience, and after all we need more patience in this world than almost anything else.

Some urge the point, especially those in the higher portion of the city, of insufficient water supply, but one of the most beautiful gardens I have ever seen was made and kept in trim without either city water or main, for it was a woman's hand alone that taught the vines to climb and kept the weeds in subjection, and for twenty years faithfully watered each spot, carrying it all from a well, and yet during all that time it had been a pleasure, for a "thing of beauty is a joy forever."

Then, too, many excellent ideas are advanced for beautifying the numerous city flats, where continued effort can change the appearance into a veritable hanging basket. Many hardy plants will be found blossoming in this climate when other vegetation has entirely ceased. Take, for instance, the proud dahlia, which comes like a strong sister to take the place of the earlier showy peony.

Many plants are given us for landscape gardening, almost all of which are good, but individual tastes give us a varied assortment, which rather breaks the sameness. And, further, a plan particularly pleasing in one yard would hardly thrive in another, light, shade and plants considered. But one thing that must be uniform in the completeness of the whole is tidiness; that constant picking up of paper and scraps that seem to come in spite of all we do. And it is everybody's privilege and duty to help in this matter, even though we do not cultivate gardens.

This quite reminds me of the little story about the old woman who was continually sweeping the door yard, to the neglect of the interior, and when questioned as to her motive for so doing, she replied: "Why, bless you, scores go by that never come inside." Just so with our city; thousands of tourists and prospective buyers go through our streets each summer and judge us only by outside appearances.

NOVELTIES A NECESSITY

Circuses Must Get Them —Forepaugh-Sells Show Filled With Them.

Circuses are such old institutions that one would think managers could never get anything new for their programs in these late days.

That this is not true is due to the fact that the managers spend about half of their time thinking out new acts or novel elements for old ones.

This is the most important function of the circus business, and success is proportionate to fertility of imagination.

If the manager cannot think out new plans he must give place to somebody who can, for the public is not to be lured year after year into an arena where the same trick elephants do the same tricks; where the dancers wear the same costumes of the year before, and the acrobats do not jump any higher than they did during the previous season.

So it happens that this year is to have some new things in the circus line.

The engagement Monday of the great Adam Forepaugh & Sells Brothers' combined shows rouses the question of what this season is to bring forth that will not bore the circus devotee of ten or twenty seasons' standing, and what will make the circus worth while.

Of all the new features none has been so extensively advertised as the "Looping the Loop," on an ordinary bicycle. Wheelmen have done all sorts of tricks that seem impossible, until one sees them displayed, but for a rider to speed with his bicycle path over his head is something that has not been tried heretofore.

The loop is the track.

Its diameter is twenty-five feet, and the incline from which the rider gets his start is 110 feet long, and slants about 45 degrees. Mounting his wheel at the top of the incline, Diavolo, for such is the rider's circus name, glides down to the beginning of the loop at such a speed that he strikes the upward curve with a pressure of 900 pounds, nine times his own weight. The track is a trifle over three feet wide, Diavolo circles the inner periphery of the huge circle, and is consequently upside down at the top and going at the rate of about 100 miles per hour.

The time it takes to make the loop, if the rider is not killed in the try, is about three and one-half seconds by actual count.

Another new attracion of a very different kind is the drill of the Aurora Zouaves. Until the past two years this body of amateur soldiers has been celebrated for its wonderful manueverings in military shows and tournaments, where it has often astonished officers of the regular army by its facility in marching and other martial accomplishments. It is made up of young men from Aurora, Ill., where it was organized fourteen years ago.

The words "Human Birds of Passage," would mean anything to the average man unless he saw them on the billboard two weeks before the circus was due, and even then he would have to think hard before grasping their significance. The "Human Birds," of whom managers speak so affectionately are the most expert representatives of those aerial contorcionists who learn to forget there is such a thing as distance or dizziness when they find a perch on a trapeze fifty feet above terra firma. This variety of the genus avis has heretofore generally flown in pairs or trios, or quartettes at the most. The new wrinkle with the Forepaugh-Sells circus is to have a flight of seven of them at a time, and it is asserted by the circus agent that never before in the history of circuses has a flock of seven human birds been gathered together to delight the public. These seven birds are members of the Ryan-Zorella troupe of aerialists.

Numerous acrobatic performances are announced, but particular attention is called to the great Eddy family, seven in number. Handicapped with evening costumes, the women in long skirts, they accomplish the most marvelous gymnastic stunts.

The La Carmen company of wire walkers perform feats on a slender cable stretched high in the air, that the ordinary performer would find difficulty in performing on the ground.

These are but a few of the many features announced in preliminary proclamations. There will be all of the regulation acts that a big circus should have and many performances that no other circus has ever presented.

Will It Ever Stop?

Will the never-ceasing aches of the back ever stop? Many a sufferer mentally asks this question after vain efforts to find relief and cure for backache. There is a cure, but you can't expect to find it unless you know the cause of "that bad back." Most backache pains come from the kidneys, and the seat of the trouble must be attacked. Plasters, liniments, and lotions may relieve the ache, but will not cure, as they fail to reach the cause —the kidneys.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Cure bad back and every kidney ill—rheumatic pains, sleeplessness, nervous conditions, diabetes, dropsy, gravel and all complaints of the Kidneys and bladder down to that dread destroyer, Bright's disease. A safe and sure remedy, endorsed by friends and neighbors.

Can you ask for better proof than this—

DULUTH PROOF:

Mrs. John Pitts, of 123 West First street, says: "As the result of an attack of typhoid fever I suffered severely during a year with kidney complaint, and although I was treated by physicians I did not get any better. There was a constant dull aching across my back, so severe at times that I could hardly stoop or straighten. I did not rest comfortably at night, and in the morning felt tired and worn out. I also suffered a good deal from dull and persistent headaches. The kidney secretions were irregular, distressing and unnatural and my limbs were greatly puffed and swollen. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and procured a box at W. A. Abbett's drug store. I soon felt better and before long the aches and pains left me entirely, the kidneys were active and healthy and I felt as well as ever I did in my life."

Hypnotizing The School Cat.

PART II.

BY FLORENCE A. DAWSON.

Cecilia, having tried in vain every entreaty and bribe she could think of to induce Rosalie to reveal how she hypnotized the cat, resorted to feminine strategy to accomplish that end. At noon recreation the next day she linked her arm in Rosalie's.

"Rosalie, dear," she said, "I have designed the sweetest queen gown for you. I do hope you will wear it at the festival," and she displayed a pretty watercolor sketch of Rosalie in a cloud of organdie and apple blossoms.

"Oh, Cecilia, how lovely! How smart you must be to paint like that! But I can never afford such a gown," cried Rosalie, longingly.

"Yes, you can," said Cecilia. "Buy some cheap organdie when you are out tomorrow afternoon, and I'll paint it for you. No; it won't be a bit of trouble, and I'm bent on having you look your best. I'll paint you a beautiful apple blossom crown this afternoon.

All that afternoon, in her free time, Cecilia worked with her brush, converting a piece of paper into a crown of bewildering loveliness. So that night, when she again began to contemplate loss of sleep over Rosalie's secret, the future queen found it impossible to be so decided in her refusal to tell as on the previous evening.

When Cecilia was so sweet and unselfish how could Rosalie refuse? Slowly she put her hand into her pocket and drew forth a handkerchief, in the center of which was something tied in a bag. She held this up to Cecilia's nose.

"Goodness! What is that horrid stuff?" cried Cecilia. "I have been noticing that ugly smell all day, and couldn't imagine what it was."

"Cats don't think it horrid," said Rosalie. "It's valerian root. Cats go wild over it, as they do over catnip. And this is better for my purpose, for it smells stronger. By keeping a little of this in my——"

"Oh, you clever girl! That's how you do it!" And Cecilia broke into a peal of laughter that lost her all her deportment marks again.

The next day Cecilia, true to her promise, stayed in in order to paint the garlands. Rosalie, with the rest of the school, went out to shop. That evening, as the girls began to return and collect in the recreation hall, an unexplainable air of excitement and mystery prevailed. The girls, somehow, kept looking first at one door and then at the other, as though expecting some one. When the cat appeared, coming toward the lower door, every one seemed to spy him at once, and a murmuring and whispering arose on all sides. The next instant, however, this had died away, and the girls were staring at Mrs. Samuel's pet in silent surprise.

The cat paused on the threshold. He raised his head high and sniffed the air vigorously. Then, with a loud, strange cry, he ran up the floor into the center of the room, where he paused, his tail waving and his eyes glowing, while he continued to sniff the air in deep breaths.

"Goodness! What ails him?" exclaimed the girls as they gathered about him in a broad circle. And Dolly was not the only one who began to look guilty as well as frightened.

Suddenly, however, the cat's fierceness seemed to melt away. He lay down on his side and began to roll, stretch and purr in utmost content. The girls laughed in relief, but their relief was short lived. Springing to his feet, the cat began to move restlessly about within the circle, his tail waving furiously, his eyes fiercer than ever. His pace grew more and more rapid until, with another unearthly cry, he broke into a wild run. Then pandemonium reigned in earnest. The girls scattered and dodged with screams.

"He's mad!" cried a girl, suddenly. And a general stampede for the halls ensued, while the cat, darting at a window, leaped at one of the curtains and ascended it rapidly to the ceiling, where he hung suspended by his claws, crying miserably.

"What is the meaning of this noise, young ladies? Let me in at once!" said a voice without the upper door.

The girls drew back and Mrs. Samuels entered the room. In the doorway that lady paused and sniffed the air, very much as the cat had done.

"What is that dreadful odor?" she demanded. Then she caught sight of her pet, and all other thoughts vanished from her mind. Hurrying forward, she mounted a chair, rescued him from his perilous position and bore him away, her face pale with anxiety.

"It's all my fault, girls," said Rosalie, holding out the handkerchief full of valerian as she came forward. "It was this valerian I had in my pocket which set the cat crazy. I'll tell Mrs. Samuels."

But as she walked toward the door a shout of laughter mingled with exclamations of amazement made her pause. Every girl in the room had dived into her pocket and was holding out a handkerchief evidently containing exactly what Rosalie's did.

"Why—why—how did you guess?" gasped Rosalie. Then she caught sight of Cecilia's crimson face. "Oh, Cecilia, you told," she said.

"I did so want to try to hypnotize, Rosalie dear," stammered Cecilia. "And I had to stay in to paint, you know, and I just told Mary Seep, so she could buy me a bit of valerian. Mary swore she'd never breathe a——"

Mary Seep turned accusing eyes upon Dolly Hampdon. "Dolly saw me buy it," she said. "And she teased so—and she said she'd never tell."

Dolly looked reproachfully at Beatrice Swift. But further explanations were drowned in a gale of laughter.

"I fear that I haven't proved that girls can keep a secret," said Rosalie, when the merriment had subsided. "Let's all throw this stuff out the windows and air the room, girls. The smell in here must be strong enough to set fifty cats frantic. I'll tell and take the blame."

But the girls wouldn't hear to it. They knew that the cat had not been harmed. "We'll all keep this secret for you, anyhow, Rosalie," they promised. "And you shall be queen. You deserve to be, for you're the dearest, jolliest girl, and have given us no end of fun."

The Robins.

Two little robins lived up in a tree
(Blow the wind—blow the wind—blow!),
And those little fellows could never agree,
While their mother flew after their breakfast or tea
(O the wind—O the wind—O!).

When their mother would come, with a fat little worm
(Blow the wind—blow the wind—blow!),
They'd holloa and squawk, and wrangle and squirm,
Till the fat little worm in their stomachs was firm
(O the wind—O the wind—O!).

One morning, for breakfast, their mother went out
(Blow the wind—blow the wind—blow!),
And they raised such a noise that the wind raised a shout,
And ever since then the wind blows them about
(O the wind—O the wind—O!).

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S FISH PUZZLE.

Sour Grapes That Turned Sweet.

While dey wuz a-makin' of me, I wonders why de mischief dey didn't put a white skin over my po' little body?

Receiving no reply to this question, nor expecting any, for Jake was alone in the stable loft, he continued in a very discontented voice: "Dis ole skin of mine is the worriation of my life. I kin nebber be de President; I kin nebber be anybody! I duz well ernuff ter play wid Frank en' Nelly 'til company cums, den hit's 'Jake, you mus' go in de back yard now!' en' hit's all on account of me bein' black. I jus' wonders how I kin mek myself white."

After much thought on the subject Jake growled: "I don't keer! I don't want no white skin. Dem white children haz ter wash, en' wash, en' wash time en' ergin ebbey day, but dirt don't show on me. I don't want no white skin nor no money! Hit's a good thing I don't want hit, fer I nebber haz no money nor I nebber 'spects ter hab none. Mammy dun tole me yestiddy what she gwine ter do wid my wages when I gits big ernuff ter work!"

From the distance came a clear, loud call, "Jake, Ja-ke, Ja-a-ke'e!" repeated time and again, after frequent pauses to listen for an answer.

Curling himself comfortably into a little ball on top of a pile of soft hay, a broad grin illumined the round face of discontented Jake Hilton, and his eyes twinkled merrily as he assured himself, with many a chuckle, "Mammy kin call me 'til she gits tired more'n onct. I ent got no algs yit en I ont gwine ter look fer none 'til I gits ready. Frank en Nelly's havin' dey pleasure wid dem city children in de parlor. Jake's gwine ter pleasure hisself in de hay!"

The afternoon was warm, and to Jake's ears the call for him sounded further and further away. Every now and again the little fellow felt as if he were falling off the hay, so he rolled further away from the edge, lest, by some chance, he would fall through a hole in the floor of the loft near which the hay was piled. Once when he experienced the falling sensation, he was amazed to see a gentleman come to his rescue and seat him upright on a bin that held corn for the horses. Jake had never seen a gentleman dressed in the style worn by this stranger, and he opened his eyes wider and wider until the little old man begged him to quit stretching them so wide, lest they burst from their sockets.

"But, marster, I nebber see no genelmens dress up in red coat, wid silver dollars fer buttons, en he hat made outen green velvet, trim all 'round wid big gold moneys—I jus' 'blige ter open my eyes! You mus' hab money to burn, marster. Shore I nebber see no mens wear strings of gold money 'round dey necks—don't ax me not ter open my eyes, mister!"

In his excitement and surprise at seeing the curiously dressed old man, it never occured to Jake that it was anything out of the common to meet him in Mr. Ford's stable loft, nor did he think it strange that such a rich looking man should be talking familiarly with a ragged, dirty little darky.

"Jake," said the old man, "didn't I hear you say just a few minutes ago that you didn't want any money, nor a white skin?"

"Yes, marster."

"Then you said it because they are sour grapes to you."

"'Sour grapes,' marster?"

"Yes, sour grapes. That means that you said you did not want white skin nor money just because you thought you could not get them. Now, I can make you white in a minute if you will swallow this little pill in my hand."

"Thank de Lord a mercy! Do, Marster, gimme de pill, quick! Mammy nebber could git me ter swallow none of her pills, but I can't git hole of yourn fas' ernuff!"

Extending his chubby little black paw, the excited child snatched the pill from the old man and swallowed it without wiggling his body or making a moan or a wry face. What a miracle was performed in a moment! When Jake looked in the little pocket mirror that the old gentleman handed him his joy was unbounded. In place of his old, black, kinky haired self he saw a stout, fair-faced, red-haired boy with blue eyes and many freckles.

"Gee-ru-shee!" exclaimed Jake, joyfully, "ent I a beauty? Frunk can't hole a candle to me now."

His joy was short-lived; for as soon as his eyes glanced at the greasy clothes and bare feet his face became as woe-begone as if he had lost his mammy and his last friend in the world.

"What troubles you now, Jake?" inquired the wonderful old man in seeming surprise.

"Why sartin en shore, marster, you mought ez well er let me black. Ise ragged en patched, en haz no money, en I 'nuff sight ruther be a black boy dan a white un dat haz no money!—oh, I don't want ter be no white poor buckra!" wailed the distressed child most pitifully.

"Well, Jake, I'll make you rich; here's a roll of hundred dollar bills that will last as long as you live." And the gayly dressed stranger handed the boy such a large roll of money he could scarcely hold it. "Are you sure you're satisfied now—how about your sour grapes?"

"Oh, sir, dem sour grapes dun turned sweet, now, dat I kin hole dem in my han';" Jake laughed joyously as he looked carefully at his newly gained riches.

"You're just like many grown persons, Jake. You not only do without what you want and can't get, but you talk against it as well. You know you wanted to be white and to have money when you said you did not. Now remember, it is much worse to tell what is not true than it is to be poor and black!"

Before Jake could say "yessur" the old man disappeared down the ladder that led to the stable below, and, at the same moment, Jake heard a hen proclaim with a loud cackle that she had laid an egg for her good mistress. She was joined in her rejoicing by the old red rooster, who made as much noise as if he had laid the egg himself.

Jake sat up, rubbed his eyes, looked at his hands, felt his kinky wool and uttered a deep groan. "I declare," said he, "I wuz asleep on dat pile of hay, en drempt I wuz white en dat sour grapes turned sweet when de ole man made me rich!" And poor little black Jake threw himself down on the hay and wept.

Who Wears The Ring?

On account of certain mathematical calculations necessary to the performance of the trick not more than nine persons should take part in it. The performer sees that they are seated in a row, all facing one way, and then numbers them in order, from one to nine.

Producing a finger ring, or borrowing one from a member of the company, he tells them that he is going to leave the room, and that while he is out some one must put on the ring, and when he returns he will tell them who wears the ring, which hand it is on, which finger of the hand, and which joint of the finger.

The thumb counts as the first finger, the forefinger being the second, and so on. The joint nearest the end is called the first joint; the right hand is called 1, and the left hand 2.

When the performer returns to the room he asks one of the party to do a little multiplication and addition, in order that the right result may be reached. To illustrate the process, let us assume that person No. 3 has the ring, and that it is on the right hand, third finger, first joint. The performer requests that the following calculations be made in secret:—

|---|---|
| 1. Double the number of the person who has the ring—in the case assumed this will produce | 6 |
| 2. Add 5 | 11 |
| 3. Multiply by 5 | 55 |
| 4. Add 10 | 65 |
| 5. Add number denoting the hand, 1 | 66 |
| 6. Multiply by 10 | 660 |
| 7. Add number of the finger, 3 | 663 |
| 8. Multiply by 10 | 6,630 |
| 9. Add number of the joint, 1 | 6,631 |
| 10. Add 35 | 6,666 |

The person who has made the calculations now tells the performer the figures he gets after adding 35. Then the performer mentally subtracts 3,535 from that sum, no matter what it may be. In the present case the remainder is 3,131, which means that the person is No. 3, the hand No. 1, the finger No. 3 and the joint No. 1.

LIGHTHOUSE PUZZLE.

Cut out the section containing the lighthouse, paste it on a stiff back and use it as a puzzle board. Cut out the twelve small pieces and put them together on the wall of the lighthouse in such a way as to make a stone lighthouse instead of a plain white one. Fit the stones so as not to cover the windows. Then past the stones fast.

Cadet Stories—"Frenchy."

BY W. W. WHITELOCK.

(Author of "When the Heart Is Young.")

The general opinion in the Norwood Military Academy was that "Frenchy" was a "bird." Exactly what a "bird" might be, no one seemed to know; but there was no doubt that "Frenchy" belonged to the ornithological species. "Frenchy's" real name was Failer—pronounced as though written Falaire, with the accent on the final syllable—and he was instructor of the French and German languages. But except in addressing him the cadets always gave his name the English pronunciation, making it rhyme with "yailer." As regards him, the school was divided into two classes—those who hated him and those who admired him extravagantly. There was no intermediate class, as no one was lukewarm regarding him. But friends and enemies alike agreed that he was a "bird," and it depended entirely upon who gave expression to this opinion as to whether a complimentary or uncomplimentary interpretation was to be given to it. When Porges, for instance, announced in pompous manner his conviction of "Frenchy's" birdlike qualities, he was thereby understood to be giving voice to the utmost scorn of which the human heart is capable. But as this feeling was returned in full measure by the professor, the score between them might be considered balanced. Porges, indeed, was the only member of the second-year French class who was unable to distract "Frenchy's" attention from the lesson by a reference to the Franco-Prussian War, and thereby to lead the exile to a long dissertation on the superiority of the French army as compared with the German, and a detailed explanation of the disasters of '71.

"Professor, I heard a man say yesterday that the German sailors could shoot all around the French sailors," some member of the class who had neglected to prepare the lesson would remark with an expression of innocence, and all the other unprepared boys would sigh with relief and settle themselves for the evening lecture on the merits of France. But when Porges, whose breast swelled far out in front and whose head threatened to fall off backward from exaggerated self-importance, ventured to propound a similar question, he found himself ejected from the room so quickly by the irate Frenchman, who followed up the cadet's retreating form with an unfortunately abortive elevation of the foot, that a week passed before Porges recovered his wonted supreme self-satisfaction.

"Mille tonnerres!" cried the enraged foreigner, storming up and down the room, but even in his excitement not forgetting to depress his toes in true military fashion. "I some day surely shall introduce my foot to him! He is a—a—chump!"

"Frenchy" had no idea what a "chump" might be, but he knew that it was an uncomplimentary epithet, and, therefore, applicable to Porges. Nor did any of the boys experience the slightest desire to become acquainted with his foot in the manner suggested, as his boots were delicately pointed and admirably adapted to the punishment of offenders. Besides, no one had the least doubt that the owner of the boots would promptly visit any form of physical or moral punishment which most appealed to him at the moment on whoever aroused his ire. "Frenchy" was hardly of middle height, but thanks to extremely high heels and an admirably erect carriage he conveyed the impression of physical importance. Moreover, as his breast and arm development was magnificent and his courage undoubted, the boys' good-natured, indulgent feeling of affection for him was leavened with a wholesome amount of respect. His hair was jet black and always glistened with delicately scented oil; and his mustache, which his enemies declared was dyed, was of the same glossy color. To add to the interest of his personality was the mystery surrounding him. Who was he? Where did he come from? Why had he left the French Army, to which it was tacitly assumed he had once belonged? No one had ever heard him refer directly to his own past, and what little was known of his former life had been gained from deduction. The cadets generally believed that he had been forced to leave the army on account of a duel, in which he had killed his antagonist, and, as some averred, all four seconds as well.

"Frenchy" was a soldier, every inch of him, but in the role of battalion commander he could hardly be said to be a success.

"Carry ump!" he would cry in nasal tones, as he stood facing the corps, and the result always proved disastrous to every one's gravity.

"Right shoulder, ump! Forward, ump!"

Even the cadet officers failed on such occasions to keep straight faces, and the list of reports for "laughing on drill" which were read out the ensuing evening after supper was always twice as long as all the other reports combined.

"Frenchy" had early taken a fancy to Henry Haswell, and in his generous, spontaneous way had volunteered to give him private instruction in French. Of course Henry promptly jumped at the offer. The results as regards the mysteries of French grammar were perhaps hardly what Henry had hoped for, but in the matter of the history of war and in fencing, which had early displaced the quieter branch of study, the boy learned much in compensation for his neglected algebra and geometry.

"Whew!" panted "Frenchy" one evening after a particularly lively bout with the foils, "you learn too fas'. I become old. I rest me a little on ze bed."

So saying, he threw himself on the bed, on which he lay panting, with his mighty chest going up and down like a bellows, while Henry seated himself and began idly turning over the leaves of an illustrated French paper. Five minutes perhaps passed in silence, when a sudden exclamation from Henry caused "Frenchy" to look up.

"What's ze mattaire?" he began, when his eye fell on the paper in the lad's hand. "Ah!" he exclaimed in a different tone, "zat—zat's ze picture of my cousin. You find he looks like me?"

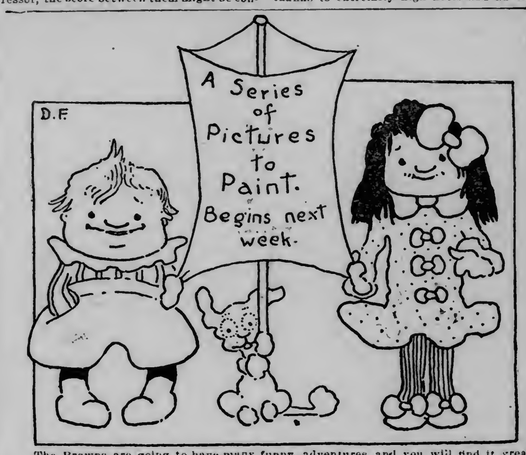
"Very much, Professor," replied Henry, with his eyes fixed on the picture of the handsome young officer in full cavalry uniform; "very much, like enough to be your younger brother."

Underneath the picture were these words, of which Henry had understood enough to grasp their general meaning:—

"Photograph of Count Adolphe de la Forterie, taken twenty years ago, just before his disastrous duel with his elder brother Henri in regard to their cousin, the present Contesse de Sarmand, and now published for the first time. Count Adolphe is supposed to have fled to America, where it is said he has become a teacher in a girl's school."

"Frenchy" had arisen from the bed and now stood before Henry, with pale, set face. He held out his hand for the paper.

"My cousin was much wronged," he said simply, "and he revenged himself. Voila. But he have suffered much. Some day when you are older I will tell you about him. I think he would do ze same today. But who knows?—perhaps not. He have suffered very much. And now you run to bed. I go to bed, too. But you tell no one what about my cousin. Good night."



The Browns are going to have many funny adventures and you will find it great sport to paint them. Watch for the Browns next week.

Walker.

Walker, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a special car on the Great Northern Tuesday evening the members of the Northwestern Editorial association arrived in Walker and took carriages to the Hotel Chase which had been selected by officers of the association as headquarters in Walker. There were not as many of the editors with the party this year as had been expected, only about thirty-five registering here and a few others joining the party at Bemidji.

They were met here by a reception committee and a cordial welcome was extended. After supper the steamer Belle, of Walker, was boarded and a trip made to the White City, where for an hour the visitors were the guests of P. H. McGarry and admired the beautiful location he has for a summer resort. At the White City a treat was given in the singing and dancing of Miss Alice Olson, who at 11 years of age has a voice of most remarkable sweetness and charmingly cultivated.

Later in the evening an informal dance was held in the large dining room of the Hotel Chase for the entertainment of the editorial visitors, and a party came over from the White City to enjoy it, among them little Miss Olson, who very graciously responded to an eager reques' to again sing and dance.

Wednesday morning the party, under the chaperonage of Mayor Kinkele, and accompanied by other members of the reception committee took the trip to Sugar Point and Bear Island. The day could not have been better for such an outing, and the Flora and barge accommodated the party most comfortably and made a quick run out and back. At Sugar Point the party landed for half an hour to take a look at the battlefield, and then as the return journey was begun, lunch was served, Mr. Kinkele acting as commissary. The return to Walker was effected in plenty of time to take the M. & L. train for Bemidji, and from there to the end of the line. Thursday was spent in Bemidji, where the citizens handsomely entertained the visitors and where boating, fishing and banqueting were the features of the day.

At midnight the journey was continued to Cass Lake, which was reached shortly after 4 o'clock Friday morning. Here, as at other points, special exertions were made by the local committee to make the visit enjoyable. A steamboat ride on the lake, the free use of small boats, fishing tackle, etc., and a banquet in the evening kept the visitors in the very best of humor all the time.

Today the party disbanded, but before doing so held a business meeting of the association at which resolutions of thanks to the Great Northern and Minneapolis & International railways were passed and recognition given of courtesies received at points visited. Before leaving Walker, and while at the station waiting for the train, President C. A. Nelson of the association made a little speech voicing the appreciation felt by all for the efforts of Mayor Kinkele to entertain them and of whom he was called upon for a speech. Thanks were also extended to the editors of the Pilot and Pioneer who had cooperated with the mayor.

It can hardly be said that since its incorporation as a village Hackensack has taken on new life because prior to that event it was a very lively place and was rapidly developing in a business way. Bartlett, recorder; John McGinn, justice of the peace. The new council immediately met and organized, County Attorney DeLury being present to advise in a legal capacity.

Mrs. Pietz, the woman who was arrested near Pillager on a charge of killing her daughter's illegitimate child, has been discharged on habeas corpus proceedings. On Wednesday she was brought to Walker by Sheriff Hardy and it took only a few minutes to demonstrate to Judge McClenahan that the evidence on the accusation against her did not show that the child died to death, as was charged in the proceedings before the justice of the peace who committed he rfor trial. Mrs. Pietz has had the sympathy of quite a number of her neighbors and others elsewhere who know here and who were confident that she could not be guilty of the crime.

New Things Strange and Curious

"REWARD OF MERIT."

"How well I remember that highly illuminated legend, 'Reward of Merit,' on the cards I got at district school long ago," remarked a Pittsburg man at an uptown hotel the other night. "I felt as if I had been decorated with the Iron Cross whenever I carried one of the things home to my mother. It wasn't usually for good behavior, either, but for 'scholarship,' but anyway mother always kept them for both of us to gloat over. And I guess grownups are only children of a larger growth, after all, for we are always going after some 'reward of merit,' or other. It's a great incentive. Now, you folks up here are having a lot of trouble about your street car transit. Our traction company could give your fellows some pointers about ways of getting good service. Just before Christmas the Pittsburg company distributed $30,000 to its conductors and motormen, who had had no accidents for the preceding six months. The gifts were given out according to the conditions announced the summer before, and more than four-fifths of the men got a mighty merry Christmas out of it, and incidentally the public got safer and better service by it. Up here, your traction magnates take the other way round; they make the men stand the loss by delays, paying them by the hour, and never think about the other side, the reward of merit business. They ought to take the affirmative side of the old question for debate that used to come up in the literary societies 30 years ago: 'Resolved, That the hope of reward is a greater incentive to action than the fear of punishment.' They'd find themselves less often called before a judicial board of inquiry, I think."

HAVING FUN IN A BOXOMOBILE

E. A. Stretton, of Cheltenham, England, recently caught his son and three playmates indulging in the very exciting and expensive sport of motoring in the back yard. Here is a photograph which he took of a car they had constructed. They call it a boxomobile. The ingenuousness of the details is quite a remarkable example of a boy's clever and quick observation. Notice the starting crank in front and the speed lever at the side. The only departure from a "model" touring car is the very high tonneau.

Petrol boxes, from which the body is constructed, are especially appropriate, because in England nearly all automobiles are propelled with petrol.

Cheesewring Rock.

This curious rock formation, known locally as the "Cheesewring," is 32 feet high and situated in Cornwall, England. A remarkable thing about it is that several of the upper slabs of stone overhang the base by many feet, so that to the nervous visitor it seems inevitable that the mass shall come tumbling about his ears before he has opportunity to get out of range.

But the "Cheesewring" will not tumble in a hurry, apparently. For centuries it has endured, unshaken by the fiercest hurricanes that ever swept in from the ocean's vast void over a barren moor. Some antiquarians contend that the pile was erected by the Druids and worshipped as an idol, though certain geologists hold that the singular formation was slowly uncovered by the gradual washing away of the surface of the earth which surrounds it. Atmospheric influences have, no doubt, played their part in molding the pile into its present shape.

As a curiosity the "Cheesewring" is almost a match for the "Chimney" on Thunder Mountain, Idaho.

The average age at death of people who die by accident is 35½ years.

Christ's Coat Of Arms.

Wishing to show him the utmost possible honor, some of the great noblemen of Brazil formally decided to admit Jesus Christ as a member of their knightly order, and consequently they awarded to him the coat-of-arms which is shown in the accompanying picture. Conspicuous in it is a black cross, which is mounted on three green hills, in a field of gold, and which is covered with a double crown of stars and thorns.

For centuries a cross has been used on the crests of distinguished families and on the flags of various nations, and therefore it was only natural that these pious Brazilian noblemen should have selected it as the most suitable emblem of our Lord when they desired to pay honor to him. They were resolved that he should thenceforth be officially recognized as one of the grandees of Brazil, and he would not have been eligible for this exalted position without a coat-of-arms.

Lord Salisbury was born only nine days after the death of George IV., and so just missed living in four reigns.

The Homestead mills produce, with about 4,000 men, three times as much steel as the Krupp works produce with 15,000.

The biggest hedges in England are at Hall Barn, in Buckinhamshire. They are of yew, 30 feet high.

CROCODILES HIS PARTICULAR PETS.

When man yearns for the affectionate companionship of animals of a lower order there is no telling in what direction his taste may lie. Here is a gentleman who affects crocodiles and who confesses that he has a perfect passion for such extraordinary pets. He is now engaged in exhibiting daily a collection of crocodiles for the entertainment of large audiences in Germany.

A dozen or more of the reptiles he has succeeded in taming and handling without danger to himself. They appear to be fond of their master and respond readily to the names he has bestowed upon them. The picture shows the "reptle king" in the act of caressing one of his strange pets.

HOW TO PHOTOGRAPH LIGHTNING.

A great number of articles have been written regarding the speed of modern lenses, and one lens manufacturer advertises his make of lens as being speedy enough to catch a flash of lightning. To the average person this seems almost a miracle, yet there is no subject that the amateur may select which is more easily photographed than a flash of lightning, and there are few subjects which make a more artistic photograph.

Mr. Richard S. Barrett, of Saugerties, N. Y., who took this photograph, tells how it was done:

"The exposure must be made at night. This is the whole secret of success. When a thunderstorm occurs learn the direction of its approach and point and focus the camera in that direction. If a box camera is used no focusing is needed; if a cycle model is used focus at a hundred or more feet, the camera resting on a tripod or other support. Uncap the lens or open the shutter, and leave open until a brilliant flash makes its appearance within the field of the lens, then close the shutter or cap the lens at once, and you will find that you have a negative which upon development will give you a flash of lightning photo.

"Pay no attention to the minor flashes or to what is called sheet lightning, as both forms only add to the detail of your negative. Wait for the brilliant flash of chain lightning and the river of light will with its great intensity photograph itself."

The photograph which the writer shows was made with a single lens costing less than $2.

There are now 385,000 foreign residents in Switzerland; 155,000 of these have settled since 1890.

APPEARANCE OF THE FIRST STEAMBOAT.

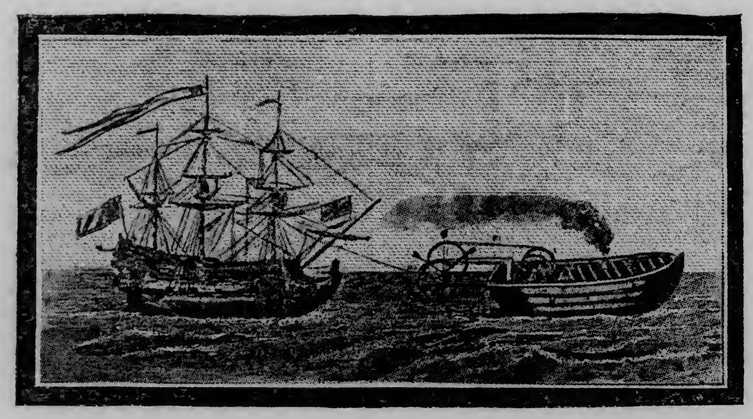
Here is a picture whose chief interest lies in the fact that it shows the beginnings of practical steam navigation, inasmuch as it represents the proposal made by Jonathan Hull, of England, as long ago as 1737, for "a machine for carrying ships in and out of harbor against wind and tide."

Hull's invention was greatly improved upon by what was described at the time as "the first practical steamboat," which in honor of Lord Dundas' daughter, was named the Charlotte Dundas. This was built in 1803, and, like Hull's steamboat, was propelled by a paddle at the stern, but the paddle of the new boat was inclosed in an arched tunnel and the machine altogether wholly improved. Later came Robert Fulton, in America, with his "side-wheeler" and the beginning of practical steam navigation.



Lord Bacon was the youngest barrister ever made a king's counsel. He was 29 when he became king's counsel, in 1590.

Italian Brigandage.

Brigands are constantly giving trouble to the Italian government, which seems rather strange in view of the fact that rewards are assured to any persons who wage a successful war against these law breakers.

According to an edict which dates back to the time when the Pope was all powerful in Italy, and which is still in force, any one who captures a brigand alive and who hands him over to justice is entitled to a reward of $600; any one who kills a brigand will receive a reward of $500; any one who captures a brigand chief will get $1,200, and any brigand who betrays an accomplice will be pardoned for his past crimes and will receive $100 as an additional reward. This last reward has very seldom been paid, since Italian brigands are not accustomed to betray each other.

Magnetic Persons.

Professor Murani, a distinguished Italian scientist, says that certain persons possess a strange magnetic or electric influence, which produces very curious results.

A few days ago while he was at work on some electrical experiment, one of his friends suddenly entered the room, and at the same moment the needle of his galvanometer moved to and fro very rapidly. He was sure that his friend had in one of his pockets either a magnet or some other electrical instrument, and in order to convince him that he was mistaken his friend removed all his clothes. To the Professor's surprise the galvanometer continued to act just as though a powerful magnet was near it, and the closer his friend approached the more marked its action became. Moreover, the front of the body acted on it in the same manner as the positive pole of a magnet and the back as a negative pole.

Saw Peter The Great.

Leading Russian journals are now proudly drawing attention to the fact that there has been for some time in the hospital at Tomsk a man who has lived for more than two hundred years. Knowing well that the public would be loth to believe such a story unless ample evidence of its truth were forthcoming, they further point out that they have carefully examined his birth and marriage certificates and can testify that his married life lasted forty-seven years and that he has been a widower one hundred and twenty-five years.

This wonderful old man has been bedridden for some time, but his brain is as clear as ever it was, and nothing pleases him more than to tell visitors how he once had the good fortune to see Peter the Great and Queen Catherine.

LARGEST HAYSTACK IN THE WORLD.

In Australia the haystacks are of enormous size. As in England, immense quantities of hay are stored out of doors and, like their English models, the great stacks are built with picturesque peaked roof lines and smooth well raked sides. It is a common sight in Australia, however, to see a hay stack several times the size of the barn which houses the rest of the crops of the farm.

These enormous haystacks frequently contain some thousands of tons of hay. The accompanying illustration shows the largest of these in process of construction. It was the largest haystack in the world and was situated in the district of Victoria. The length of this mammoth stack, when complete, was 208 feet, while its width was 97 feet. In other words practically a New York city block and a half in length. The height of the stack when finished was nearly 100 feet.

Several weeks were required, with the aid of a score of wagons, to construct the great haystack. It was afterward ground up into chaff to supply a part of the fodder for the horses in the South African War.

REMARKABLE FUNERAL RITES.

"One thing sure to shock the American tourist is a Greek funeral," said a recently returned traveler. "It is a spectacle which most persons of convention-governed decency desire to avoid, because the body of the dead is exposed in an open hearse. The coffin is shallow, so that not only the face and head but the hands and much of the body can be seen from the sidewalk as the procession moves through the streets.

"The lid of the coffin, frequently richly upholstered and decorated with garlands and wreaths, is carried on the hearse by the undertaker. The priest, the relatives and other mourners follow, and as the ghastly spectacle moves along it is customary for bystanders to remove their headgear and cross themselves.

"In the Athens cemeteries graves are rented for a term of years, just like the habitations of the quick. Only the wealthy own burial lots. This is invariably an evidence of wealth or aristocracy. The poor seldom dream of buying a lot or tomb. Such purchase would be deemed among them an unnecessary luxury.

"At the end of the term for which a grave is rented the bones are dug up, placed in a bag, labelled with the name and date, and deposited in a general receptacle."

LARGEST GORILLA EVER SHOT.

The largest gorilla ever met with was recently slain in the wilds of Africa, that "Heart of Darkness," so eloquently described by Joseph Conrad, and the stuffed body is now on exhibition in a European perambulating circus. This gigantic and powerful animal, taken only after a desperate struggle, measured more than seven feet in height and weighed more than 700 pounds. He was what is called by the hunters of large game in Africa an "old man gorilla," and one of the most ferocious beasts encountered in the jungles.

The illustration shows him a few hours after death, supported by three natives, who took part in the monster's death.

Pencil In Her Face.

A remarkable case comes from Pittsburg, Pa. It seems that a girl seven years old came to the clinic of the Pittsburg Dental College. She showed a slight wound on the right cheek which had lately healed. She told the doctors in attendance that she had fallen down stairs and cut her jaw so that a doctor had to sew it up. But there still seemed to be something wrong. There was a lump beneath the wound, and no dentist could find anything wrong with the teeth. The surgeons consulted noticed that there was a distinct hard substance in front of the jawbone, and that it appeared to be movable. When the lump was pressed the flesh and skin in front of the right ear moved as if some substance extended from the mouth to the ear. The doctors agreed that nothing could be done without an incision to find out what was in the tissues, and the parents of the child agreed to it.

The surgeon cut into the cheek at the place lately healed, and the scalpel at once touched something hard. Tweezers were used, and, to the surprise of all, half of a wooden slate pencil was pulled out. After another attempt the other half of the pencil was removed, with the slate centre unbroken. It was then clear that when the child fell down the stairs she must have run the slate pencil into her cheek, but a part of it had broken off in the wound, so that the point was not visible to the physician who first sewed up the wound.

The peculiar feature of the incident is that a piece of pencil three and one-half inches long should have made its way between the bones of the skull in the only possible way that it could have found entrance. Here is a picture of an adult skull, with a bit of pencil of this length inserted to show exactly how this one was forced in by accident, but it must not be forgotten that the child was only seven years old and the skull is much smaller than that shown here. It is especially remarkable that the point of the pencil did not injure the external maxillary artery, since the point of the pencil must have reached it, if it did not pass it, otherwise the child might have bled to death very quickly.

Very Long Signatures.

The Duc De Veragua, says a French journal, while traveling through America entered one day a telegraph office in Chicago and asked how much it would cost to send a message containing 10 words to Columbus, O.

"Twenty-five cents," replied the clerk.

"Does that include the signature?" asked the Duke.

"Yes," was the answer.

"But suppose the signature is rather long?" asked the Duke.

"That doesn't make the slightest difference," answered the clerk.

The Duke wrote the 10 words which formed the message and then signed his name as follows:

"Cristobal Colon de Toledo y Larrategui de la Cerda Ramirez de Baquedano y Gante, Almirante y Adelantado Mayor de las Indies, Marques de la Jamaica, Duc de Veragua y de la Vega, Grande de Espana, Senador del Reno, Caballero de la Insigne Orden del Torson de Oro, Grand Cruz de la Concepcion de Villaviciosa, Gentil Hombre de Camara del Re de Espana."

The clerk, it is said, almost fainted when he saw this signature.

Gigantic Aloe.

This plant, known as the Century aloe, was photographed last October by an amateur photographer at Rockville, Hantville, St. Petersport, Island of Guernsey, English Channel, where it grew in the yard of the Friendly Society Medical Association, and at that time brought forth its flower, which was one hundred years in maturing. Its blossom stem was thirty-nine feet high, twelve inches in diameter at its base and contained forty-one clusters of bright yellow flowers, averaging the size of large cabbage heads. The spears or leaves of the plant resemble the ordinary century specimens raised hereabout.

Peculiar Ice Coat.

While traveling over a mountain in Germany recently a tourist saw the curious sight which is reproduced in the accompanying picture. There are telegraph poles on the road which passes over the mountain, and two of them were completely covered with ice. Moreover, one had been torn from the ground by a storm, but had been prevented from falling by the rigid shroud which enveloped it.

The two frozen poles presented such a novel appearance that the tourist photographed them, and from this photograph the accompanying picture was taken. The ice surrounding each pole was several inches in thickness.

EUROPEANS WATCHING EFFECT UPON RUSSIA

That Jewish Petition From America Will Have.

Eastern Affairs May Be Affected Thereby.

London, June 29.—The Times, in an editorial on the United States and the Jews in Russia, declares that no country is so favorably situated as the United States for undertaking to bring home to the government of Russia the feelings which the Kishnieff tragedy has universally provoked. The relations between the United States and Russia have not only been in t he technical have not only been in the technical broken amity, but genuine, and on the American side at least almost sentimental friendship. The two countries have no point of immediate contact since by the arrangement concluded on purely business principles for the withdrawal of Russia from the American continent they ceased to have cotermintus territories and in spite of such occasional controversies as the open door in Manchuria is giving rise to it seems difficult to conceive how any political cause of conflict can ever seriously estrange them in the future. These considerations lend to American action special force and give reason to hope that it will not only benefit the unhappy victims of M. Plehve's regime, but will strengthen the hands of many progressive and enlightened Russians, who watch with growing apprehension the social dangers to which that regime is plunging the country.

The Times says it is convinced that the United States government was fully prepared to learn that Russia wished to refuse to receive the petition to be sent through it, and that the decision to transmit it was made after full deliberation. It is hard to believe that the Russian beaurocracy, powerful as it is, would be able to consign the petition of a great friendly power to the limbo of ministerial pigeonholes. American diplomacy is in a position to obtain access to the czar, and if the truth ultimately reaches him there is good hope of the result. It will be a result for which other subjects of the Russian government besides the Jews will have cause to be grateful to President Roosevelt.

Vienna, June 29.—The action of the American government concerning the petition to the czar anent the Kishineff massacre is watched with the closest attention here on account of its possible effect on Eastern affairs. The Neue Freie Presse says: "President Roosevelt's influence with Russia will redound to his undying fame. The Russian autocracy cannot remain unmoved by the fact that the president, as an advocate of humanity, reminds it in the face of the whole world of the duties it owes to humanity and justice."

TROLLEY CAR CRASHES INTO TRAIN WITH DIRE RESULTS

Two Passengers Killed, Several More Will Die, and Many Hurt as Result of a Collision at Archer Avenue In Chicago.

Chicago, June 29.—Crowded with homebound passengers, an Archer avenue trolley car crashed into a Belt Line freight train at Archer avenue and Forty-seventh street early today. Two passengers were killed and many were seriously injured.

The dead:

MINNIE MALSTROM.

Unknown man.

The injured: Joseph Delaney, right shoulder crushed; John Gleason, bruised; B. Gordon, bruised; Miss Bessie Jordan, dying; J. Morse, brakeman, bruised; J. McGregor, back broken, will die; R. J. Norken, brakeman, bruised; P. Reilly, right leg broken, shoulders and head bruised; Theo. Zordswersky, conductor of street car, thrown from car and severely bruised.

The passengers were thrown from their seats and several wedged in the debris and covered by fragments. The train was stopped in a short time and the crew hurried back to aid the passengers. The place in which the wreck occurred is far from convenient for the handling of injured persons. It was some time before word could be sent, but when a man finally reached a telephone, patrol wagons and ambulances were started on long runs to the scene.

LIGHTNING KILLS WORSHIPERS

Chicago, June 29.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Zanesville, Ohio, says: Lightning struck the Presbyterian church at New Concord last night, killing A. H. Alexander, prostrating his young daughter in the same seat beside him, and also Miss Rose Madden, the organist. Olive Alison, seated near, had her shoe ripped off and foot badly injured. A panic ensued, in which several children were slightly injured.

HANCOCK STREET CAR WRECKED

Houghton, Mich., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The lives of nine passengers were jeopardized by some unknown person, who put a fence post on the track, the car being derailed and plunged down an embankment near Hancock, while running at a high rate of speed from Calumet. Richard Crook, the motorman, saw the obstruction, but it was too late to avert the accident. The car plunged down the embankment, striking a telephone pole, Crook just escaping serious injury or death. The car was wrecked, but the passengers and crew escaped with a shaking up. The police are looking for the miscreants.

PASSENGERS ON TROLLEY CAR SHOT

Media, Pa., June 29.—Six persons have been shot and severely wounded in a trolley car between Media and Chester. A negro, believing to be seeking revenge because the conductor of the car ejected him, discharged both barrels of a shotgun at the car as it passed a lonely spot in the country. The car was crowded and the shots coming from the dark roadside caused a wild fright among the passengers, most of whom were women. Four women were among the wounded. The negro fired from a clump of bushes and in the excitement which ensued made his escape.

BUTCHER STRANGLED BY STEAK

New York, June 29.—Thomas Thornby, a butcher, was choked to death in a Brooklyn restaurant. He ordered the best beefsteak in the place and ate heartily. When half through with his meal Thornby suddenly strangled on a piece of steak and fell from his chair. The efforts of the waiters to restore him were without avail. It is said the meat on which he choked to death was furnished from his own shop.

MARRIED AT ST. PAUL.

Walter McMahon, Former Duluthian, Takes a Bride.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Walter Baldwin McMahon, former Associated Press telegrapher on the Duluth News Tribune, was married this morning to Miss Edith Marie Clark, of St. Paul. The couple will leave Sept. 1 for an extended trip.

RUSSIAN CROPS

St. Petersburg, June 29.—The damp, warm weather of the last month has favorably influenced crops throughout European Russia excepting Novogorod, Pskov, and parts of Vilna, Vitebsk, Grodno and of the Baltic provinces. The crops promise well in the southwest and central regions. The Volga offers similar prospects except in a few districts in the extreme north. Winter and summer wheat, oats and barley promise better on the whole than rye.

RIGHTS OF JEWS

Under Amendment to Temporary Regulations Are Explained.

Where Jews May Reside and Acquire Real Estate.

St. Petersburg, June 29.—The amendment to the "Temporary regulations of May 15, 1882, permitting Jews to reside and to acquire real estate" is thus explained by the Jewish journal Voskhad:

"The temporary regulations which have been in force for twenty-one years were hastily issued and were not brought into conformity with other laws. Their enforcement caused nearly all the Jews living in the rural districts amounting to about 20 per cent of the Jewish population in 1882 to be driven into the towns and cities. The sale of the Jewish settlement, previously embracing fifteen provinces, suddenly shrunk to a limited number of towns. The senate was quickly overwhelmed with appeals against the illegal enforcement of the regulations and, in 1884, was petitioned, though vainly for their repeal. The number of towns open to Jews has diminished and the Jews, more and more cooped up have been driven hard for a subsistence. As a result the towns with Jewish populations have been officially pronounced breeding places for physical and physical diseases. The ministry of the interior, in view of the dangers from this hungry proletariat, has decided to open 101 new places to Jewish settlers. In the list are many former Jewish colonies which had been within recent years transformed legally into villages and thus withdrawn from the category of permissible places of abode for Jews. In the provinces of Chernigov, Ekaterokslnov and Piotavn the authorities have broken up Jewish colonies which had existed from time immemorial.

"Among many expedients for driving out Jewish settlers under the "temporary regulations," one of the most successful was to demand written charters from the towns. Those who could not produce a charter were at once pronounced villages. In this way all the towns in Poltava were wiped out of legal existence in 1866, and all the towns of Chernigov suffered the same fate in 1869.

"In other cases old towns decayed or shifted towards newly built railroads. The Jews were, however, not allowed either in the new towns that grew in their place, or, in spite of repeated decisions of the senate, in the new streets of old towns. "The temprary regulations," it may be briefly stated, forbid Jews to move into cities and towns where they had not been living when the regulations were issued, 'to remove from one hamlet to another, or to acquire or rent land."

NEW GUARDIAN

Will Be Appointed For Millionaire Peter Donahue.

San Francisco, June 29.—Richard Burke, of Limerick, Ireland, who married into the Donahue family, has arrived here from Ireland to take part in the proceedings involving the guardianship of the person and estate of Peter J. Donahue, the demented capitalist, now left vacant by the death of Cardinal Vaughn, who was appointed by the London courts last year. The information is now given out that all the interested members of the family will agree to the appointment of James P. Donhue, of Davenport, Iowa. Peter Donhue's estate is said to be worth in the neighborhood of $1,500,000.

Senator Allison Ready For Iowa Republican Convention.

Des Moines, June 29.—Delegates are already arriving for the Republican state convention which will be convened here Wednesday. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, who is a delegate, will arrive this evening with Senator Allison, who has the tariff plank already prepared for submission to the committee on resolutions. The factions contending over the adoption of the tariff plank recently agreed that Senator Allison should prepare a plank covering the tariff, because of the agitation on the subject in this state.

Wiswell, pastor of University Congregational church, resigned his pastorate and announced his withdrawal from the ministry because of his objection to sectarianism and orthodox theology. He will go into employment.

SENTENCE UNJUST

Representative Steenerson Secures Reversal For a Soldier.

Was Confined In Manila Prison For Trivial Offense.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.) — Representative Steenerson and L. H. Bailey, who have been in Washington for several days to register a protest against the retention of the land office at Cass Lake, leave for home tonight. Representative Steenerson is much pleased with the result of his visit, having induced the president to grant all parties a full hearing before the commissioner of the general land office. Owing to the illness of Commissioner Richard's wife, it is uncertain when this hearing can be had, and in the meanwhile Register Jones and Receiver Oakley will open the new land office at Cass Lake for the transaction of business Wednesday morning.

Representative Steenerson this morning called at the war department and secured a reversal of the sentence imposed upon Private Marks, of Fosston, Minn., who was sentenced to three years' confinement in the military penitentiary at Manila, last August, for a disobeyance of orders. Private Marks was in the hospital corps, and was charged and convicted of loitering in a cigar store, contrary to orders. For this very trivial offense he was sentenced to three years' imprisonment, and has been in confinement since Aug. 16 last. Mr. Steenerson today had the case before Gen. Corbin and the judge advocate general, and was soon able to show the gross injustice of the sentence, and secured a reversal. Private Marks will be at once returned home or restored to duty.

Should his term of enlistment not have expired, he will return to the ranks and serve out his enlistment and then be honoraably discharged.

PETTY WILL NOT SHOOT.

New York, June 29.—Sergt. W. E. Petty of the New York police department, whose score was the second best made by the American team in the international revolver match against French experts, several years ago, will not be a member of the American contingent in the coming cable contest in Boston. Petty, who was one of the strongest men on this year's team, has, it is said, been unable to secure leave of absence from his duties.

PEACE MAY BE ESTABLISHED IN BUILDING TRADES STRIKE

The Fuller Company, the Biggest Concern In the Country, Will Probably Sign Agreements and the Men Will Return to Work.

New York, June 29.—An important move toward the establishment of peace between warring employers and employes in the building trades of this city is anticipated within twenty-four hours. The George A. Fuller company, the largest individual building concern in the country, will, it is expected, sign agreements with representatives of its 20,000 men on terms which are likely to result in the men returning to work.

The terms of the agreements are similar to those in the plan of arbitration proposed by the Building Trades Employers' association several weeks ago. The Fuller company has subict several of its most important contracts to members of the employers' association. In case these sub-contractors oppose the terms of settlement and resist the attempt to put the men back, it is said the company will endeavor to handle the extensive building operations involved without outside aid. Representative union men have been in conference with officials of the Fuller company for several days. These conferences have been entirely independent of the Building Trades Employers' association. The plan is a modification of the arbitration scheme insisted upon by the employers' association. To what extent it provides for the extermination of the walking delegate has not been disclosed.

INDETERMINATE TERM FOR AMMON

New York, June 29.—Robert A. Ammon, attorney for William F. Miller, of the Franklin syndicate, was today sentenced to an indeterminate term in state's prison of not less than four, nor more than four and a half years. The maximum penalty for this offense is five years. Ammon was convicted of having received stolen money from Miller. The specific charge on which Ammon was convicted was that he received $30,500 of the money obtained by the Franklin "520" syndicate. Miller is now serving a 10-year-sentence and was the chief witness at the trial. District Attorney Jerome, it is understood, will take steps to secure a pardon for Miller, as he is said to be dying of consumption.

Ammon's attorney moved for a new trial, giving seven reasons for such a motion. He also moved for an arrest of judgment. Both motions were denied by Judge Newburger. The sheriff's commitment, on motion of the defendant's counsel, was withheld until tomorrow to allow an application to a supreme court justice for a certificate of reasonable doubt.

RESENT SERMON AND LEAVE CHURCH

New York, June 29.—The Rev. Dr. Roberts McArthur, in a sermon at Calvary Baptist church upon the spirit of lawlessness as shown in recent lynchings and other disorders in several states, said his American pride had been severely chastened by the events of the past few weeks. No one who knew him, he said, would doubt his Americanism, however, and he had no sympathy with those foreigners who come here and live happily but refuse to assume the responsibilities of citizenship.

Several persons in the congregation started for the door at this point and the preacher said he would pause until all who wished to leave had done so, but none others arose.

The crimes of the last week have caused us, he declared, to be classed with Servians and Russians. To corruption of the ballot, he said, a large share of responsibility was due.

With six bands from as many German ships, they marched to Flower Hill cemetery and decorated with the flowers the graves of the many unidentified sailormen who perished in the fire.

ANOTHER MURDER ON THE MESABA RANGE

THOUSAND GUESTS

Are Received on Board Flagship Kearsarge at Kiel.

The Chicago's Sailing Cutter Wins Princess Henry's Prize.

Kiel, June 29.—The officers of the United States squadron this afternoon received about 1000 guests on board the flagship Kearsarge, principally German naval officers and visiting Americans. There will be a "smoker" on the Kearsarge tonight.

Mr. Meyer, the United States ambassador to Italy, lunched with Emperor William.

The emperor today again sent to Allison V. Armour, of Chicago, to inquire if he would not dock his steam yacht Utowana, which was damaged in collision with the steamer Dobrogea, last Friday, in the North sea, at the government yard, but Mr. Armour declined for the present, as the yacht is not disabled. Mr. Armour tomorrow will accompany the emperor on the latter's yacht Meteor to Eckenforde.

The United States cruiser Chicago's sailing cutter, entered by Midshipman Stephen Rowan, today won Princess Henry's prize for warship cutters, in a competition with the cutters of the German ships Freya, Hohenzollern, Frauenlob, Ariadne, Glitz and Hagen.

The sailing launch of the United State's cruiser San Francisco, entered by Ensign George W. Steele, won the prize in the race for warship launches. The launch of the German turret ship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was second, and that of the United States' flagship Kearsarge, entered by Lieut. Henry C. Mustin, was third.

Fatal Row In Disreputable Resort Near Buhl.

Finlander Was Pounded on Head With Poker.

Another murder occurred on the Mesaba range last night.

One man killed and another seriously injured is the outcome of a row in a disreputable resort a little outside of the village of Buhl.

Details of the affair that have reached here are very meager.

It appears that some of the patrons of the place became involved in a fight about midnight last night, and that during the scuffle a poker was used with deadly effect.

None of the names of the parties are known here, and the village authorities at Buhl were unable, when talked with over the long-distance telephone this morning, to throw any light on this point.

There were about sixteen people in the place when the trouble occurred, and all of them were arrested. At noon today the authorities had not yet found out who did the killing, but an examination will be held tonight, at which the facts will probably come out.

County Attorney McClintock was notified of the murder this morning by W. J. West, president of the village, and he left this afternoon to attend the examination.

The only information regarding the murdered man that the village marshal could furnish was that he was a Finlander. One of the witnesses is suspected of having used the heavy poker that killed one and seriously injured another, but nothing definite will be known about the trouble until tonight, when the examination is held.

The injured man is badly hurt, but it is thought that he will recover. Both of the men were pounded over the head with the poker.

STEAM YACHT UTOWANA RUNS DOWN STEAMER IN NORTH SEA

Allison Armour's Big Racer Collides With Do Brogea, a Merchantman, Off Dunkirk and Is Badly Damaged By the Impact.

New York, June 29.—The American steam yacht Utowana, with Allison V. Armour, her owner, aboard, has arrived here considerably damaged from a collision in the North sea, says a Herald dispatch from Kiel. The accident occurred in a fog off Dunkirk. The yacht collided with the steamer Do Brogea, a 3000-ton merchantman. Her bowsprit and flying jibboom had been carried away, together with a large amount of wire rigging and stays of the first of her three large masts. Her stem is also damaged by the violent tearing out of the powerful bowsprit, the unusual strength of which possibly saved the ship. The lower part of the stem was twisted from the impact. The bowsprit lies hanging from the port side forward, surrounded by masses of twisted steel rigging and stays. Internally the yacht is not damaged.

Mr. Armour gave the following account of the collision: "It was five minutes to 3 in the morning, in the North seat, twenty-five miles north of Dunkirk, in a very thick fog. I am my own captain and was on deck. We were blowing our horn and heard signals. Some little time before we had stopped for fifteen minutes, and were proceeding at low speed.

"The sound of a whistle came nearer and nearer. Our engines were reversed a minute or two before the lights of a steamer were seen. Immediately on seeing the masthead light we put our helm over and tried to avoid the collision, hoping with reversed screw and helm over, to clear the steamer, or at all events to strike a glancing blow. She was nearer than we thought, and we struck her just before the bridge, damaging the upper works and cutting into the hull above the water line.

"The yacht followed the steamer until she stopped and sent a boat upon their call. We stood by the steamer for upward of an hour, when she proceeded on her way. We were going at a rate of three miles an hour. Had we been going at full speed we might never have come across her."

LONDON'S MAYOR SAYS RUSSIAN AGITATION IS QUITE USELESS

Believes Russia Is Free to Manage Her Internal Affairs and Can Be Reached Only By Appealing to Better Side of Nation.

London, June 29.—Lord Mayor Samuel, in a speech yesterday at the prize distribution of the religion classes at one of London's synagogues, said it was quite useless to bring agitation to bear in the hope of influencing Russia in regard to the treatment of the Jews. Their brethren in Australia, animated by the most generous feelings, had sent money and had passed a resolution which it became his duty to submit to the foreign office. In following their wishes he was aware what the result would be. Therefore he was not surprised when assured that this was an internal matter, and that the foreign office could do nothing.

The Jews of this country, the lord mayor continued, desired for their brethren in Russia religious equality, and he believed he was right in saying that the czar was most anxious that the boon should be extended to his Hebrew subjects. But there were other difficulties to overcome. The case was different from that of Roumania, where treaty rights were violated. Russia was under no treaty obligations and was free to manage her internal affairs as she thought best. It was only by appealing to the better side of the Russian nation—and there was a very large better side—that they could hope to awaken that sense of right which he was convinced no amount of agitation could bring about.

The lord mayor concluded with asking the Jewish community to believe he had the interests of their persecuted brethren at heart, and not to misconstrue his seeming inactivity.

In this construction it has transpired that shortly after the Kishineff outbreak, the Russian embassy conveyed a personal assurance to the lord mayor that if he would discountenance anti-Russian agitation in London he could depend not only that there would be no repetition of such attacks on the Jews, but that measures would be undertaken to generally improve their poslon in Russia.

TEN-YEAR-OLD'S LONG JOURNEY

New York, June 29.—Separated from her parents for four years, Dorothy Rice, 10 years old, from Hereford, England, has arrived here alone on a big liner from Liverpool. She at once took up her journey to Seattle, Wash., where her father and mother await her coming. Petted by the passengers on the trip over, the ocean travel of her 6000-mile journey was made pleasant for the little girl and she showed no feeling of trepidation when she left the pier with a railroad official as her guide to begin the second stage of her journay. Four years ago the child's father started from England for the Klondike gold fields, and Mrs. Rice accompanied him. They got as far as Seattle and went into business. Dorothy in the meanwhile resided with her grandmother in the English home.

KILLED BY A WIRE

A Lineman Is Killed Instantly By a Live Wire.

Hand Comes In Contact With Bare Spot on Wire.

John Ferier was electrocuted in an unusual manner this morning.

While coiling up a broken electric light wire his hand touched a very small space where the insulation has been scraped off and 2300 volts of electricity passed through his body, killing him instantly.

Mr. Ferier was a prominent young man of Sleepy Eye, Minn. He came to Duluth about a month ago and secured work as a lineman for the Duluth Telephone company. This morning he and others were assigned to the work of stringing wires on Railroad street between Seventh and Eighth avenues west.

About 10:30 o'clock Ferier was on the ground stretching a wire that Daniel Donahue was adjusting to the poles. A switch engine crossing Railroad street to the docks caught the wire the two men were working on and drew it up tight against an electric light wire. This either broke the light wire or formed a ground current and melted it off. At any rate, when the engine slacked up it was found that the electric light wire was disconnected and the two ends were dangling on the street.

Seeing that the wire was heavily insulated, and supposing that it only carried 1300 volts, young Ferier disregarded the warnings of others and began coiling up the live wire. He had coiled up about sixty feet of it without the slightest mishap, when he touched a small exposed section of the wire and dropped dead like a flash, not so much as uttering a sound.

Other workmen hastily carried him to the office of Dr. Linneman, in the Lyceum building, in the hope that something might be done to revive him. From there the body was put into a hack and taken to Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms.

It seems that the foreman of the work had warned Mr. Ferier not to touch the broken wire, but the young man, fearing that some other person might come in contact with it, thought he could coil it up without getting hurt.

An examination of the body at the undertaking rooms revealed the fact that it had been terribly burned by the heavy current of electricity that passed through it, and the indications were that death came so quickly that the young man never knew what happened.

The dead man was a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters and is said to come from a well-connected family living in Sleepy Eye.

JUSTICE TRUAX

Shows Himself an Expert In Cooking Quail.

New York, June 9.—To the literature of good living an entertaining page was added Saturday by Justice Charles H. Truax, of the supreme court, when an opportunity for an expression of expert opinion on the ways of preparing quail for the table came up there on an appeal in the case of "Jack's" restaurant, which had been accused of selling birds out of season. Justice Truax has a well-earned reputation as a judge of good eating. At the Manhattan club, of which he is president, quail is served (in season) as is Truax. (This is told of him: that by feeling of the left wing of a quail he can tell in what field it fluttered last.

It was as a member of the Appellate term that Justice Truax wrote the opinion handed down for guidance in law and in cooking quail. He says: "I am as fond of quail in season and out of season, a la broche au Laurier, a la gratin, aux truffles, a la poele, a la cendre aux cervelasses, sous la cendre, en compote, aspic, bisque of quail, pate of quail, tourte de quail, or any other way, as is either one of my associates, but I cannot concur in the conclusions reached by them."

NO TRUTH IN REPORT

Of Friction Between Administration and Count Cassini.

Washington, June 29.—The Associated Press is authorized to state that the reports in circulation that there is friction between the administration and Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, are absolutely without foundation. It is stated that the relations of the president and the state department with Count Cassini are officially and personally entirely cordial. It is regarded as a serious reflection upon the sincerity of the president to represent his action in forwarding the petition relative to the Jews in Russia as ins any way connected with international negotiations in the far East or with the faithful manner in which Count Cassini has represented his government at Washington.

PRESIDENT INDOORS.

A Heavy Rain Keeps the Executive at Home.

Oyster Bay, June 29.—A heavy, continuous downpour of rain kept the president indoors at Sagamore hill today. Early in the day Secretary Loeb went to the Roosevelt house and the president and he spent nearly three hours in the transaction of executive business. Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of the Outlook, took luncheon with the president and Mrs. Roosevelt today. His call was purely social.

The executive offices in the Moore block were opened for business today and Secretaries Loeb and Barnes were busy in getting them into shape for their summer's work.

JOCKEY WALSH HURT.

New York, June 29.—Sixteen-year-old "Eddie" Walsh, favorite jockey of Horseman W. C. Daly, has been thrown from a race horse which he was exercising, near Sheepshead Bay, and sustained concussion of the brain. The animal became frightened by the sudden passing of a motor cycle.

Northern Pacific Will Double Duluth Freight House Capacity.

Contracts On Work Will Be Let In Day or Two.

George I. Thomas, local freight agent for the Northern Pacific railroad, received official notice this morning that the general offices would let the contracts in a day or two for the construction of the freight house addition.

It has been decided to extend the present house, and it will probably be made 600 feet longer, toward the east. When completed the freight house will be 1200 feet long, the largest freight house in this part of the country.

There are many local bidders for portions of the work, and among the contractors after a big piece of the work is L. D. Campbell. It is expected that bids will be opened today or tomorrow.

In the meantime the operating department of the road is getting things ready for the removal of tracks and the clearing of the eastern end of the yard for the workmen who will come as soon as the contractors get on work.

It is expected that the building will be up and ready for occupancy by Oct. 1. The cost of the building is not estimated for publication, and the figures will not be obtainable until after the bids are let.

BACK FROM BUFFALO.

T. E. Blanche Returns From a Visit There.

General Agent Thomas E. Blanche, of the Northern Pacific railway, returned this morning from Buffalo, where he went on a vacation and a visit to relatives who reside in that city.

Mr. Blanche was not East on business and did not make any observations of business conditions, and says that the most lucid impression he received in Buffalo was that there was not any Minnesota fishing.

General Agent George M. Smith, of the Omaha road, is expected to return to Duluth some time early next week. He has been on a vacation with Mrs. Smith for the past six weeks, and taking his annual vacation.

BABY CHEWED

Transfer Slip and Mamma Had to Pay.

New York, June 29.—The baby chewed the transfer and mamma chewed the—well, anyway, she turned out a good line of conversation to an obdurate conductor who refused to recognize a bunch of green dampness which was rescued from little Willie's rosy lips as a sufficient testimonial of her right to travel from Columbus avenue to her home in East Fifty-ninth street.

The baby howled when his mother forcibly pulled the transfer from his mouth, and the passengers, who at the start regarded the affair with smiles, began to get uneasy.

"You ought not to give transfers to children, madam," argued the blue coated minion of the Metropolitan system. "How do I know whether this is good or not. It may have been used yesterday."

"I guess I'm a lady and wouldn't tell a story about it," returned the irate woman.

"You will have to pay another fare, just the same," was the determined retort.

In the midst of the heated argument the irritated woman put her hand in her bag and painfully counted out five pennies.

"I'll pay you now," he said, "because I don't want to cause any excitement in the car, but I'll take this case to court if I never do another thing as long as I live."

MAY EAT WITH HAT ON.

Decision By Court on Rubs of Etiquette.

New York, June 29.—Three learned supreme court justices, sitting in appellate term have decided that there are "no rules of etiquette that require a man, while eating in a so-called quick lunch restaurant, to take off his coat and hat." This decision was handed down today, and was the outcome of an appeal taken from the judgment of the municipal court for $40.40 in favor of Lewis Harris, who alleged his overcoat was stolen while he was eating in a lunchroom. The court held he had not used proper care in hanging up his coat.

VIEWED BY CLEWS

Wall Street Continues In Conservative and Hesitating Mood.

No Justification For the Extreme Pessimism That Prevails.

New York, June 29.—Henry Clews says in his weekly financial review: Wall street continues in a conservative and somewhat hesitating mood. For conservatism there is still good reason, while for the extreme pessimism that prevails in some quarters there is absolutely now no justification. The average buyer of stocks forgets that may of the depressing factors which now influence him have been recognized by shrewd operators weeks and months ago, and that these conditions have been largely if not over discounted by a decline of thirty to forty points in many of the leading stocks. Just now we are in danger of running into a state of excessive pessimism, which is quite as hazardous as the unreasoning optimism which induced all sorts of excesses in 1901-2. When desirable securities begin to sell below intrinsic values, not good but harm follows from forcing prices to a lower level, for confidence is unnecessarily disturbed, enterprise checked judgment should prevent. What is essand disaster invited which reason and pecially needed at the moment is careful discrimination. There is no excuse whatever for an undue loss of confidence, when corrective influences are actively at work and the financial situation has been greatly clarified by the enormous liquidation of the last six months. There are still undigested securities in existence, but these are generally in strong hands, where they are likely to remain awaiting conditions much more favorable to their distribution than the present. As for the detrimental effects of labor difficulties and monetary conditions, it is probable that so far as the stock market is concerned these have been sufficiently discounted. Powerful interests have worked for a gradual decline, carefully preventing all suggestions of panic, and there is good reason for supposing that these parties have meanwhile accumulated large lines of stocks to be held for the rise. Whether liquidation in speculative quarters has been complete or not only time will disclose, but it is quite certain that the danger of panic has been safely passed, and that the financial situation is much stronger than at any time within the last two years, the universal spirit of conservatism which now prevails being in itself an element of real strength.

The money market outlook is beginning to attract increased attention. Preparations for July interest and the Pennsylvania stock subscription may cause temporary derangement next week, but subsequently nothing will interfere with the money situation until the usual crop and trade requirements develop next fall. For months past there has been apprehension of tight money in the coming autumn. The banks, however, have been anticipating this contingency, and liquidation has been hastened in consequence, so that the danger is now very remote. A good deal of unnecessary uneasiness has been manifested at the high level of loans, which would instantly disappear if it were realized that the capital of these leading banks has increased fully $30,000,000 in the last two years. It should also not be forgotten that we have enormously decreased our foreign loans, an improvement not reflected at all in the weekly bank statement. Further, six months' heavy liquidation and lower prices have largely decreased the banks' lending capacity, so that the prospects now are that we shall escape any dangerous stringency, though bankers seem to expect a good demand for funds at profitable rates. The treasury seems likely to absorb funds more freely, and this week we have shipped about $10,000,000 gold to satisfy autumnal demands, but as an offset our gold supplies are being augmented by home and Klondike production, and the supply of currency has been materially increased during the past year by new bank circulation.

Much depends on the crop outcome. Though the season is very backward, still the conditions of wheat, corn and cotton are such as to promise abundant yield should the weather pending the harvest be a fair average. Merchants are operating cautiously, the high prices of many articles of merchandise checking consumption and preventing the carrying of large stocks. Manufacturers are often embarrassed by labor exactions and the difficulty of securing better prices for their products. So long as consumers could be made to pay for these increased costs, the demands of labor were readily acceded to. The situation now, however, is changing, and agitation of this sort is on the wane. Railroad earnings continue large and the iron industry preserves its remarkable activity; yet in both of these divisions of industry profits are diminishing and little talk is heard of increased dividends.

Very soon midsummer inactivity will be upon us, and no decided improvements in either direction need be expected. Nevertheless the market has settled down to a lower and safer basis in recognition of recent events. Hence on all decided reactions good stocks are a purchase for quick turns.

To Secure a Change In the British Divorce Law.

Opera Managers Have More Than Usual Trouble With Stars.

New York, June 29.—A London special to the Herald, says: Earl Russell has made a valorous but a vain attempt to obtain an amendment to the British divorce law. In the house of lords this week he moved the reading of a divorce bill, which he appeared to have constructed out of his own unfortunate matrimonial experience, a bill which so far simplifies the law of divorce as to make the remedies for ill starred unions obtainable in cases where the husband and wife have ceased to live together for three years.

While Earl Russell explained his ideas in a lengthy speech the countess for whom he braved the terrors of law and suffered punishment at the hands of his peers sat in the peeress' gallery, of which she was that afternoon the solitary occupant.

The lord chancellor responded curtly. He was afraid that Earl Russell did not understand the gravity of what he was going. The proposed bill swept away all the existing safeguards on the subject of divorce and the general effect of the measure was to make marriage simply a matter of agreement. He did not think he used language too strong when he said that to propose to deal with such a matter in such a way was an insult.

As no one else rose to speak the question was put and the bill was thrown out without a single voice being raised in its favor, save that of the introducer.

Thereupon Lord Russell rose and quitted the house and Lady Russell departed from the gallery.

Calve made her reappearance at Covent Garden last night in Carmen and attracted an audience brilliant in more than one sense of the term. The critics agreed that the last word has been said of her impersonation of Bizet's heroine. Calve had the support of Scotti and Saligmac as the gypsy girl's two adorers, while Madame Blauvelt sang the part of Michaela with great effect.

If rumors be true, the managers of the Royal Opera are having more than the usual amount of trouble just now with their stars. Fritzi Scheff is reported to have left in a huff, declaring that she never again would sing on a stage where there is to be found prima donna is appearing—the certain other prima donna referred to, by the way, being in many respects the greatest in the operatic world.

Nordica is the only single star who makes a net profit of over $500 yearly is somewhat of a rarity. One George Alien, who for twenty-seven years past has occupied a small outside Burlington house, was a character in his way. He never paid a cent for rent or taxes, and it required a recourse to legal procedure to evict him from the stand, to which he had no other than a squatter's right.

Over a quarter of a century ago Allan began to sell papers just outside of Burlington house, in Piccadilly. At first he was content with a single plank on which to display his stock, but in course of time, finding no one interested with him, he put up a more extensive stall. The location was a good one for the display of advertisements, and Allan made some $1500 yearly in this way. Allan was possessed of some of the rough and ready characteristics associated with the genius squatter, and when on one occasion, years and years ago, the attendants at Burlington house sought to get rid of him he seized a plank and fought off the would-be evicters. He was thereafter left in peace until the authorities of the Royal academy took the matter before the courts.

With a prescience that he ultimately would have to go, Allan only a few months ago sold out his "rights" to an enterprising Scot, which is not likely to get the money back.

Of all the birthday honors announced the peerage bestowed on Sir Edward Lawson has probably the most popular. It is a recognition of the influence of journalism in public life and a personal tribute to the proprietor of a paper, the Daily Telegraph, which always has been in close touch with the great middle class of the country. Lawson is the owner of a splendid country home at Bearcussfield, called Ball Hayes, where he frequently has entertained royalty.

Among the many treasures which Hall Barn contains is the famous dagger which Burke flung on the floor of the house of commons to testify his abhorrance of the principles of the French revolution. It is a mere toy affair, made of wood, which was sent from France to Birmingham as a pattern.

Harry Lawrence, the son of the new peer, takes an active part in the editorial ship of the Daily Telegraph, and his wife, Mrs. Harry Lawson, is one of the most popular women in London society.

One of the features of the season is the number of twin sisters conspicuous in London drawing rooms. There are at least half a dozen pairs of note. There are the Ladies Ethel and Edith Howard, present marcuis of Sligo. Their names are curiously reversed—Lady Mary Isabel Peyronnet Browne and Lady Isabel Mary Peyronnet Browne.

Another important pair of twins is Ladies Celia and Helen Crewe Milnes, the daughters of Lord Crewe by his first wife. Their stepmother, who was Lady Peggy Primrose, acts as their chaperon, but looks more like a sister.

Then there are not one, but two sets of Civian twins. Violet and Dorothy are maids of honor to Queen Alexandra, and both are in high favor with their royal mistress, who has arranged that they always will be in waiting at the same time and that they dress exactly alike.

The other pair of Vivian twins consists of the daughters of the late Lord Swansea.

So far as can be learned, London does not boast of any trio of such note and beauty as the famous Cryder triplets of New York.

THE RANDOLPHS OF NEVADA

By Herman Knoeller.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Fannie went to the party in a pet and under protest. She was heartily sick of it all. Her three years' experience "in society" since she left school had filled her with dissatisfaction and contempt. The pleasures she had anticipated had turned to ashes in the realization. Instead of the knight of her girlish dreams, she had found colorless idlers, addlepated champions of the golf field, and men of the world who filled her with distrust. The women seemed either too narrow and frivolous to endure, or so worldly-wise as to be fit companions for the men with the "past."

Everything was here, wealth, position, beauty, the deference and flattery of society—everything but the one thing she craved, sincerity and reality, she told herself.

However, she was beautiful and placid as ever as she swept into the drawing-room at the Mortimers. As usual, she became at once the center of a group of chattering guests.

Presently an audible flutter near the door drew attention. The man who caused it was entirely conscious of his situation, which made it worse. He was wholly out of keeping with his company. Tall and sinewy, his sun-burned face contrasted oddly with the hothouse pallor of the other men. Instead of the conventional evening coat, he wore a Prince Albert, and wore it most ungracefully. His attire throughout lacked the little elegance so essential to correctness, and his whole being was that of a cat in a strange garret.

"For goodness sake, how did that break in?" giggled Algy Van Biscit, adjusting his monocle.

"Oh, that must be Mr. Randolph—a business acquaintance of papa's from the West," exclaimed Helen Mortimer, with a glance of mock severity at Algy. "Papa says he is a very smart young man who has done some wonderful things in engineering or irrigation, or something like that, and he wants to show him some courtesy," and Helen turned to meet him.

Nobody excepting Mr. Mortimer took pains to make matters easier for the stranger and he floundered worse the further into the room he got. He appreciated fully his helplessness and his disadvantage. Every one was on the point (or over it) of giggling and some of those to whom he was presented could not resist a sly fling. His own speech was disconcerted and altogether tha situation was painful. Fannie could not resist joining the spirit of mischief, albeit she knew it was ill-bred.

"Of the Virginia Randolphs?" she inquired innocently, and it was painfully apparent that the group was suppressing a giggle with effort.

The effect on the stranger was electrical. His nervous half-fright dropped from him in an instant. He threw his head back and his keen, gray eyes looked straight into Fannie's with an expression so dominating and self-assertive that her's dropped.

"No," he replied, with quiet emphasis, "of the Nevada Randolphs."

The suggestion of titter ceased. There was a moment of eloquent silence. Then Van Biscit, who felt called on to come to Fannie's rescue, asked:

"No, very new," replied Randolph, turning to Van Biscit with the same stern expression which sent the cold chills up and down Algy's back. "We make it our business out there to found families rather than boast of the deeds of our ancestors. We are too busy building an empire in the wilderness and accumulating money for our sons and grandsons to spend and brag about to find time to make a study of family trees."

The situation was becoming strained and Mr. Mortimer hurried his guest along, chuckling audibly at the discomfiture of his mates.

It was destined to be an evening of mishaps, for just as the refreshments were served the electric lights went out suddenly, leaving the lamps and candles were hurried on, but made a sorry showing in the great lining hall. Presently it was reported to Mr. Mortimer that nobody in the establishment could find the cause of the difficulty and that the electrician telephoned for could not be there for an hour or more. Randolph went over and whispered to Mortimer and the two disappeared. In a few moments the recalcitrant lights resumed business and shortly after the two men reappeared. Randolph with cuffs somewhat soiled, vest awry and wrinkled, and Mortimer explained that the party owed the illumination to Mr. Randolph, who had found the trouble with some difficulty and corrected it.

Fannie looked at Randolph curiously. He was a very different man than when he stumbled awkwardly into the room. There was conscious power in his face and perfect self-possession in his carriage. Before leaving she sought him out and said:

"Mr. Randolph, I want to apologize to you for my rudeness. It was ill-bred and inexcusable from any point of view."

"Do not mention it, I beg of you," he replied heartily. "I appreciate the fact that I am very much out of place here, and if I look like I feel, a most legitimate object of ridicule."

Fannie flushed as she had not since school days.

"That makes my position the more humiliating," said she. "I will be glad to make some amends if you will call on me. Our carriage is at your disposal, and I will be glad to show you some of the sights."

He started and looked at her earnestly. She met his gaze unflinchingly, but still crimson.

"I will come," said he.

He called the next day, and she took him for a long ride through the park and drives. An incident occurred which attracted her attention. The library was all torn up by workmen putting a fire place in the chimney. Desiring to show the visitor a picture recently purchased, it became necessary to go through the library. Randolph paused where the workers were busy, and said: "That will smoke, the way you are doing it."

"It can't be put in the other way," replied the mechanic in charge, "because of the original construction of the chimney. See?" and he pointed to the obstacle.

Randolph smiled, and taking an envelope from his pocket made a few swift marks. "Here," he said. "That's the way to do it."

The mechanic looked at the drawing and exclaimed: "Yes, sir, that will do it, sure thing. But I never heard of fixing a chimney that way."

Randolph smiled and passed on. Fannie looked at him in admiration. His power to do things gave her a sort of awe of him.

During the ride she drew him out as to his life in the West. He was as frank as a child. He had worked out a plan to irrigate an immense valley in Nevada and transform tens of thousands of acres of useless land into fertile farms. His plan was perfected and had been carried out enough to demonstrate its practicability. But he had run out of money. It would require a vast amount of money to work out the plan, and get hold of the land so as to secure a proportion of the benefit. A great railroad was ready to penetrate the valley with a branch as soon as they saw evidence of the plans being carried out. He had come East to interest capital enough to develop his plans. It would require about $1,000,000 to complete the irrigation system and secure control of the land. She listened so eagerly and asked so many questions that he was delighted and came again and again to see her. She found a real interest in the plans of this enthusiast to rehabilitate a desert, and poured over the scheme and the principles it involved with an application she had not displayed since leaving school.

Hence, when he came to her one day with white face and told her that Mortimer and the crowd with whom he had been figuring had thrown the project in the air, she felt nearly as badly as he did.

"They admit it is the most alluring thing they have ever had offered them," he exclaimed, passionately. "but they don't know for certain if irrigation will irrigate—great heavens! what have I been about for the past five years if I don't know about that?"

He said he would make one more trial with another party of capitalists with whom he had corresponded.

"But I know what they want—to get all the profits and give me thanks and a salary for my share. But they won't get it excepting on my terms. I'll burn the plans first."

The next day Judge Patten was surprised by a visit from his fair client, Fannie Vendevere. He had been her father's legal adviser and executor of the estate, and had handled it since the distribution. Fannie had never been in his office.

"How much money have I got?" she asked.

"Not much, not much, my dear," chuckled the judge. "But you have quite a bundle of securities. What's the matter? Want to buy an English duke?"

"How much money can I raise on my securities?" she persisted.

"Well, I should say a million and a half, if you take plenty of time. Mebbe a million if they were forced on the market," replied the judge.

"Well," announced Fannie, demurely, "I am going to invest a million in a western irrigation scheme, and I want you to arrange it for me."

We will pass by the apoplectic condition of the judge and the cool insistence of Fannie. Suffice it to say that Henry Randolph received an unexpected visit from Judge Patten the next day and was told that some clients of his desired to have information regarding his irrigation plans, with a view to investing. Randolph was suspicious and moved with due caution. The judge and Fannie had several stormy interviews.

"The plans certainly look all right, and if it works there might be a barrel of money made, but it all depends on this man Randolph," asserted the lawyer.

"He is the man I am betting on," replied Fannie, coolly.

"Yes; but it is madness to put practically your entire fortune into one venture—and that not of an approved character."

"So you have remarked before," remarked Fannie, sweetly.

Randolph told Fannie of the deal after it was made, saying the only thing he disliked about it was the mystery regarding the principals.

scheme had won out. The land was not yet sold, but irrigation was complete, and the railroad built, and the Mortimer syndicate offered to take the entire thing from him for $4,000,000. He was jubilant.

"And I want to thank you for your interest and encouragement," he said, gravely. Her eyes twinkled.

"You did more than you know to keep up my courage while I was trying to finance the deal," he continued.

Her eyes twinkled again. There was another expression in them, too, noting which he grew more grave and earnest, and said, abruptly, seizing her hand in his.

"Miss Vandevere, I am able to speak now for my future is assured. Will you become one of the Randolphs, of Nevada?"

Some months later, after the first dividend of the Consolidated Land & Irrigation company had been declared and Randolph was fingering the very substantial check just received from the East, he remarked to his wife:

"I wonder if those eastern chaps are satisfied now that there was something in my scheme?"

Mrs. Randolph smiled a mischievous smile, produced a similar check for the balance of the dividends, thrust it into her husband's hands and said, demurely:

"Yes, Henry, dear; fully satisfied."

And then there was a short season of explanations.

CHINESE EXECUTIONS.

Storically the Doomed Ones Meet Their Fate.

Subsequent to the Boxer outbreak and its collapse, a number of men and women in a certain inland province of China were taken into custody, charged with having participated in the trouble. The governor of the district chanced to be absent at the thme, but sent this message to his subordinates:

"Give these people a fair trial, then execute them," and neither the officials who received the orders nor the correspondents who transmitted them to other countries seemed to think there was anything out of the way with them.

These pirates were part of a band that had for several years infested the lower reaches of the Yellow river, doing a great deal of damage to merchant vessels, and occasionally, in the absence of victims better worth their while, swooping down upon the towns and villages that lie along the banks of that great stream.

At last, grown bold with long impunity, they attacked a Chinese ship-of-the-line, was carrying supplies to Pekin for the use of the great "Dragon" himself. Not only did those audacious sea rovers attack these boats, wiss their rich treasure of merchandise and food, but they captured them every one, incidentally wiping off the face of the waters the guardian vessel and its crew.

Naturally this was felt to be carrying matters too far, and the governor of Shantung was notified by the imperial government that he could not permit such unpleasant occurrences it would be considered tantamount to a confession that his head was of no further use in its present place, and it would be promptly removed.

Of course the governor wished to avoid such a catastrophe, as irreparable as disagreeable, so a fleet of decoy merchant vessels was at once fitted out and sent up the Yellow river, and when the pirates bore down upon it, instead of the valuable and harmless goods they had a right to assume would be stored in the hold of these innocent and apparently defenseless boats, they found them to be filled with Chinese soldiers, as courageous as the pirates themselves, and come to destroy men who, which the lust of battle was come upon them, neither gave nor expected quarter.

The battle that followed when the pirates discovered their fatal mistake was a fearless one, but, fortunately for the peace of the Yellow river, for the safety of Chinese commerce, and for the continuance of close relations between the head and shoulders of his excellency, the viceroy of Shantung province, the result was an overwhelming victory for the properly constituted authorities.

Long before we reached Chefu we had encountered more than one mute witness of that bloody day. Junks battered and dismantled; junks cut squarely in two; blackened sails still upheld by their bamboo yards; all floating about at the caprice of the wind and the will of the waves, had aroused a lively curiosity among us as to the wherefore of it all. So almost the first question asked upon our arrival at Chefu had been as to the meaning of this sinister flotsam and jetsam.

Now, we had risen before the dawn, swallowed a hasty cup of coffee, fortified our inner selves with some particularly unappetizing slices of toast, and while the soft gray haze still covered the hills around the harbor we got into the captain's gig and were taken ashore to give the sanction of our presence to this last act of justice upon the bodies of the few pirates who had survived the battle of the week before.

Upon landing we made our way with difficulty (or rather had it made for us by the deferential little Japanese officer who served as escort to our company), through a crowd of stolid-looking natives, whose garments showed direst poverty and their faces the most pinching want. Their close ranks parted before us, determined onslaught of our small guide, closing up after us as the tall grass that has been before a strong wind comes again into place when the breeze has passed by.

From the moment of our appearance upon the scene we were quite literally the cynosure of all eyes, for the ordinary Chinese coolie still has a most overwhelming curiosity concerning white people, a curiosity that custom never seem to stale, and that expresses itself by the most fixed, intense and absolutely expressionless stare. So the crowd of yellow, mask-like faces grew thicker and thicker around us; the dark, narrow, slanting eyes watched us unwinkingly, and if there was wonder, contempt, hatred or fear in their hearts they gave no outward sign.

We had gone forth that morning, jauntily enough, to see a righteous judgment executed upon men who had sinned against every law, human and divine, and had expected to be very philosophical, indeed, not to say stoical, when such hardened criminals as these should suffer the extreme penalty of the laws they had outraged. Before they appeared upon the scene we thought only of their crimes, but when the wretched procession at last came into view the doomed men, ragged, dirty, forlorn beyond description, but stumbling along bravely enough, with bound arms and tethered legs, all the wrong-doing of which they had been guilty became in an instant of little moment as compared with the sanctity of that life of which this great gaping crowd had come to see them robbed.

Walking just in advance of the straggling line of prisoners came the executioner and his assistants, the latter carrying the dreadful implements of their work. The rear was brought up by a small squad of armed guards, who slouched along with the indifference characteristic of their kind the world over.

With one exception the condemned men seemed to be between 30 and 40 years of age. This exception was a lad of not more than 17, and while his comrades were going to their fate with a stolid resignation, and even a sort of rude dignity, this boy had evidently worked himself up to a species of hysteria, and was alternately shouting, laughing and singing at the top of his voice. No one tried to silence him nor seemed to pay the slightest attention to him, for it was too patent that he was making a last frenzied effort to go to his death as a brave pirate should, and his dreadful mirth did not cease until the executioner stood before him. For the space of a breath there was a terrible pause, while the man and the boy looked into each other's eyes, then the signal was given, the hapless creature was jerked to his knees, his head was pulled forward, the broad sword cut heavily through the air, and another headless body dropped prone upon the ground.

This is the method usually followed at public executions of this sort. The men who are to be decapitated are placed in a line, at sufficient intervals from one another so that the sweep of the executioner's arm will not be interfered with. As the time of each one comes an assistant pushes the man to his knees, another, who stand in front, pulls the head of the unhappy wretch forward by his cue so that the neck will be well stretched and present an easy mark to the descending sword, one stroke of which usually completes the grim tragedy. We were, however, told at Chefu by a man long resident in China that to die by one stroke of the sword was considered a very great favor to the one condemned to death, and was to be gained only by powerful personal influence on the part of friends or by the simplest expedient of "crossing the palm" of the venal agent of justice with a goodly piece of silver. If neither means were used, and if, in addition, the crimes for which the man was to die were of a particularly heinous nature, the executioner is expected to prolong the death agony by administering several blows instead of one.

Some arrangements had evidently been made with the lower ministers of justice at Chefu where these pirates were to be given the mercy of a quick death, for, at least while we were able to remain, the first stroke was also the "coup de grace."

The 17-year-old boy was the third to die, and as the assistant threw the bleeding head to the ground the nerve and stomach of our little group failed utterly, and, turning, we pushed our dizzy way out of the crowd, away from the dreadful spot where the sickening fumes of freshly-shed blood rose up to pulute the sweet morning air.

One dreadful peculiarity was noticed in connection with the decapitated bodies, and that was that the instant a head was struck off the body itself, that had inclined forward to receive the blow, recoiled into an upright position, and for a brief moment continued to kneel erect, bloody and motionless before the shuddering spectators. This was later explained to us as the recoil from the extreme nervous and physical tension that had preceded the moment of death, both mind and body being sternly braced to meet and sustain the fatal blow.

As we emerged from the crush of curious, morbid humanity, of which we had just formed a part, some one said, in low, horrified tones, "Look!" and pointed to where, behind a sort of barrier, there lay piled up the heads of those who had been executed the day before. They were tied together by their long queues, and formed a most ghastly looking heap.

We had been particularly desirous to satisfy ourselves whether scenes like this made a deep impression upon the native spectators, but so far as we were able to judge this particular spectacle at least, bloody and revolting as it appeared to be, was regarded with entire indifference.

Go where we might in Chefu that day, it seemed impossible to escape from the tragedy of the morning. Several hours later, as we strolled through the dusty streets of the little town, we met a gang of coolies trotting along, carrying on their shoulders a long, rough log, to which, we were told, was the headless body of the pirate chief, which the authorities had been permitted to restore to his relatives for interment.

RAILROAD AUTOMOBILE.

Now that the automobile has asserted its superiority ever others systems of rapid locomotion upon the highroads, and the engines for propelling the vehicles have been developed to a high standard of efficiency, the adaptation of the motor car to railroads is being seriously considered, says the Scientific American. In Great Britain several attempts are being made to introduce the motor-propelled vehicle upon certain branches of the railroads. Although the Northeastern Railway company was the first to decide upon the innovation, the first actual coach built upon these principles for use has been constructed conjointly by the London & Southwestern railroad and the London, Brighton & South Coast railroad, two trunk lines operating in the South of England.

The self-propelled motor coach possesses many advantages over the existing system for some phases of railroad working, the most obvious of which is its utilization as a feeder to the through lines. Some branch lines extending through sparsely populated areas cannot be profitably operated, although a train service is absolutely necessary. It is for such exigencies that the self-propelled motor coach is peculiarly suitable, since the cost of maintenance is much less than that of a fully equipped train.

The experimental coach constructed by the London & Southwestern and the London, Brighton & South Coast railroads is intended for service between Pepnton and Havant, a short line on the south coast joining the main trunk system of the respective companies.

This coast consists of practically an ordinary passenger vehicle, with a small space allotted in the fore part for the accommodation of the motor. The latter in this instance is of the steam type. The coach is 50 feet in length over all, including the engine. It is carried upon two four-wheeled bogie trucks, the driving mechanism being attached to the two fore wheels in the front bogie. The passenger accommodation is divided into two compartments, one for first-class and the other for third-class passengers. The compartment for the latter has a capacity for 32 passengers, the seats being arranged in the manner that prevails in American cars, on each side of the gangway, which extends through the center of the car. The first-class compartment is built to seat 24 passengers, the seats in this instance being arranged longitudinally on either side of the car. Between the space reserved for the passengers and the motor is a small space for the conveyance of ten tons of baggage. The boiler, to economize space, is of the vertical type. The front pair of wheels of the fore bogie truck, as already stated, are the drivers, the cylinders being of 7-inch diameter and 10-inch stroke. A cab is provided for the engineer and his fireman. The motor has been compressed in as small a space as possible, and the general arrangement of the vehicle is very ingenious. The coach has been designed with the idea of attaining a speed of thirty miles an hour in half a minute after starting.

A MEAT SUN.

The worship of ancestors is curiously carried on among all tribes. Twice a year their bones are dug up and religiously washed, it being ludicrous in the extreme to watch the preternatural gravity with which the natives go about this stupendous operation, carrying huge pots of water to the open graves and religiously scrubbing the bones, says Colliers Weekly. When I first saw this operation it struck me as being remarkably funny, but to the natives themselves it is an intensely solemn and sacred ceremony. As the possession of a large "bonery" gives to the fortunate proprietor great power in the tribe, these bones are seized upon for debt or on the inauguration of a feud, the persons or family so deprived of their sacred relics being shunned by the others until the bones shall have been redeemed.

One of the most remarkable of all the strange myths believed in by this curious people is one pertaining to the sun, moon and stars. The sun is believed to be an immense ball of yak meat and fat, whereupon the spirits of departed ancestors are supposed to feast, the high being caused by its heated condition. The stars are portions of this immense feast, which dropping to the earth give birth to animals for the sustenance of suffering humanity. The moon they conceive to be a less ball of similar texture, in use while the larger one is being replenished for the morrow, the non-appearance of the sun or moon on cloudy or stormy days being accounted for by the fact that the deities are undergoing a period of fasting and religious abnegation. The parched and desert condition of sterile regions is ascribed to the fact that many thousand years ago this immense ball slipped from the hands of its keepers, and descending too near the earth, scorched those parts with which it came in contact before it could be recovered.

ARGUMENT HEARD

Board of Engineers Listens to Urging of Improvements.

A Trip Up St. Louis River and Another to Split Rock.

The United States board of engineers for rivers and harbors, arrived in the city this morning from Marquette, and other points where an inspection of government work has been carried on, and held a meeting at the local offices of the engineer for the Lake Superior district for the purpose of hearing the argument for and against the projected improvement of the Split Rock harbor and for the opening of the St. Louis river channel from the foot of the rapids to New Duluth.

Maj. H. F. Hodges is the senior officer of the engineering board, and the other members are Capt. C. H. McKinstry, formerly assistant to the officer in charge of this district, Capt. W. V. Judson and A. H. Weber, the latter engineer being the civilian member. The party arrived at 10 o'clock this morning and the meeting was held immediately after, being finished shortly after 12 o'clock.

Maj. Lansing H. Beach, engineer in charge of the Lake Superior district, was unable to come up from Detroit in time for the visit of the board of engineers, so the honors of the office were done by J. H. Darling, assistant United States engineer.

This afternoon Mr. Darling took the visiting engineers to Fond du Lac in the government launch Vidette, to inspect the ground of the projected improvement in that locality. This evening the Vidette will leave for Grand Marais on the north shore and tomorrow the engineers will inspect the harbor at Split Rock, returning to Duluth by Wednesday.

There was quite a large attendance of people interested, at the meeting held this morning, and already an immense amount of correspondence has been collected from others who were not present. All the arguments were in favor of the proposed improvements at both places, there being no dissenting voice nor letter.

Among those who spoke in favor of the deepening of the St. Louis river from the foot of the rapids to New Duluth were J. H. Crowley, of the Crowley stone works at Fond du Lac; Capt. D. E. Stevens, of the Stevens tug line; D. A. Reed, engineer, representing the Northern Power company. Charles Gasper, of Fond du Lac, and M. H. McMahon, representing the New Duluth Land company.

The substance of the argument was for the deepening of the channel as a strong inducement for the location of industrial enterprises.

T. D. Merrill, of the Merrill & Ring Mill company, of this city, and W. H. Gratwick, of Buffalo, president of the Split Rock Lumber company, which operates at Split Rock bay and vicinity, were present to urge the projected improvement at Split Rock bay. Mr. Gratwick came all the way from Buffalo at this time to present his argument. It was pointed out to the board of engineers that the harbor, already of considerable consequence, could easily be made an important harbor of refuge for fleets along the north shore, and also become an important shipping point for lumber and iron ore.

All the argument, both verbal and written, has been received by the examining board, and it will make its report with recommendations to the board of chief engineers at Washington. While the visiting engineers could not give any idea what recommendations in the matter will be made, yet they were favorably impressed by the strong array of argument put up by the interests at both points of proposed improvement. In spite of their hurried and arduous work in examining rivers and harbors, the engineers on the board look fresh as if they had just started out, and manifested great interest in the local harbor improvements.

Capt. McKinstry says he is glad to have come here, and intimated that he would not have been disappointed to have been located here permanently.

THE GATES PROPERTY

The Second Drill Is Down Into the Ore Body.

A second drill is in ore on the Gates' property on section 13, 58-20.

This drill is now in ore about seven feet, the body being about thirty feet below the surface of the land.

The first hole is now over 100 feet deep and the result of the work shows that there is eighty-two feet of ore, and the drill is still moving in it.

The Gust Carlson Exploring company has charge of the drill work, and it is expected will start another drill in a short time. The property is eighty acres in extent, and adjoins the property upon which the Crocton mine is located.

There are several Duluth people interested in the property, and it is expected that the exxplorations will be completed by fall.

LAUNDRY GIRLS STRIKE.

They Want Less Hours and More Money.

The Chicago strike epidemic reached Duluth at an early hour this morning.

No settlement was reached at a late hour this afternoon in the strike of the dozen laundry girls at the Spalding hotel.

Manager Emery, Assistant Manager Hubbs, the housekeeper, Mrs. Brady, a bell boy and an elevator boy, went into the laundry this morning and worked through the pieces that were absolutely necessary for running the hotel today.

The girls wanted a revision of hours and more pay, and made their demand at about the time their work should have begun. They refused to work till they got it, and so they are out.

Their places will probably be filled, or an agreement reached by tomorrow.

A DETECTIVE PARROT.

There is a parrot living in Tompkins avenue, in the vicinity of Gates, which should have a place on the detective force, says the Brooklyn Union. There is a little girl living on Gates avenue, near Tompkins, who has been taught by the said parrot that old-time saying, "Honesty is the best policy." It happened in this wise: The parrot on those spring days takes an airing on the fire escape at the back of his home. There is a fire escape at the back of the little girl's home also, and while the two are quite a distance apart, it is not far enough to hinder the parrot from seeing what goes on or drown the sound of his voice when he shrieks at his very top, as he sometimes does. A few days ago this little girl's mother stewed some apricots. When they were done she set them out on the fire escape to get cool. The little girl came along while they were cooling. Her mother was nowhere around, and the fruit looked so tempting that she thought she would take "just one." Like Little Jack Horner, she stuck in her thumb and a finger as well, but before she had time to pull out the plum a shrill voice sounded in her ear, "Thief! thief! thief!" was what it said. The child's fondness for apricots disappeared suddenly and the parrot had the satisfaction of knowing that he had interfered just in time.

CHURCH AT OATKA

New Methodist Church Society Is Organized Down There.

Neat Little Church Home Will Be Built There Immediately.

Another church organization has been added to the ranks of the Methodist Episcopal churches of the city.

The latest church society to be organized is the Oatka Methodist church, which was organized Saturday evening by Presiding Elder Clemans, of the Methodist church of this district.

The following officers were elected: President, R. R. Briggs; secretary, J. H. Whitely; treasurer, eGorge W. Boyden; trustees, R. C. Vincent, W. H. Bliss, George S. Richards, R. H. Briggs, J. H. Whitely, George W. Boyden and John S. Potter.

Palmer, Hall & Hunt, the architects, had prepared plans for the church home of this new society, and these were looked over at the meeting Saturday night. They were approved and it was decided to proceed immediately to let the contracts for the construction of the edifice. The plans call for a very neat and tasty church of small size.

It is expected that by August the church will be completed and dedicated.

BUDGETT IS WHO?

Sporty Individual, Giving Duluth as Residence, Arrested In Chicago.

Gives Name of Henry Budgett—Swindled Race Bookmaker.

Who is Henry Budgett, of Duluth?

A sporty individual that tries to guess the order in which the ponies come under the wire at race tracks around Chicago has been arrested in that city for swindling a bookmaker out of $1500 on a race in San Francisco and cashing $2650 of worthless checks.

Incidentally he handed out a $10,000 check payable to himself that was drawn recently on a bank that failed ten years ago.

Local authorities are anxiously waiting to get a photograph of this race track follower and are utterly unable to even surmise his identity.

When arrested the other night at the Great Northern hotel, in Chicago, Budgett said he was a respected resident of Duluth, and that his arrest would result in no end of trouble for those that instigated it.

He also said that he stood to win $1,000,000 if Judge Himes had finished first in the American derby, but the Cincinnati horse was so far behind the field that some people thought he had won the pest race.

The complaints made against this alleged Duluth man were filed by John Barry, a well-known hand bookmaker. He claims that Budgett got him to cash checks amounting to $2650, and that he also swindled him out of the $1500 on the San Francisco race.

GOOD CANADIAN MARKSMEN

Stimulate Uncle Sam to Improve Skill With Rifle.

Unless history lies George Washington was the father of Uncle Sam. And again, unless history lies George Washington was first in war as well as first in peace. Of late Uncle Sam has been smitten with a desire to emulate George Washington in that respect, and to this end he has called a council of his officers—army, navy and marine corps—and they have seriously advised him to improve his marksmanship, to do everything in his power to stimulate interest in marksmanship, to make appropriations and establish trophies and in every possible way to encourage his nephews at least to learn to shoot straight, says the Brooklyn Eagle. And this very desirable training is to be a prominent feature in the reorganization of the militia.

Along with the establishment of all sorts of home and national and state trophies and medals and competitions and the furnishing of rifles and ranges for all who care to train themselves along this line, it was decided that a team should go to Bisley, England, in July, to try to recapture the Palma trophy. A fund to defray the expenses of such a team is to be raised by subscription. Edwin Gould has headed this subscription with $250. George J. Gould, Secretary Root and a dozen others have subscribed $100 apiece; and at Sea Girt late in May, the crack shots of America shot in competition for places on this team.

It is a trophy originally offered in America that they are to shoot for at Bisley on July 11—the American Centennial Palma Trophy, to be shot for each year in the country of the team holding it, at such time and place as the National Rifle shooting organization of that country may decide. Under the conditions of the Palma match each team shall consist of eight men, who must be citizens and residents of the country they represent. The national military arm of the country the team represents must be used. There is no restriction regarding ammunition. The distances are 800, 900 and 1000 yards, fifteen shots at each range by each competitor.

It is ten or a dozen years since an American team has gone abroad to shoot. In 1901 the Canadians lifted the trophy, the contest being held at Sea Girt, N. J. Last year the competition was held at Ottawa, and the British team won with a score of 1459 out of a possible 1800. While it is all very well to put forth every effort to recapture it, it was Canada that won it from Uncle Sam, and she won it on an American range, and it may be interesting to find out how Canada trains her marksmen so that they can beat Americans on their own ground.

She does it by an education in marksmanship that begins almost in the cradle. The Canadian child drops his rattle and seizes his rifle, not at first a rifle of steel with trigger, hammer and sight, and with ping of ball to target, merely a little wooden affair, but the same in form as the one his brother handles, and it makes the youngster happy.

She does it by the splendid system of boys' brigades that exist throughout the Dominion, under the auspices of the different evangelical churches of the country. The churches gather the lads from the Sunday schools, and as soon as the child is twelve years of age he is eligible and, if enrolled a member, is given a uniform and the dummy rifle of wood. Hon. George W. Ross, LL. D., K. C., premier of the province of Ontario, is president of the Boys' Brigade Association of Canada, and thus at once the child is directed to look up to the dignity of the state. Lieutenant Colonel Hamilton, Toronto, is head of the Toronto Battalion, which consists of nearly 1000 well-drilled boys.

Practice with the rifle is not optional with the young Canadian; it is practically compulsory, and the lad may not pick up the rifle to lay it down again when a sudden fancy strikes him. He must do a stated practice and fire a certain number of rounds per year. To stimulate an interest and help the esprit de corps so necessary to successful military achievement the government steps in and puts up splendid trophies, to be kept by the school that wins. Then, again, in order to stimulate the desire for shooting, the records of the ranges are published and the photos of these schoolboy winners are circulated through the press.

In the winter indoor rifle work with the latest improved miniature devices, are used, and the practice goes on regardless of cold or snow. At this stage the lad usually loves his rifle and finds its use more play than work. He is an expert now, and, should his country call him, he is well able to give a good account of himself at the front. The Eagle correspondent, through Inspector Hughes, was furnished with the latest official and as yet unpublished list of the rifle practice records of the corps of the Toronto schools, and they show remarkable accuracy. Out of possible 125 at different distances, J. M. Kerrehan, aged 15 years, of Given Street School, made 116. Thirty-four boys have made over 100, while the average of good, bad and indifferent shots of the six Toronto public school corps are as follows: Wellesley school, 97; Given Street school, 89; Jesse Ketchum school, 85; Ryerson school, 83; Dufferin school, 80; Parkdale school, 75.

Then in addition to the rifle work, there is the stimulus of the parade, which is held on every worthy occasion. On Saturday, May 2, the Eagle correspondent saw the Toronto battalion swing by with the step of the Prussian guards regular, as it passed in review before Earl Minto, the governor general of Canada. The photos of the Toronto cadets shown were secured on this occasion. Lord Dundonald, chief of the military forces of the Dominion, has again reviewed the battalion on Empire Day, May 23, and in this way the enthusiasm of the embryo soldier is sustained.

Canada is dotted with rifle clubs and there are rifle ranges in the neighborhood of every city and large town in the Dominion. Beside this, there are butts of more or less importance within reasonable distance of every community or smaller center of population. So expert have the rifle shots of the Dominion become that the official targets are being made smaller and the conditions of attainment more difficult. There exists in Canada a Dominion Rifle association, to which are eligible all the minor associations of the Dominion; then there is the Ontario Rifle association and a like association in each province. Then comes the District association and finer still the County association and finer again the City or Town club. Of them all the government cognizance, aiding the most aristocratic organization with no more willing hands than it helps the humble farmer's club, where the man the world calls Reuben shoots at the mark on the hill by the virgin forest.

These numerous organizations all hold annual shoots, bringing together many times during the year the riflemen in friendly rivalry. The annual competition for the Province of Ontario is held at the magnificent Long Branch ranges, just outside Toronto, while the Dominion Shoot is held at Ottawa, where the keenest shots in Canada fight for a coveted honor, the honor of representing Canada on the team that once a year goes to Bisley, England.

BEAT INVESTMENT GAME.

"There is a good deal in knowing when to stand from under—in being able, as it were, to experience a hunch when the psychological moment has arrived," said a business man in speaking of the recent collapse of the big St. Louis "turf investment" outfit, to the Washington Post. "And there's a friend of mine right here in little old Washington who is mighty apt at getting just those kind of hunches. I suppose he is the only man in Washington who actually succeeded in beating that turf investment game. When E. J. Arnold & Co., the firm that went up in the air the other day, began to advertise its 'investment' business heavily this friend of mine knew as well as he knew that he had two eyes that it was a phony outfit, designed to gull a lot of good things and marks and come-ons. Nevertheless and notwithstanding, he resolved to take a little hack at it, for he had beaten a similar game before, and he felt fairly confident that he could afford to take a chance on beating this one.

"So, when the Washington representative of the 'turf investment' outfit established an office on G street, a few months ago, this friend of mine went right down there, saw the agent, and stuffed in $500 of his hard-wrung simoleons, the agreement being that he was to cop out 5 or 10 per cent a week, or something like that. Well, he toyed along with the phony thing for a good many weeks at a stretch, getting his little rake-down regularly every week, and waiting for the hunch to come along and hit him that it was time to draw out. That hunch drifted his way just about ten days before Arnold & Co. went up in the air. He went to the G street office and grabbed out his little $500, and he had already, you remember, taken down pretty nearly that much in weekly 'dividends.' He tells me that the agent at the G street office looked a-plenty disgusted when he announced that he thought he could use that $500 of his'n for a few moments, but the agent didn't dare demur, for there was nothing apparently wrong with the Arnold outfit just at that time, and it wouldn't have done to sidestep on a pay-back of that sort.

"And, as I say, that was not the only game of a similar kind that this same chum of mine has beat in his day. He administered a much harder jolt to no less a layout than that famous Franklin Syndicate, so-called, managed by the young Miller man who is now doing time in Sing Sing, which did a business of millions in Brooklyn by advertising its ability to pay its subscribers at the rate of 10 per centum a week. My friend keeps his eyes peeled for all such games as this, and when he thinks he's got a chance to land right he always gets in on the ground floor early, so as to give himself a good chance to win out comfortably before the fake concerns go to smash. He knew that this Franklin Syndicate must, by the very nature of things, be a bogus, but that didn't feaze him. He got into correspondence with the people behind the game, and then he boldly sent 'em over $2000 to be placed to his account on the 10-per-cent-a-week basis. He got a check for $200 just a week later, and the week after that, and so on until his original investment of $2000 was more than paid back. The game was booming along at a tremendous rate just then, and the money was drifting into the coffers of the Franklin Syndicate in gobs—they made millions out of the job—and they didn't dare to hold back the coin from any of the original subscribers for fear of a public howl, which would copper their scheme. Well, after getting considerably more than $2000 out of the extraordinary Miller outfit, my friend finally concluded that the desirable moment for ducking had come along, and he sent a polite demand for his $2000. He received a letter which contained more or less of a demur over that proposition, whereupon he sent the Franklin Syndicate a sizzler to the effect that there would be very much transpiring in the public prints with reference to the Franklin Syndicate if he didn't get those $2000 back by return of post. He got it, and just two weeks later Miller was pinched and jammed into the Tombs to await trial, while all of his side partners were fugitives from justice in various parts of Europe.

"Wherefore I rise to remark that it's going to take a pretty smooth con game that comes along and fans this friend of mine for his wad."

TALE OF THREE PIGS.

Persons living in one of the near-by suburbs, where the people are rather fond of keeping pigs and pasturing them on the public, tell a story of an incident which they say actually occurred several days ago, in which two small and one rather large pig were the actors, says the Washington Post.

One of the suburban grocers, it seems, had thrown out some refuse potatoes and turnips, whereupon, as usual, there was an immediate rush for the spoil by all the pigs in sight. During the gobbling-up process a rather large porker gave offense to two smaller ones, and as soon as the eatables were disposed of, the two little pigs "lit into" the larger one with might and main. The larger pig made things somewhat interesting for the smaller ones, and finally one of the little pigs grew weary and, leaving the scene of battle, retired to a neighboring mud wallow, where he lay down to rest and cool off. In the meantime the other small pig continued the fight until, about ten minutes later, his companion, feeling refreshed, came to his relief, pitching into the larger pig with vim and vigor, while his comrade, by this time pretty well worn out and exhausted, left off fighting, and, as though having got a pointer from his friend, turned and trotted away in a bee line for the wallow.

The loungers about the suburban store noticed this seemingly unequal contest, and were wondering whether or not Little Pig No. 2, who had just then retired to the wallow, would return to his companion's assistance after refreshing himself a bit in the wallow, as Little Pig No. 1 had done for him. They did not have to wait very long. In about twelve minutes No. 2 arose from the mire, marched up to where the large pig was walloping No. 1, and pounced upon him with a degree of vigor little short of astonishing, as No. 1 trotted back to the wallow to cool off and recuperate.

According to those who saw the "scrap," it was the most remarkable case of hog sagacity they ever witnessed, and before the fight ended in the utter rout of the larger pig by the two smaller ones, nearly every man and boy in the suburb had gathered to look on. The two small porkers not only showed good foresight in taking it turn about in their fight with the larger animal, but they readily realized the value of short shifts. As the fight progressed the intervals of rest taken by each of the two small pigs grew shorter and shorter, but at no time during the "scrap" did either of the two small pigs attempt to leave before he was relieved. They kept the large porker busy every moment of his time, and after about twenty rounds defeated and drove him away. Then the two little pigs lay down in the mud side by side and took what the country newspapers call "a much-needed rest."

CAPTAIN CARDONA'S WONDERFUL ACT.

A truly wonderful act is that of Capt. Cardona, of the carnival company, with his trio of forest-bred black-maned African lions. These huge beasts are of the most savage and ferocious of their kind, and were captured in the wilds of Western Africa after killing a number of natives who took part in capturing them.

Several luckless trainers tried to subjugate them, but in vain, one of them being killed and two others badly injured. Capt. Cardona, Europe's most successful trainer, heard of them when all hopes of training them had been given up, and after much persuasion of the management, was allowed to enter the cage with them. From that moment they were conquered beasts. They had met their master, and they knew it. They had tried just once to attack him, and the reception they met with completely cowed them.

Their education commenced soon after that, and within a year they had been taught the performance which they now present. With all but human intelligence they go through one act after another, showing in what wondrous degree the mind of man prevails over the animal kingdom when it is properly exerted.

Capt. Cardona will give hourly exhibitions during the Duluth July fair and carnival, July 6 to 11 inclusive.

CROWDING WORK

Street Railway Tracks on Superior Street Are In Use.

Work of Tearing Up Temporary Track Proceeds at Night.

The Duluth-Superior Traction company crowded work on the East Superior street lines Sunday and last night.

Work went on uninterruptedly during all of yesterday afternoon and last night, and this morning the task of taking out the temporary track along the newly-paved stretch, which was the job in hand, was well advanced.

Yesterday afternoon, too, the cars began using one of the new tracks. But one was used yesterday afternoon and today, in order to give the use of the other to the work cars engaged in taking out the temporary track.

Tomorrow the regular schedule will become operative, as the company will use both of the new tracks. This will relieve the minds of East End residents a good deal, as it has often been disagreeable to be held up at the switch until the single temporary track was emptied of cars coming in the opposite direction. However, it was recognized as a necessity and there was little kicking.

Owing to the coating of cement and sand that had covered the new tracks, the cars in going over them made a frightful row yesterday afternoon, but this will cease when the coating has been worn off, which will not take long.

Work on the Fourth street line is being pushed very rapidly, too, and it will only be a short time before though traffic will proceed uninterrupted by the waiting caused by a single track.

ANOTHER SUSPECT

Who May Know Something of the McCann Murder.

St. Louis, June 29.—A. E. Mitchell, who claims to be agent of a spring water company, has been arrested on suspicion that he knows something of the McCann murder. Mitchell admitted that he was a personal friend of Barrington, who is under arrest charged with the murder, and that on June 22 he wrote a note to Barrington, which read:

"Fred: I am all right; don't send what I asked for."

The note was signed "Jim." This is the note Barrington received and showed to Mrs. McCann to convince her the missing husband was out of trouble.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Plucky Girl, Seriously Hurt, Drives Frightened Colt Home.

Deadwood—Colonel Almond B. Wells, commanding the first United States cavalry, has returned from the Philippines and is visiting in the Black Hills, on leave of absence. He is interested in mining property. He was major of the Eighth cavalry when it went from Fort Meade to Cuba in 1898. Shortly afterwards he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel and assigned to a station in Arizona. He was next sent to China in 1900, and when promoted to colonel was given the command of the First cavalry. It is reported that he will be promoted to brigadier-general upon his retirement, which comes in a short time.

The case of William Roetzell against the Titanic Gold Mining company, a damage suit for $5000 for personal injuries, is on trial. Roetzell and William Vroman were injured in the bottom of a shaft by the falling of a plank. Vroman died the following day and Roetzell says he received internal injuries from which he will never fully recover.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—The supreme court called a special term July 17 to hear the institution bond case. In addition to hearing the argument of the suit brought by Attorney General Ferch against State Treasurer McMillan, to test the legality of the purchase of institution bonds two years ago, the supreme court will issue an alternative writ of mandamus directing the state treasurer to buy the bonds authorized for the state university at Grand Forks or show cause why he fails to do so. This will bring directly to an issue all phases of the vexed institution bond matter and will settle the legality of such bonds for all time to come, as to the right of the legislature to authorize them, as to whether they are state bonds and included in the debt limit, and as to the right of the state treasurer to pay them. The mater is vital to all institutions in the state, and the special term of the supreme court will be one of the most important ever held in the state.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Alta Lawrence, the young daughter of a prominent farmer living near Carthage, proved herself a heroine by restraining and driving home a fractious colt after it had crushed her cheek bone and so seriously injured one of her eyes that it has since had to be removed. While her father was temporarily absent from home she hitched up a colt, as she had frequently done before, for the purpose of driving over to the home of a neighbor. While driving along the road the animal became frightened and commenced to kick. It finally kicked over the dash board, striking the young lady in the face, with the result stated. Notwithstanding that her face was crushed and the sight of one eye destroyed, the plucky young woman did not abandon the horse and buggy, but after controlling the animal succeeded in driving it back home before she made an effort to have her injuries attended to.

Friends are alarmed because of the mysterious disappearance of Amos Thorne, who has been employed on the farm of Charles Landon, near Egan. It is feared he may have been the victim of foul play, as he left all his personal effects at the home of his employer.

It is expected that crooks of all kinds will commence to gather here at once in expectation of reaping a rich harvest during the mid-summer festival, which will be held all of next week. Chief of Police Martin and the members of his force are keeping a sharp lookout and already several suspicious characters have been driven out of town.

Residents of Bancroft, on the Great Northern railroad, some time ago sent to the state board of railroad commissioners a petition asking that the company be compelled to erect a station at that place. Recently W. H. Stanley, secretary of the board, informally took up the matter with the officials of the company. He is now in receipt of a letter stating that a station is in course of construction at Bancroft.

Washington Springs—The assessors' returns, just completed show an increase of 200 per cent during the year in the personal and real property of Washington Springs, while the quarterly statement of the two local banks show deposits amounting to over $100,000.

The remains of G. A. Albert arrived from Lead, S. D., last evening for interment. The Masonic lodges of Huron, Woonsocket, and other towns sent delegations to the funeral.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Horse Falls Into Cave and Comes Out Unhurt.

Iron Mountain—Early the other morning as a man was driving over the road at the Chapin cave at Iron Mountain his horse became frightened, made a side plunge and went rolling down into the cave. The horse and buggy rolled over several times before they reached the bottom. The buggy was damaged badly, but with the exception of a few slight bruises the horse was unhurt. The driver jumped out as he saw that the horse was going into the cave. He came down town for assistance to get the horse up and when he went back he was agreeably surprised to find the horse nibbling at the grass at the bottom of the cave. The horse is a bronco and owned by Nelson, the baker.

A new scheme in church affairs is being introduced by the Rev. Smith of Iron Mountain. He thinks that the churches can draw "trade" by serving "free lunch," as well as the saloons can, and he now serves hot coffee and cake to his congregation after services.

Sault Ste. Marie—A branch of the Journeymen Tailors' union of America has been organized at the Soo. The officers are: President, W. L. Jones; secretary, John Morrison; treasurer, James C. Johnson. The union starts out with twenty members, all of whom have faith that it will be a good thing for the tailors of the city. The scale of prices has been fixed with the intention of allowing every competent man with his work is worth, and it is thought under the new order of things it will be easier to secure good men for work at the Soo. In the past considerable trouble has been experienced in getting enough competent men to handle the business. The scale is as high as can be found anywhere in towns of this size. All the garments made by members of the union will bear the label of the organization. The scale has been signed by all but one of the tailoring firms of the Soo.

Escanaba—The deadlock at Escanaba over the measure to appropriate $500 for new books to stock the Carnegie library which was passed several weeks ago and vetoed by the mayor passed by a two-thirds majority over the mayor's veto, threatens litigation. The mayor has twice vetoed a measure to appropriate money for the Carnegie library on the grounds that such action was illegal and contrary to the provisions of the charter which says that after the annual appropriations for certain funds have been made no money shall be appropriated for those funds. Mayor Sourwine holds that the appropriation of $2000 which was made for the library fund last September cannot be increased and he says legally the mayor says he intends to stand by the charter and refuse to sign the check for the amount. Such action will carry the matter to the courts.

GREEN AND BEAVERS

Interested Jointly In Selling Stock to Postoffice Employes.

Green Heavily Interested In Bundy Time Clock Contract.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The attention of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow has been directed to the charge that New York State Senator George Green and George W. Beavers, until lately chief of the division of salaries and allowances in the postoffice department, were interested jointly in the sale of certain mining stock to postoffice employes, and that the two had a joint bank account. This fact is regarded as of particular significance, if true, as Mr. Green is one of the prominent stockholders connected with the Bundy Manufacturing company, of Binghamton, N. Y., and he conducted the negotiations with Beavers and other postoffice officials which led to the purchase of large quantities of the time clocks made by the Bundy company. At the postoffice department it is stated that the department paid for these clocks from $100 to $125 each, according to the size. The regular market price is given as from $55 to $60 each when purchased singly, and a considerable reduction when purchased in lots of one dozen or more. Mr. Beavers, however, before leaving the department, claimed that he did not execute the contract with the Bundy people, but threw the blame on John Masten, his former friend, then chief clerk to the first assistant postmaster general, who signed the contract as acting first assistant postmaster general. Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow declines to give any information as to the progress of the investigation as to the matter of this contract, but it is understood that the Bundy company and others interested have filed replies to the charges.

N. H. Baker, who represents the Dey Time Register company, of Syracuse, N. Y., a successful test of whose machines was made in the Washington city postoffice just prior to the execution of the four-year contract with the Bundy company, has filed a statement with First Assistant Postmaster General Bristow, in which he makes some caustic comments on the methods employed by Beavers and others in this connection. Mr. Baker charges that Beavers attempted to prevent a test of the Dey register being made, and even went so far as to request the postmaster general to have the test made in some other city, in the hope that Mr. Baker would abandon the case. Having learned of the existence of the four-year contract, Mr. Baker says: "We then realized why Mr. Baker wanted to put us to as much expense and trouble as he could; he supposed that we would get tired of the case and would obligingly fade away, which would save him the necessity of giving up the information relative to the four-year contract." Mr. Baker says that the question of the legality of the contract was referred to Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell, who said that if the request came from the department, worded so that he could go into the facts, he would decide that the contract was illegal and against the public policy, but that his decision would necessarily be controlled by the wording of the request. "The request, when it was made," says the letter, "was drafted by a man who evidently knew his business, for it simply inquired as to whether the postmaster general could make a contract for free delivery supplies extending over a period of four years, and the wording of the request prevented the comptroller from taking the fact of this particular contract into consideration. Mr. Tracewell afterward remarked to C. D. Baker and myself that the people in the postoffice department knew their business."

Mr. Baker injects some humor into his remarks in treating of the actions of Robert B. Brown, Jr., who secured a favorable report on the Dey register some time ago. Speaking of Brown, he says that he introduced himself to the president of the Dey company as "the man who does things." Continuing, the letter says: "Mr. Dey had had two or three experiences in trying to strike 'pay oil' in the postoffice department field, but had succeeded in locating nothing but 'dry holes.' Therefore, when the hatless and coatless Brown rushed in and wanted to carry off the register to make the test, Mr. Dey says: 'Nay, Brown, show me.'" Brown sang him the story of his past conquests in the postoffice department, and sang it in sweet and seductive strains, telling in lyric verse the wonderful influence he had with the sultan of the department, with the result that Dey threw himself into Brown's arms weeping for joy over the fact that he had at last discovered a man who could break into the charmed circle that had hitherto separated him from the government trough without using a pick-ax."

After the favorable report was made, the letter continues: "But fate was against Brown. His great and good friend Masten had, in the meantime, become cold or jealous of the fame or sheckels that Brown was to receive if he succeeded in having his machine installed. Mastin ordered that Postmaster Merritt's report be filed, hid or lost. * * * At any rate, by mental or some other system of telepathy, the Bundy company was made aware that 'something was doing down in Washington.' The moguls of the company donned their department clothes and hied themselves to the city, where contracts are obtained on suspicion. After copious draughts of Mum's extra dry, and a few other things, the gentlemen who spend Uncle Sam's money in the postoffice department insisted that unless the Bundy people would consent to the aforesaid gentlemen as representatives of the department, purchasing a ten-years' supply of the Bundy clock, they would in the future refuse to look a time clock in the face. Knowing that they were concerned, the Bundy representatives gracefully yielded and gave their consent and the four-year contract was entered into without the silly formality of advertising it, and so giving the competitors a show for their 'white alley.'"

Later on, according to Mr. Baker's account, "the Dey people decided to take another whirl at the postoffice department, so they got into connection with a couple of men who foolishly imagined they were on to the curves of the department, and who, after they had made a contract with the Dey company, took the Cannon Ball express for the place where they expected to chew off a few hundred thousand dollars' worth of contracts." Here they ran against First Assistant Postmaster General Wynne and inquired whether it would be necessary for them to demonstrate the merits of their machine, or would he take their word for it, and give them a contract. Mr. Wynne replied that while he knew a great deal more about the department than he ought to know, being only the first assistant postmaster general, still he did not believe that he was giving Beavers or Machen cause to call him down for insubordination if he were to ask us 'to show him.'"

Later on Beavers "had a dream" that if the Dey clock were tested in the Washington office it would spoil the contemplated trip of the postmaster general to the West Indies, so Mr. Baker enlisted the good office "of a statesman who was a member of the house committee on postoffices and post roads" to explain the situation to the postmaster general. "This was done and Mr. Payne proved himself a magnificent listener, but that was all, and he took his West Indies trip regardless of whether the clock representatives stayed in Washington or went to Halifax. After a wait of two weeks the clock people called on Mr. Beavers and in the proper tone asked him if he would consent to a test being made in the Washington office. Mr. Beavers gave them a sickly smile and this is what he said: 'There is no use in wasting your time and money. The department has made a four-year contract with the Bundy people. Masten made the contract. When he was chief clerk, I was a dead one.'"

LOW SOCKS FOR HIGH SOCIETY

The Latest Fad From Paris Has Captured New York.

New York, June 29.—"Half hose for ladies" read large illuminated signs in the windows of several shops in Fifth avenue, and announce a fad for wearing socks with regular men's garters which is actually upon New York society. High society and real society, not the stage, where such fantastic fancies usually have their birth and die, has taken it up. Women who would scorn the peek-a-boo waist have been seen wearing both socks and the garters that go with them.

The shops are full of dainty conceits, some fresh from Paris, where the craze originated, and some of native manufacture. The women who wear the socks say they do it simply to be cool, not because it is a daring and novel fashion. But, whatever its cause, the vision of an apparently sedate young woman, who, upon lifting her skirts to enter a cab or at a muddy crossing, reveals a pair of embroidered socks and an inch of pink flesh encircled by a white or black silk garter, is certainly calculated to excite comment.

When a Fifth avenue hoster was asked if women really are wearing socks, he said emphatically: "Yes, indeed. They are a fad which reached New York from Paris late last year, and some women took it up at once, but it did not become general in society until within the last two months. In the last week we received orders for women's socks every day from summer resorts. I sent half a dozen pairs of embroidered silk ones yesterday to a Chicago woman whose name is equally well known in the West and New York. These women's socks are made just the same as men's, only they are eighteen inches long, instead of the regulation fourteen inches, and have ribbed tops, just half the width of the men's. A great many women, however, do not buy those made specially for women. They prefer to purchase the regular masculine socks, just fourteen inches long."

Continuing, the dealer said: "Two weeks a go a young girl who attends a Fifth avenue seminary stopped before my window to admire a pair of women's half hose, embroidered in white. After hesitating outside for perhaps five minutes, she came in and bought them. The following Saturday half a dozen of her girl friends from the seminary came in and asked for some socks just like those she had bought. We equipped them not only with a complete assortment of black and white and colored socks, but with men's garters to match, and they went away delighted.

"These garters are made of white or black silk elastic and have the usual clasp coming down in front of the leg to catch the top of the sock. We put a little white sand in bow on them to make them look a little prettier, but otherwise they were just the ordinary man's garter. I filled an out of town order last week for a dozen pairs of boys' 7½ sizes. I've went to a well known society girl at Tuxedo. These socks are made in silk and lisle and cotton in plain black and whites, hand embroidered, with lace set in.

"We don't sell them to the stage people. I can't recollect a single order from a person in the theatrical profession. They are to meet a demand from our regular customers, both in New York and throughout the country."

THE DAVIES CONCERT

Large Audience Present and a Brilliant Success Artistically.

Artists Are Given Fine Reception and Present Brilliant Program.

The concert at the Lyceum yesterday afternoon by the artists who are to form the musical combinations that Alfred Davies, of Minneapolis, will present during the coming season was a distinct success, both from an artistic standpoint and from the interest which the musical public of Duluth took in it, the theater being well filled, in spite of the fact that the torrid temperature which prevailed made it not very alluring to spend an afternoon in a theater.

Mr. Davies arranged this concert with a view not only to presenting to the public the excellence of the talent which will sing under his management, but of bringing together the artists who will be associated in the different companies.

That Mrs. James McAuliffe was never in better voice was the verdict of all of her friends, and the magnetic quality of her voice and stage presence was strikingly evident. She sang for her principal number the prayer from "Norma," by Bellini, and it was given with a brilliancy which took the audience by storm. For an encore she sang a charming number, "Bobolink," and in this the adaptability of her voice to the lighter shades was finely shown, the trills and pretty runs being given with that delightful liquid quality which are essential to fine execution. A second encore was insisted upon. Mrs. McAuliffe also sang with much feeling the soprano part of the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore." Mr. Tyler singing the tenor part and a full chorus participating.

Miss Antoinette West, contralto, sang "Esser Mesto," from the opera "Martha." Her voice is rich and mellow and admirably trained and has the fullness and resonance which a contralto should have. She was one of the favorites of the afternoon, receiving a fine recall. Mrs. McAuliffe and Miss West sang a beautiful duet, "Qui est Homo," from "Stabat Mater."

Miss Elizabeth Bailey sang two Rubinstein numbers, "Fruhlingslied" and "Sturmeswinde." Her voice is developing finely and shows much power and a fine sympathetic quality.

Mrs. Matie Bowen, who sang as "Fulton," sang the beautiful aria "Ah Fors e Lui," from "La Traviata," effectively. She also sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," an arrangement by Holden. It must be confessed that the arrangement of the grand old hymn is rather dissatisfying, but the manner in which it was sung gave no cause for criticism, and Mrs. Bowen received much applause.

Miss Anna Braun, of Minneapolis, a young mezzo soprano whose voice is almost of the contralto quality, made a very favorable impression. She sang the familiar "Samson and Delilah" aria, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice." Her voice is rich, fresh and mellow, and she sings with ease and repose.

Miss Bessie MacKeen is a clever reader and impersonator and gave two numbers that found much favor. One was "Geraldine," a child sketch, both humorous and pathetic, and the other an impersonation of an old woman commenting upon affairs in general of her neighborhood and household.

Miss Mabel Runge, soprano, was to have sung, but was called to Minneapolis by the illness of her mother and could not return in time.

Assisting the artists of the Davies company were George Lyding, of the Northwestern Opera company, and George Tyler, the Duluth tenor. Mr. Lyding sang the sleeping song from "Masaniello," by Auber, a most beautiful selection, which he rendered with a delicacy and finish that thoroughly captivated all who heard it. For an encore he sang a dashing song. Mr. Lyding is easily one of the best tenors Duluth has heard in opera for a long time, and his popularity is steadily growing. His work yesterday afternoon showed that he is also quite at home in concert.

Mr. Tyler sang "If With All Your Hearts," from "Elijah," and, while his voice was a little husky, rendered it finely.

The accompaniments were played by Mrs. George Tyler, Miss Therese Lynn and Miss Saidee Spaulding. Miss Spaulding is a member of the Northwestern Opera company, and in her work at the piano showed rare gift as an accompanist.

AT WEST DULUTH

John Wagnald, a yard foreman at the Murray & Jones mill, was drowned Saturday afternoon in the slip at the mill on Forty-first avenue west. He was attempting to fix the foundation of a lumber pile near the edge of the dock and stepped out on a timber at the water's edge. He lost his balance and fell into the water, which is about twelve feet deep at this point.

He came to the surface, but before the workmen could make a move to assist him sank again and did not reappear.

Pike poles were immediately brought into use, but the body could not be found and Lieut. Briggs, of the West Duluth police, was notified of the accident. He responded promptly to the call accompanied by M. J. Flitsraut with grappling irons. The body was recovered aften ten minutes' work.

A brother of the drowned man, Andrew Wagnald, was working in the mill at the time of the accident and was overcome with grief at the sudden death of his brother.

The deceased held a position of trust with the mill company, having been in its employ for six years. He was unmarried and boarded on Thirty-ninth avenue west..

Besides his brother, he had one married sister in the city, Mrs. John Anderson, of 2518 West Second street.

The mill was closed down until this morning out of respect for the dead.

At the inquest which was held, Coroner Boyer pronounced death to be due to accidental drowning.

A LIVELY RUNAWAY.

A runaway that was attended with somewhat serious results occurred yesterday afternoon in West Duluth.

A horse belonging to M. S. Shores was standing on Grand avenue hitched to a light roundabout, in which were seated Mrs. Shores and her little daughter and another lady. Mr. Shores was about to get into the buggy when the horse became frightened and commenced to rear up. The occupants of the carriage were thrown out and the horse dashed away down Grand avenue with the empty buggy. It ran into the front door of the livery barn on Grand avenue, where it has been kept, dashed through the barn and out the back door, leaving the buggy behind it in its flight. The animal was captured later. The buggy proved to be badly damaged.

The occupants of the carriage were not seriously, although badly frightened and receiving some painful bruises and scratches.

ASSAULT CHARGED.

Martin Burkland, of Proctorknott, was brought down to West Duluth last night by the police and given a ball at the city's expense. He was arraigned this morning before Justice Stone on three charges sworn out by Robert Fraser, also of Proctorknott.

The latter claimed that Burkland assaulted him, threatened to repeat the assault at some future date not specified and used profane and obscene language toward him.

Burkland was willing to compromise the case ard pleaded guilty to the latter charge, the two former not being pressed by the complaining witness.

The justice assessed him $24.60, which included the fine and the costs of the court.

WONDERFUL FIND IN EGYPT

Sacred Writings to the Disciples Have Been Discovered.

London, June 29.—The interesting discovery at Oxyrhynchus, in 1897, by the Oxonians, Grenfell and Hunt, of the logia of Christ and other important papyri will doubtless be remembered. The results of the brief examination of other papyri discovered by the same men in a second series of excavations fully justify the hopes expressed in 1897 that Oxyrhynchus will prove a rich mine for the recovery of lost classical and early Christian literature. Two and perhaps three more seasons' work will be required to exhaust the more promising portions of the site, the mounds whereof cover an area surpassed by few ancient Egyptian towns.

The most interesting discovery in the second excavations is a third century fragment of a collection of the sayings of Jesus in similar style to the so-called logia discovered in 1897.

The seperate sayings introduced by the words "Jesus saith" are for the most part unrecorded elsewhere, though some occur in the gospels, as "the kingdom of God is within you," and "many that are first shall be last," etc., occur here in different surroundings.

Six of the sayings are in imperfect condition, but the new logia papyrus supplies more evidence of its origin than its predecessor, for it contains an introductory paragraph stating that what follows consisted of "words which Jesus, the living Lord, spake" to two of his disciples, and, moreover, one of the uncanonical sayings is already extant in part. The conclusion of it is: "He that wanders shall reign, and he that reigns shall rest," being quoted by Clement of Alexandria from the gospel, according to the Hebrews.

It is, indeed, possible that this gospel was the source wherefrom all this second series of the logia was derived, or all or some may have been taken from the gospel according to the Egyptians, whereto Harnack and others referred in the logia found in 1897, but Grenfell and Hunt were disposed to regard both as a series of collections of sayings currently ascribed to the Lord rather than extracts from any one uncanonical gospel.

Latin papyri from Egypt are so rare that one containing a part of the epitome of Livy, covering books 37, 39, 49 and 55, are particularly interesting. All books later than the forty-fifth of Livy's history are lost, though an epitome of them is extant wherefrom, however, the papyrus now discovered differs largely in respect to the events selected for mention.

The back of the Livy papyrus was subsequently used for writing the text of the Epistle to the Hebrews, whereof a considerable portion is preserved, being much the largest piece of the new testament yet discovered.

Another interesting biblical fragment comes from the Septuagent version of Genesis. It probably is a century older than any extant vellum manuscripts. Among the numerous fragments of lost Greek classics is a first century B. C. papyrus containing an ode or odes of a poetess, perhaps Corinno, the rival and reputed instructress of Pindar.

A GREAT GAME

Duluth and Winnipeg Play Seventeen Innings, the Cardinals Winning.

Mueller Does Grand Work —Lambert Scores the Winning Run.

NORTHERN LEAGUE.

| Fargo | 11 | 22 | .333 |
| Superior | 8 | 24 | .250 |

In a terrifically sizzling seventeen inning game, replete with sensational playing, Duluth won from Winnipeg Saturday.

Advices from Winnipeg say it was the best game ever seen in that section and the Cardinals clearly outplayed the champions at all stages but the "hoodoo" was doing business at its old stand and it required eight extra innings of hard work to overcome the handicap.

Duluth only made two errors in the game and Winnipeg had eleven and yet the "hoodoo" kept the Cardinals from winning earlier.

It was largely a pitchers' battle until toward the end when the terrible strain began to tell on both Mueller and Corbett. It was then that Freeman and Lambert saved the game for Duluth by the most sensational catches. Freeman in left pulled down six drives without an error and Lambert in center took eight without an error missing the ninth chance after a desperate run.

Over 3000 spectators went wild with enthusiasm as the two teams battled desperately for three hours and a quarter. In the fourteenth inning with no person out Randall hit out a triple but it availed nothing.

Mueller had great speed, control and showed nice head-work and his two hits were timely, doing much to win his own game. Both pitchers gave but one base on balls and Corbett scored four more strikeouts than did his opponent.

Mueller simply paralyzed O'Dea, the heaviest hitter in the league, according to official figures. He failed to get a safe hit in seven times up.

Both of Duluth's errors were excusable. Quillan only missed one in thirteen chances and Lamber's miss was almost an impossibility to field.

Kennally holds the put-out record for a single game. He had 22 chances without an error in that seventeen inning game.

Owing to that little bat throwing in the Superior series President Laxdal of the Northern league has suspended Shepard for an indefinite period. The management was fortunate to secure Wilkes from the Southwestern Iowa league just as the suspension went in effect. While not a heavy sticker Wilkes covers a lot of ground and is fast running bases. He has a record of 10 2-3 seconds in the 100-yard dash and is young and ambitious.

In Crippen the Duluth team seems to have found a real catcher. He is said to rival Rogers of Winnipeg as the best backstop in the league judging from his work thus far.

Noldin, the star pitcher of the Southern league, is expected here almost any day. He left Memphis for Duluth several days ago.

Gehring's hand is reported much better and he may be able to take his regular turn pitching in the Fargo series.

McGaughey's left hand was injured in a hard drive during the first game of the Winnipeg series.

Winnipeg papers concede that Duluth outplayed the Champions in every game and only lost the series through the rankest kind of luck.

Crookston took the final game of the series from Grand Forks in a snappy game Saturday. The score:

| | | | | | | | | | | R | H | E |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Grand Forks | 0 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 3 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 4 | 8 | 1 |
| Crookston | 0 | 0 | 1 | 2 | 3 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 | 8 | 12 | 6 |

Pitchers—Slatte and Martin.

Fargo made it three straight from Superior by shutting out the Bugville Rowdies in Saturday's game. Lagger played second in the place of Cassibone who is suspended. The score:

| | | | | | | | | | | R | H | E |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Superior | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 5 | 3 |
| Fargo | 2 | 0 | 2 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 2 | * | 6 | 4 | 1 |

Pitchers—Morris and Hall; Foulkes.

Superior cannot even win exhibition games any more. Yesterday in a binglefest Fargo won with ease. The score:

| | | | | | | | | | | | R | H | E |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Fargo | 0 | 2 | 2 | 1 | 2 | 5 | 1 | 0 | —15 | | 19 | 2 | |
| Superior | 0 | 0 | 0 | 5 | 0 | 6 | 0 | 1 | 1— | | 7 | 13 | 7 |

Pitchers—Traeger and Hall.

President Laxdal has suspended Cassibone indefinitely as a result of the disturbance at Fargo on Friday. He has the cases of Abbott and Hall still under consideration.

The Grand Forks Herald hands Jack Burns a hot one in the following manner: "If Umpire Bray had sent Burns and Hoffmeister to the bench yesterday he would have done the right thing. Hoffmeister threw a bat at him and Burns' well known dirty tactics were in evidence throughout the game. There may be dirtier players in the business than Burns, but they have never struck Grand Forks."

While in the hot-shot business the same paper served the following up to Umpire Bray:

"Umpire Bray has been tried sufficiently long in the Northern league. He has demonstrated the fact that he can not judge the national game satisfactorily, and should be allowed to vacate. Personally, Mr. Bray is a gentleman in every sense of the word, but his umpiring is of the variety that would be designated as very punk. Players have kicked incessantly on his work, but it was not until yesterday that spectators were given an example of how bad umpiring could be done. The decisions favored one team probably as much as the other, but partisans are bound to claim that their respective teams got the worst of it, and their claims would have weight in most instances."

Davis, the St. Paul pitcher that deliberately "threw" several games for Duluth at the beginning of the season simply because he did not want to play in the Northern league, has been traded to Milwaukee for Pitcher Altrock.

Just to show what sort of a person Davis is, he recently accepted terms to return to the Northern League and pitch for Fargo but hearing of an opportunity to get on with Milwaukee he notified the Fargo management that he had met with a serious injury and could not report.

Grand Forks has signed a new pitcher named Kuplitz who was recently with the Springfield team of the Three-I league.

Superior seems to have signed a "find" in Perry who has succeeded Lewis behind the bat.

Fargo will try-out an amateur pitcher named Kelly who has been twirling good ball for York, N. D.

Jack Page, familiar to all the old-time Duluth fans, is playing outfield for Grand Forks.

THE STAGE

The intricate figures to be done in the big march of the chorus girls in the Northwestern Opera company's production of "The Mascot," at the Lyceum tonight, has been arranged by Dan Young, who knows more about these stage pictures than can readily be estimated, and is called the "world's greatest marching producer," to distinguish him from Sousa.

The Northwestern puts on "The Mascot" with every bit of embellishment it can possibly adorn it with. Miss Hayden will have a new song, with light effects, chorus and pretty costume, and the Amazonian march is to be a gorgeous spectacle.

The management looks forward to a successful and elegant revival of the good old popular Masco, which has made the country writhe in the throes of intense laughter and soar into pleasurable realms of entertainment at the music and comedy.

There will be a specal bargain matinee Wednesday.

The reproduction of the beautiful play "The Charity Ball," which is to be given Wednesday evening at the Metropolitan theater, promises to repeat the great success made on its first presentation at the Lyceum. The play will be given with the same magnificent settings and furnishings, which caused a ripple of surprise to the large audiences which witnessed the two performances last week. Both press and public were unanimous in claiming "The Charity Ball" one of the best attractions given in thec ity during the past season, and the Metropolitan theater should be packed to the doors Wednesday night. The boxes are all taken by well known society people. "The Charity Ball" appeals to all classes of theatergoers, as it is full of the brightest and cleverest comedy, and then the great dramatic climaxes and pathos appeal to all. The flag scene in the last act between Alex. Robinson and Bess Van Buren is one of the prettiest bits of comedy ever played, and at the performances last week aroused much enthusiasm from the large audiences. The sale of seats will open tomorrow morning at the Metropolitan theater.

Patrick Team Loses Another Game In Wholesale League Series.

Freimuth Nine Wins Fifty Dollar Game From Big Duluth.

WHOLESALE LEAGUE.

| Gowan-Peyton-Twohy | 1 | 1 | 500 |
| F. A. Patrick | 2 | 3 | 400 |
| Leithhead Drug Co. | 0 | 3 | 000 |

The above is the standing in the race for the pennant in the wholesalers' league. Two good games were played Saturday afternoon, as a result of which the Patrick team and the druggists are now hopelessly out of the race.

The Patrick team, which for a time headed the league, played its last game in the league series yesterday, going down to defeat before the Marshall-Wells nine by the score of 12 to 10.

The druggists made a game effort to win their first victory yesterday; and for nine innings held the Stone-Ordean-Wells nine, but in the tenth weakened and allowed the grocers to score four runs, winning the game. The score by innings is as follows:

| | | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Stone-Ordean-Wells | 2 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 2 | 1 | 2 | 4 | —11 | |

The Freimuth ball-tossers won their game against the Big Duluth nine and incidentally a purse of $50 by clean hits in the first and second innings yesterday afternoon in Superior. Rooters of both teams were out in force and they witnessed a fast exhibition of the national game.

In the sixth innings the Big Duluth men gave their opponents a scare by tallying four runs and tieing the score, but the winners responded with two in their half of the innings and added another in the seventh. Lowe pitched a pretty game for the winners, allowing but six hits. The line-up and score by innings is as follows:

| Freimuths. | | Big Duluth. |
|---|---|---|
| Lowe | pitcher | Lavelle |
| Wageman | catcher | Campbell |
| Lundgren | first base | Dennis |
| Carroll | second base | Palmer |
| Cox | third base | Gerard |

| Big Duluths | 0 | 0 | 2 | 0 | 0 | 4 | 0 | 0 | 0— | 6 | 6 | 8 |

Two interesting contests in the Wolvin league were pulled off Saturday afternoon at the fair grounds in the presence of about 300 enthusiasts. The Oliver Mining company's team defeated the Duluth & Iron Range nine by the overwhelming score of 31 to 1, and the Pittsburg Steamship men snatched a victory from the employes of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad by the score of 19 to 17 in seven innings. The standing of the league is as follows:

| | W. | L. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Oliver Mining Co. | 3 | 0 | 1000 |
| Duluth & Iron Range | 2 | 1 | 666 |
| Pittsburg Steamship Co. | 1 | 2 | 333 |
| Duluth, Missabe & Northern | 0 | 3 | 000 |

The Millers won an easy victory over the Duluth Heights team yesterday afternoon on the Thirty-second avenue grounds. McDougal pitched a magnificent game for the winners, shutting out the Duluth Heights men and striking out eleven of them. He also managed to make a circuit of the bases on a long drive to deep left field. Dennis for the Heights team pitched a better game than the condition of the score would lead to believe. The score by innings was as follows:

| | | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Millers | 0 | 0 | 3 | 0 | 2 | 1 | 4 | 1 | x | —16 | |

The Millers are anxious to meet the winners of yesterday's game in Superior, and Manager Sattler of the Freimuth team signifies his willingness to play for $50, or any other amount which would be agreeable to Manager Scheuler's nine. A game will probably be arranged for the latter part of the month.

EMPLOYES TO PICNIC

Iron Range Annual Outing at Lakeview Park, Two Harbors.

The employes of the Duluth & Iron Range road will hold their annual picnic at Lakeview park, Two Harbors, July 25, and plans are now under way for the erection of a big dancing pavilion and other accessory buildings in connection with the gladsome event. The dance hall is to be a permanent structure, costing about $1000, and the village of Two Harbors will assist in defraying the expense of building. The idea is to make Lakeview park the scene of the annual rendezvous of the railroad employes and their families instead of Lester park, in this city, where some of the picnic have been held in the past.

The railroad men have formed a regular organization for carrying out their arrangements for the annual outing, the chairmen being as follows:

Executive, Joseph Beck; finance, V. C. Komeczkey; transportation, P. J. Welch; arrangements, D. C. Henton.

On occasion of the annual picnic all work in the different departments of the road is suspended and special trains are even run to assemble some of the employes and their families at the place of the picnic.

BOAT CLUB OPENING.

Handsome Home Formally Opened With a Reception.

The formal opening of the new club house of the Duluth Boat club took place Saturday evening, the event being attended by about three hundred people. The new club houe was charmingly decorated with bunting, flags, lanterns, and oars, the colors of the club, blue and white, predominating.

The exterior decorations consisted of Chinese lanterns which did their duty well until extinguished by the rain. The latter, however, did not effect the galty inside the handsome new structure, where dancing was enjoyed by the club members and their friends until a late hour.

WOMAN WORKS IN IDAHO MINE

Was Disguised and All Supposed Her to Be a Man.

Wardner, Idaho, June 29.—After having worked as a miner in one of the shafts here for nearly three years, every one supposing her to be a man, Mrs. Helen Gooding, once a resident of a small town in England, has been found out and robbed of her employment.

By a fall of ore one of the miners, Henry Gooding, he called himself, was badly hurt. When taken to the hospital and cared for by the surgeons it was found that the patient was in reality a woman—Mrs Helen Gooding.

How she had managed to hide her sex during all the time she had been working in the mines is a matter of conjecture. She applied for work when she first arrived here, saying she was an English miner and knew the work thoroughly.

She was dressed in men's clothing and wore her hair cut short, but as she looked delicate she was at first rejected. Later she secured employment, and had worked regularly until she was injured.

According to the surgeons at the hospital, the woman was greatly distressed when she found that her secret was out, and that she would not be allowed to resume her work in the mine. She had become to all outward appearances a man, she said, because it was easier to make a living that way.

Her husband, she added, was, before his death, an English miner, and she had learned more or less of the business from him. After his death, she had come to this country, expecting to reside with a brother in Eastern Idaho, but on reaching the town where he once lived she found that he, too, was dead.

Then it was that she determined to don men's clothing and become a miner.

RECORDS GOING

Removal to Cass Lake Office to Be Made This Week.

Experienced Force Will Open New Office—Duluth Not Hurt.

Wednesday, July 1, is the date set for the opening of the new United States land office in Cass Lake and tomorrow all the books, affidavits of contests, contest dockets, plans of townships and all records pertaining to the land that has been ordered transferred from the Duluth to the Cass Lake district will be forwarded to Cass Lake. Roy E. Hilton, who for the past two years has been employed as clerk in the local office, will go to Cass Lake to take a similar position, and Murray Humes, of the St. Cloud land office, will hold the position of chief clerk. The new officials will, therefore, have an experienced office force with which to open the new office.

All applications which have been made for stone and timber claims on the land which has been transferred, during the past three months, have been ssupended, and the applicants will proceed at the Cass Lake office with the steps necessary to secure their patents.

All homesteaders who have filed for land in the district affected by the transfer will go to the Cass Lake office for their patents when they desire to prove up.

The district which is transferred to the new office, while seemingly of considerable extent, is in reality not very valuable from a land office point of view. It lies in Itasca county, but in the southwestern part, which is the oldest and most thicly settled. The northern part of the county, which remains within the limits of the Duluth district, is but thinly settled, and contains some of the finest agricultural lands in the state. It is from this vicinity that the majority of the homestead entries are received at the local office, and it was this section that was given back to the Duluth district by the second order of the commissioner at Washington.

The local officials say that the loss of the district which is transferred to Cass Lake will not greatly affect the business of the local office, and that it will still remain among the offices of the first class. The yearly report, which is now being prepared, is expected to show such a large volume of business in excess of that required for an office of the first grade that the loss of business resuling from the transfer will still leave the local office with a large margin above the requirements of the first grade office.

Mrs. Callahan Speaks.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Lakeside Presbyterian church was enlivened last evening by a visit from Mrs. John Callahan, of the Star of Hope Mission. The topic for discussion was "City Missions." Mrs. Callahan is a fluent speaker and her fifteen minutes' talk was both pathetic and interesting. The work of the mission has been wonderfully successful and numerous instances were mentioned of wrecked homes being reformed through the influences of the gospel. Every Fourth of July is devoted exclusively to the prisoners in the jail.

"At such a time," said Mrs. Callahan, "liberty is brought home more forcibly to the hearts of the prisoners, and they long for freedom. It is but little we can do, but with God's help we endeavor to point the way to freedom through Christ. In this work they will be assisted by one who was converted in the jail, and who has become an ardent worker of the mission."

UNWARRANTED MEDDLING.

There is cause for regret that the president has decided to send the Jewish petition to the czar of Russia. It is said there are precedents for such action. Granted that this is true, it affords no excuse whatever for the United States meddling with the private affairs of another and friendly country at this time. It is well known that the United States has no real ground on which it can interfere with in domestic affairs of Russia. It is probable that the Russian foreign office, already advised of the nature of the petition, will politely return it to the United States embassy without opening it. If this is done it will undoubtedly end the matter, as the president knows that he is meddling where he has no business to. If Russia tomorrow were to send a petition of similar import relative to the lynchings in Delaware and Illinois within the past few weeks the United States would pursue exactly the same course with it, holding it an invasion of her right as a sovereign nation to manage her own internal affairs.

The greatest regret over the decision to send the petition grows out of the inevitable strained relations to which it will conduce. For many years Russia has cultivated the United States. In the civil war time the secret archives of the United States will show that Russia was the friend of the Union in a most substantial way. Since then she has repeatedly shown her desire to cultivate us, but at the same time to pursue her own way in the management of her own affairs. Present feeling between the countries is not the best. The first irritation grows out of our action about two years ago in levying a contravailing duty upon imports of Russian sugar. The action was taken by the secretary of the treasury and has since been supported by the supreme court of the United States. Although it was legal under our laws and in a measure mandatory, it was harshly criticised at the time as being impolitic.

Events in the far East have contributed to the friction. Russian aggression in Manchuria has been recognized by all nations. Yet she has stoutly maintained that she has no desire or design on the country and expects to carry out her program of withdrawal. In spite of these things, Russia has slowly, yet resistlessly drawn Manchuria into her toils, and has carried out thus far her program of aggression. Every day has seen the feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction on the part of the administration grow. If this was not enough, the influence of Russia in preventing the United States from securing her open-port treaties, as desired from China, has been added to occasion friction. Here again Russia has disavowed any influence in connection with the treaties, but it is well understood that she forbids China to sign.

It may be said that the unfortunate Russian conditions are the outgrowth of unfavorable combinations of circumstances rather than of design by either country. This being the case, it is considered the more unfortunate that something should occur at this time to still further disturb a disquieting situation. Russia is too good a friend of the United States to take any chances of further ill feeling, let alone a quarrel. The president was strongly advised not to forward this petition, but Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate for a second term and could not resist the pressure brought upon him. To forward this petition means many votes and he realizes it.

ANOTHER FIGHT IN PROSPECT.

Mention was made in these columns a few days ago of the fact that Gen. Corbin had succeeded in winning a high position on the general staff of the army in spite of the opposition of high-minded men who realized his inefficiency for the position. While Gen. Corbin won in the preliminary skirmish, another battle is to be fought in which the stake is the control of the general staff, which is about to be organized. Those who know Gen. Young, who is to be the chief of staff, admit that he lacks the aggressive and progressive element necessary in the man who is to dominate the staff. Again it will be a fight between Carter and Corbin. Each is a man of exceptional ability. Secretary Root places great confidence in Carter. They are both good politicians, but, while Corbin possesses the ability to make friends rapidly, Carter is credited with being a better manager and tactician. The struggle between the two will be interesting to watch. In the meantime another point has come up to embarrass Gen. Corbin. It is declared that when he goes on to the general staff he must give up his present influential post as adjutant general of the army. Officers are to be detailed to duty on the general staff for a period of years and then are to return to the corps from which they were taken. Gen. Corbin's friends claim that his case is an exception to the rule and that he will retain both offices. They say his position is similar to that of the chief artillery officer, who is designated in the law as a member of the general staff. This is a matter for the legal officer of the department to settle, but one thing is certain and that is that Corbin will not give up the position of adjutant general unless he is required to do so.

Although things at the war department have been quiet for the past two months, so far as surface indications go, in reality a fierce struggle has been in progress. In bitterness the fight has exceeded those personal quarrels of Spanish war days, when the followers of Gen. Miles and Gen. Corbin were at swords' points. Gen. Corbin has been the central figure of the contentions of the past few weeks, and he appears to have come out as successfully as he did in the days of 1898.

King George of Greece will visit King Edward at London next month, but no invitation has been extended to King Peter of Servia.

PROTESTS AGAINST BONAPARTE.

Many of the friends and followers of the late President McKinley resent the appointment of Charles J. Bonaparte, of Baltimore, as special counsel in the prosecution of the postal frauds and have lodged vigorous protests with President Roosevelt asking him to withdraw the appointment. Bonaparte was one of three men who opposed the conferring of a Harvard degree on the late president.

The old McKinley men say that the appointment is particularly objectionable, as it comes so soon after the fling of Postmaster General Payne to the effect that the postal scandals had their origin in the administration of President McKinley. The controversy over bestowing the degree of LL.D. upon President McKinley by Harvard university has been well-nigh forgotten now, but it raged vigorously at the time. Several prominent graduates wrote letters objecting to a degree of doctor of laws for Mr. McKinley, and a small minority of the university alumni joined with them, among these being Mr. Bonaparte. The newspapers were full of the discussion pro and con, but the board of overseers took final action on the matter at a meeting held May 8, 1901. The vote by which the board of overseers concurred with the president and fellows of the university to bestow the title stood 20 to 3. The three who opposed such action were Professor Charles Eliot Norton, of Cambridge; Charles J. Bonaparte, of Baltimore, and Moorfield Storey, of Boston, all well-known anti-imperialists.

The anti-imperialists, who were resisting President McKinley's policy vigorously at that time, had much to do with the campaign against giving the degree, but a principle as to the wisdom of bestowing degrees in such fashion was also involved to some extent. There were certain prominent anti-imperialists on the board of overseers who voted in favor of the degree, among them being Charles Francis Adams and Winslow Warren, both of Boston. William Everett of Quincy, formerly in the house of representatives, was the only member of the board of overseers present and refusing to vote. Mr. Roosevelt, then vice president; Robert Bacon, for a time connected with the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan, and the late John Fiske, were among the absent members of the board. As a matter of fact, the degree was never conferred upon President McKinley. The university authorities hold that the recipient of honorary degrees must appear in person to receive them. President McKinley had returned from his California trip with Mrs. McKinley, who was still very ill, and he did not wish to leave her long enough to make the necessary trip to New England to attend the commencement exercises at Cambridge.

Such antagonism as this to Mr. Bonaparte is unseemly and entirely uncalled for. The men undoubtedly voted from their honest convictions as was their right. It is certainly no reason why they should not be appointed to any position that they can fill satisfactorily.

DECLINE OF GRAIN EXPORTS.

The people of the staid old city of Boston are worried—worried because there is a great falling off in the export trade from that port, and they are anxious to remedy the matter. So serious has the matter become that a committee of the chamber of commerce has been appointed to investigate the cause of present conditions and report. In the history of Boston's commercial life there has not been another such period of depression as since the middle of 1901, until at the present exports are at positively low ebb. Last week, for example, the Cunarder Ultonia, Leyland liner Bohemian and Warren liner Sachem, for Liverpool, the Philadelphian for London, and the Caledonian for Manchester, carried not a bushel of grain, the mainstay of ocean freights, neither did they have a head of cattle on board, owing to the embargo. Other commodities, too, are in scant quantity, so that the voyages are made at an actual loss. Things have come to such a pass that the steamship companies, as self-protection, have begun to withdraw from the Boston service liners which long have been associated with that port's traffic, and there is no doubt that others likewise would be withdrawn were it not for the summer passenger service, which in a measure makes up for the loss in freight compensation.

The loss of trade at Boston since August, 1901, is plainly shown by figures. Since the first of January, this year, the grain exports have been, to date: Wheat, 4,163,-043 bushels; corn, 4,971,713 bushels; oats, 37,910 bushels. Last year in a corresponding period the grain exports were about the same. But in the first six months of 1901 the figures read: Wheat, 10,689,741; bushels; corn, 8,177,-019; oats, 3,143,344 bushels, a difference of 13,000,000 bushels, in round numbers. Next to grain as the chief source of income of the steamship lines come cattle shipments, and the conditions at Boston hardly need repeating. Not a single head has been exported since Nov. 30, of last year, when the Sylvania carried 664. Figuring that the same number would have been taken the last six months as during the period from Jan. 1 to June 1 last year, and there has been a loss to the ship owner of the profits of 48,646 head; basing it on the figures of 1901, and the loss has been on 64,779 head. Then, in no fixed order, come the other commodities—cotton, hay, apples, beef, lard, butter, leather, etc. In some cases there has been a gain over last year, in some a loss, but in comparison with 1901 few of them show up weil, with the exception of hay, which in 1902 had its banner year.

It does not require a great knowledge of the situation to account in great measure for the falling-off in grain. The American market is so strong that as far as exports go it is almost prohibitive. The people abroad are not willing to pay such a high price as the Americans ask. They will not have to, so long as they can get Argentine corn, and grain from other parts of the world for less money. As an example of what Americans demand and what Europeans expect: A Boston grain merchant only a few days ago received from a European buyer an order contingent upon figures which would no more than bring the grain by rail to the seaboard, let alone paying the cost of elevating it aboard ship and paying the freight rates across the Atlantic. While perhaps the high prices realized for home products may result disastrously for the shipper, the condition is a good one for the American farmer. That home consumption is sufficient to keep prices higher than in the foreign markets is evidence of this country's prosperity and growth.

On June 24, the Des Moines, Ia., Capital issued a semi-centennial edition of sixty pages, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the incorporation of the city of Des Moines. This jubilee editon is highly creditable to the Capital and to Des Moines, and is an example of the enterprise which distinguishes both.

Permission has been secured for the construction of the last link of trolley line necessary for a complete electric road between New York and Boston. It will furnish an interesting ride.

The Massachusetts legislature has passed a law designed to suppress the use of premium trading stamps.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Oh, I am the cook and the clerk so bold,
"And the wielder of the broom.
"I run the cafe until I'm daffy
"And I'm the crew of the dining-room."
—Paraphrase by L. J. E.

With ability, agility and versatility, Manager L. J. Emery has run the Spalding hotel successfully, though perhaps not with ease.

Dexterity has cut some figure, also.

This dexterity cut a great deal of figure this morning about 5 o'clock.

Because it was circus day the employes of the hotel laundry decided to close the department, and go out and get a few red lemonades and peanuts and see the elephant.

Manager Emery was a boy once himself and tried to give the said employes a fat ancient argument, in the attempt to keep them at work.

He assured the said launderers and laundresses that there would be other years and other circuses just as good, and it wouldn't be Monday next time, and besides the Fourth of July is Saturday and they will want to get off that day, too.

The employes in the laundry come from countries where holidays are as plenty as blue Mondays in this country.

Manager Emery was rudely awakened from a slumber, in which a dream had come to him that a revelation had been made to him showing a beautiful feather couch, with frapped pints and strawberry sponge pudding, like mother used to make, good old milk toast and a few other delicacies, all segregated from the other part of heaven and set aside for tired hotel managers. He was dreaming that he was just sinking into the feathers, when he discovered a can of dynamite had been negligently left about five inches below the surface of the feathers, and he struck it.

He dimly comprehended that the dynamite had been used to blow out a corner of the bad place to make room for this little paradise.

He opened his eyes expecting to find himself floating near the weather bureau station at the top of the bluff, but found that his revelation was the only bluff in sight, and a bell boy told him the laundry was on a strike.

"That laundry shall not close today," shouted the valiant manager, dashing from his lair.

The chorus from the laundry shouted something that sounded like what he dashed from only the "aa" and "I" were transposed.

It then behooved the genial manager to make a talk, which he did with great force and eloquence, but the laundry employes couldn't understand English. They thought he was calling them names. and began to retaliate in the Swedish and Finnish language. Manager Emery refusing to state upon oath which.

That settled the laundry crew.

Manager Emery stripped to the shirt sleeves, and started turning wringers, impressed a few other employes, and had Monday's washing in the drying room at 9 o'clock.

Within the past four weeks Mr. Emery has held every position in the hotel, excepting being waiter. He has purchased some burned cork, and will black up and be ready to jump in there if a strike comes in that quarter.

P. S.—He has not yet been a member of the scrub crew, but is in daily fear of it.

The strike of the laundry folks will be remedied by tonight and a new force will be on by that time.

There was a quiet wedding in Duluth yesterday that none seems to have been aware of, or at least none is able to tell about it.

Miss Jennie Van Praag, of Merriam Park, came to Duluth and registered at the Hotel McKay Saturday morning. She was alone, and unmarried.

Yesterday a broad-shouldered, athletic young man named M. Barron from Janesville, Wis., came along and registered at the same hotel.

They left the house for several hours, and when they returned she was heavily armed, and closely veiled. She was a bride of a few minutes or hours.

Where the marriage was performed was not told, and the couple will leave for a wedding trip before going to Janesville, where they will reside, and where Mr. Barron is a popular and prominent young business man.

Miss Van Praag is the daughter of Alex Van Praag, of St. Paul, who is an old-time cigar traveling salesman, and is well known here.

The wedding was not in the form of an elopement, but merely a quiet affair.

"We are doing a lot of grading and filling and straightening of track," said Sam Brooks, who is in charge of the Brooks-Scanlon railroad operation, who was in town last evening. "The roadbed is being fixed up considerably, and work will continue on these improvements all summer. By fall the mileage of the road which is forty-five miles, will be in excellent shape, and we will be ready for extensions that will be made then.

"The rate matter which was up before the warehouse and railroad commission some weeks ago has not been decided as yet. It is still before the commission, with all the evidence. The petition for a reduction of rates was made in regard to cedar posts and products, up on which it was claimed the rates were exorbitant."

A Sturdy Hero.

New York Herald: One of the novelists, referring to his hero, says:

His countenance fell.
His voice broke.
His heart sank.
His hair rose.
His eyes blazed.
His words burned.
His blood froze.

It appears, however, that he was able to pull himself together and marry the girl in the last chapter.

IT ALL DEPENDS.

Black hair, you know, is charming,
But many, too, are fond
(And with the best of reasons)
Of any shade of blonde.

Some men prefer the sorrel,
While some would tack a town,
Roh banks or else do a murder
For love of glorious brown.

Still others are quite partial
To Titian locks—plain red—
And many fervent fancies
Upon that hue are fed.

Some others like the blue-black—
The weird Svengali kind
That strikes with force so potent
Upon the human mind.

Yet any hue, believe me,
Can set the brain awhirl;
It isn't a case of color;
It's all up to the girl.

The Minister's Rebuke.

Kansas City Journal:—W. E. Burkhardt du Bois, the author of "Souls of Black Folk," was educated at Harvard and Berlin, and has traveled much. At present M. du Bois is a member of the faculty of Atlanta university.

"I am quite different from my own people as the day is from night," he said the other day, "are the Scots, I cherish a story I once heard in Scotland —a story that is, I think, typical of a certain portion of the people.

"This story concerns a minister who caught a member of his congregation sleeping, and rebuked him from the pulpit. Awake, Saunders," he said. 'Man, it's a disgrace to sleep in the kirk.'

"Saunders was much hurt. He spoke up and said:

"'Look to yer ain pew, an' may hap ye'll find ithers sleepin' here besides myself.'

"The minister looked, and there was his wife slumbering soundly. He awakened her, and he told Saunders that if she fell asleep again, he might call attention to her by holding up his hand. Then he proceeded with his sermon.

"Some week went by, and one Sunday Saunders, sure enough, put his hand up. The wife was asleep again. The minister thundered out her name, bade her rise to her feet, and said to her, before the whole congregation:

"'Mrs. Macgregor, anybody kens that when I got ye for a wife I got no beauty; yer friends ken I got no siller; now, if I dinna get God's grace, I shall have a puir bargain indeed.'"

Make Your Choice, Ladies.

Kansas City Journal: Here is the advertisement of an Atchison store which has "white goods" for sale. Its personal impudence is excused, perhaps, by the originality of the idea: "One of these nights a mouse will gnaw a match on your pantry shelf, dear sister, and the fire will spread till it reaches your room, and you escape with your life, clad only in your night garments. Such a spectacular opportunity to create a sensation doesn't occur oftener than once in a lifetime, and how will you meet it? Dear sister, will your night clothes be such that the firemen will want to plunge into the flames and die? Or will you look like the pictures on the billboards?"

AN EASY MARK

By William H. Osborne.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The train was rapidly approaching New York city, at the rate of a mile a minute. Nevertheless it was still many miles away. The benevolent old gentleman who occupied a seat half way down the aisle, for some purpose or other, suddenly opened his window. As he did so the gust of wind blew his silk skull cap directly into the lap of the passenger behind.

The passenger behind was a well-dressed young man. The benevolent old gentleman had kept his eye upon him for some time. The well-dressed young man now leaned forward and restored the cap to its owner. The elder man was profuse in his thanks, too much so, perhaps. The younger man was also somewhat affable.

It is little incidents like these that sometimes make for valuable acquaintance. At any rate the elder man engaged the younger in an interesting conversation. He soon discovered that the young man was a countryman—one of the more prosperous kind, it was apparent—and that this was his first visit to the great metropolis. At this juncture the elder man warmed up and changed his seat in front for one by the side of his new found acquaintance.

"My name," he confided to the youngster, "is Butler. You've heard of Senator Jimmy Butler." The young man had.

"Well," went on the other, "I'm his cousin—his first cousin on my mother's side."

The young man indicated politely that his name was Mahlan Burgess, Jr., son of old Mahlon Burgess, of Fur Hill. He and the old man plunged into an absorbing conversation with New York as the main topic, and all went well. The old man did most of the talking and the younger listened with avidity. The other warned him especially against all bunco games, and told him especially to beware of strangers, no matter how fairspoken they might be. The young man thanked him.

The conversation turned to the subject of horse racing. This was a favorite topic, it seemed, with the young man. He was full of anecdote relating to the country meets in his district of the state and had many tales to tell of the trickery of owners and of jockeys. He related with great zest a peculiarly nefarious scheme which had been instigated by the owner of a favorite and by which he himself had profited to some extent. The old man regarded him with admiration.

"You're deep, devlish deep, my dear young man," he said. "I begin to think that you are not half so good as you look."

One thing led to another, and finally the old gentleman was so convulsed at some of the young man's stories that he was forced to draw forth a handkerchief and wipe his perspiring brow. As he did so he pulled out a roll of bills—a very fat one. The young man took quick note of it, and concluded rightly that his good friend was one of the right kind. The old man seized his opportunity.

"Now, Mr. Burgess, Jr.," he began, "talking about tricks of the trade and get-rich-quick schemes. Here's a little roll I made just a day or two ago. It's only about a thousand dollars or so, but I'm in the way to make much more. There's a friend of mine—Skillinger, his name is—comes from your part of the country, too, by the way. Perhaps you know him" The young man shook his head.

"Well," went on Mr. Butler, lowering his voice, "this man is employed by the Western Union, and he gets the reports of all the races direct from the track as they come in, and he holds 'em for a few minutes before they get to the pool-rooms—and then he has some friend put up money on the horse who won. That's what they call wire tapping, understand. It ain't any worse than doping a horse, or throwing a race for coin, and it's absolutely safe. Here in New York there's piles of get-rich-quick schemes, and most of 'em are risky, but this is safe. Well, it was a long time before my friend could induce me to put up a bit on this wire tapping scheme, but I did it, and see what I made out of $50. Here's near a good $200, and I'm goin' down now to put up this and some more."

At the end of a quarter of an hour, by which time the train had pulled into the Grand Central, old Mr. Butler had won young Mr. Burgess over to the scheme. Once in New York they discovered that there was a race in progress. Butler did some extensive telephoning and finally caught his friend Skillinger on the wire. Skillinger said he could meet them down town. Down town they went.

Skillinger looked young Mr. Burgess over before he would consent to talk business. He had to be particular, he said. Finally he made up his mind that Burgess was all right.

Burgess said he'd put a hundred up at any poolroom they would name. Skillinger said that was all right, but that the next race was a corker and a thousand would do better. Burgess thought about it for awhile. Finally he agreed. Skillinger went back to where he came from—the telegraph office presumably, and Burgess and the old gentleman went around to what the old gentleman said was a pool-room. He was right to some extent, as there was a pool table in the place, but nothing else. However, from within a door marked private the voice of a man was heard calling off the winners.

Finally the telephone bell rang, and Skillinger asked for Mr. Burgess. Burgess responded and was told to bet on Peacock II, who had just come in a neck ahead under heavy odds—five to one. He had just three minutes in which to place his bet. He knocked at the door marked private, but the man wouldn't let him in. He said, however, that Mr. Butler might come in, as he was known or at least had been seen there before. Burgess pulled out a thousand dollar bill.

"Now, I'll tell you," he said to Butler. "I'm going a bit slow on this thing. Of course I know its all right, and that I'm goin' to win, but I'd rather put up $500 at the first. Next time I can plunge a bit. You've got some change. You take this bill, and give me $500—and wait a bit," he cried, drawing out another thousand dollar bill, "suppose you change this for me too—I guess you've got the change, haven't you?" Butler nodded, and gave the young man $1500 in smaller bills and put in his pocket the two $1000 bills and then started for the door to place the bet. He knocked and was admitted by the man within.

"Five to one," exclaimed the young man to himself, "that's a blamed good thing. It's a good way to get good money, all right, all right."

He was all alone in the place. He kept his eye upon the inside door. He waited for some time—perhaps five minutes. Then he stepped gently to the door and turned the knob. It yielded and he opened the door without difficulty. The room inside was very small, and very empty—there was no one in it.

The young man shut it carefully and retraced his steps. Then as carefully he stepped outdoors, looked up and down the street and walked away.

His peaceful conduct was very strange for a man who had just been swindled out of some $500 dollars by one of the cleverest games worked on the city streets. Another man would have torn his hair, but not this young man. He walked away, and perhaps is walking yet. The next day an elderly gentleman who gave his name as Butler was hauled before a city magistrate for attempting to pass a counterfeit $1000 bill. Two of them were found on his person. He explained the circumstances, leaving out the part that related to the wire tapping scheme—he said that he had made change for a young man whose name was Burgess, Jr.

"All gammon," said the magistrate, politely. I'll hold you in default of $10,000 bail." And he has held him ever since.

A Summer Siren.

We met beside the ocean,
In bathing suits attired;
She smiled on my devotion,
I worshipped—and aspired.
My cup with joy was brimming
When she permitted me
To teach her fancy swimming,
And thanked me graciously.

It did not stop at diving
And sunning on the sand;
I dared to take her driving,
And even squeezed her hand.
I dreamed that in the city
My love I might declare,
And look with scornful pity
On all her suitors there.

But, lo! when I intruded
In her Manhattan set,
I might have been included
With those she'd never met.
The story needs no trimming—
I learned the difference grim
'Twixt Dorothy in swimming,
And Dorry "in the swim."

A Slip of the Machine.

Washington Post: A middle-aged paragrapher and all-round humorist who was in Washington with that outfit of press funny men a while ago has a pretty sizeable grouch coming against some proof-reader or other attached to the newspaper for which he writes. He wrote an entertaining and somewhat mellow letter for his newspaper while in Washington, in which he compared the capital of thirty odd years ago, as he remembered it in his youth, with the Washington of today. In the progress of this comparison he made use of that somewhat frazzled query: "Where are the snows of yesterday?"

The compositor set it up and the proof-reader let it get by him in this form: "Where are the sows of yesterday?"

A Negro Higher Critic.

Judge: Some years ago the Ohio river was raging beyond its banks at Louisville. Down at the water's edge the fierce river was pouring in the second and third story windows of the houses near by. People were rowing out in canoes and the suffering was great.

One morning little Susie went down into the kitchen and began to pester the cook to take her to see the flood with some other children of the neighborhood. Mary Jane laid down her iron and, striking an attitude, began:

"Honey, yo' doan' say so; Mars' Nora done sent anudder flood? Whad he done fotch up dat big rainbow in de sky fo'? Humph! Gawd done gone back on He word a'ready?"

Little Susie appeared her by telling her it was not that kind of a flood at all. Mary Jane continued, however:

"Do yo' know, honey, how I looks on dem kind of ole Bible tales, nowhow, 'bout Nora an' Daniel an' Jonah? Well, chile," —then, with a long pause, she leaned forward, impressively shaking her long finger, said—"hit's long fo' my day—an' I dunno whedder ter bleeb it er not."

Hawkins For Governor.

Virginia enterprise: That uDluth Herald states that the name of Senator Hawkins is mentioned as a gubernatorial possibility. The senator would run a mad race on the range if he went after it. But we fail to see him moving, and return to the idea that a mutual agreement between the voters and Bob Dunn will be duly ratified on election day.

FROM THE EAST

More Lumber Buyers Are Appearing In the Local Market.

Prices Continue Firm—Sawing Active With All Mills Running.

Lumber buyers from the East are becoming more frequent visitors in the local lumber market, and the conditions are claimed to be improving over those of a month ago. Several sales have been made of small amounts of the better grades, and others are now pending. The prices show no sign of wavering.

The large sale made a week ago by Alger, Smith & Co., of the 30,000,000 feet of lumber to be cut at Grand Marais, Mich., this season was made on a basis of $25 per thousand, which is regarded as a very good price. Manufacturers report the shingle and lath market quite active, a condition that strikes those mill men doing contract cutting very favorably. The higher cost of operating the mills this season is said to have reduced the profits on the lumber cut to a small figure, and were it not for the good prices brought by the lath and shingles, which go by agreement to the mill men, the season's profit on a plant would not be very large.

Local sawing is continuing with all the mills active. Logs are coming in freely by water now, and there is little if any danger of a shortage from now on until fall. At Nickerson, Minn., the De Long & Chamberlain company, which is having on contract for the Scanlon-Gipson company, of Minneapolis, has logs enough within reach of the saws to keep the plant operative steadily for about two months longer, when a shut-down will be had preparatory to the fall and winter cut. The Scanlon-Gipson company is shipping heavily from Nickerson, but has still a large yardful of lumber at that point.

C. R. Ash has taken over all interest in the Plummer & Ash new mill, at Virginia, and will continue operating the plant on the contract made for sawing about 200,000,000 feet of timber brought from along the line of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road. It is claimed that the contract was made on the basis of $2.25 per thousand feet, which will mean that the mill will have to saw a large part of its contract before paying for itself. The interests connected with the Virginia Lumber company, which now controls all or the major portion of the timber along the line of the new road, are figuring on starting another mill at Pelican lake a little later on.

The rumor that the Hines Lumber company had been negotiating for the purchase of the Nebagamon Lumber company's plant turned out to be a pipe dream of the first water. Mr. Hines' representatives claim that their company never had any such intention, and regret is expressed that the rumor gained any credence. The Hines Lumber company, by the completion of the new road through its Douglas county, Wis., holdings, is now in splendid condition to hustle pilings into market anywhere in the Northwest. The company is making a feature of this proposition, and expects to make deliveries of new piling direct from the woods of almost any length required, in from twenty-four to forty-eight hours, according to the length of haul.

Some uneasiness was expressed by loggers along the line of the Great Northern Pacific roads last week, over the persistence of brushwood fires, due to a continued dry spell of weather. The rain of Saturday and Sunday nights had made the conditions more favorable by quenching all fires.

Reports from Minneapolis indicate that the mills at that point, which a few weeks ago were shut down because of high water, are now shutting down because of low water, the river having fallen considerably within the last week.

A plan which, if it is consumated, will mean much for Northern Minnesota, is that of changing the course of the Clearwater river so that its upper waters will discharge into the Upper Mississippi river, above Bemidji, and increase the amount of flow of the big river, giving a greater water power at the dam at Bemidji. The Clearwater now flows into Red lake, and its waters eventually reach Hudson bay. Surveys are being made at Bemidji for a water power plant and a subsequent paper and pulp mill.

The John Schroeder Lumber company has a large part of its cut at Cross river, on the north shore, already towed across the lake to Ashland. The company will pretty well clean up the logs in the river this season, with the exception of about 8,000,000 feet hung up along one of the creeks.

BRAIN-RACKING MIX-UP

In Relationships Will Be Result of Wedding.

New York, June 29.—A nice mix-up of relationships will happen next Tuesday evening when David Lewis marries his niece, Esther Lewis. B. Lewis, who is her grandfather, is to be a witness of the marriage. He will also witness his own transformation into a father-in-law. Isaac Lewis, the bride's father, will become her brother-in-law.

In the light of future events, however, the case becomes more complicated, for Isaac Lewis would be the grandfather as well as the uncle of the children, and David Lewis would be the grand uncle of his own son or daughter, while his wife would be first cousin to her own child.

THE LAND IS SLOWLY SINKING

Atlantic Coast Cities Will Be Literally Out of Sight.

Washington, June 29.—Powerful erosive forces at work beneath the earth's crust along the coast line from Nova Scotia to Georgia and as far inland as the Alleghenies ultimately will convert that area into a watery waste and the Atlantic will spread its waters where now New York, Boston and other cities stand. A recent joint investigation by the coast and geodetic survey and geological survey have established the rather startling fact that the Atlantic coast line, at an average rate of one foot a century and in some sections where the crust of the earth is of a marshy substance, especially along the New Jersey coast, the land is sinking three feet every hundred years. Moreover, the entire New England and Eastern states up to the Alleghany mountains are steadily subsiding under action of the subterranean forces. Unless the movement ceases the time eventually will come when the entire affected area will be submerged.

J. R. Freeman, consulting member of engineers of the New York board on additional water supply and formerly a member of the Metropolitan water board of Massachusetts, made a report on the proposed Charles river dam at Boston several days ago in which he states that Boston is slowly sinking into the sea and the territory in and about the Hub is apparently subsiding at the rate of one inch in eight years or one foot in each 10 yards. Mr. Freeman's statement, which was submitted to the experts in the coast geodetic survey and geological surveys, was confirmed, and it was ascertained that systematic researches and investigations which had been in progress will show that the entire coast line is declining below sea level at the ratio given by Mr. Freeman. Similar investigations have been pursued in inland waters and downward tendency of the earth's surface has been plainly established by measurements and researches along Chesapeake and Delaware bays, the Delaware, Hudson, Potomac and Susquehanna rivers and other waterways and inlets. The evidences based upon scientific investigation are confined by sanglhe changes in coast and river lines as well as by tidal variations.

BANKS ARE GROWING.

Statement Issued By Controller of the Currency.

Washington, June 29.—The controller of the currency gave out a statement Saturday showing the condition of all the national banks of the United States at the close of business on June 9 last. On that date the number of banks was 4939, as against 4535 on July 16 of last year. The total resources on June 9 were $6,-286,353,198, a gain of $278,130,950 since July 16, 1902, and the aggregate capital stock $743,566,048, a gain of $11,515,494. The other principal items for June 9 with the increase since July 16 of last year are as follows:

Loans and discounts, $3,415,045,751, increase, $193,186,119; surplus and other profits, $842,183,837, increase, $59,896,091; circulation, $329,263,109; increase, $40,-921,510; individual deposits, $3,290,993,509, increase, $162,112,737; United States government deposits, $139,885,371, increase, $23,136,357.

IN BREATHITT COUNTY

Party of Men Settle Dispute With Revolvers.

Jackson, Ky., June 29.—In a feud fight, near Daisy Hill, Breathitt county, Hiram Barnett was killed and John Henry Hecker and Joseph Hecker were seriously injured. The men with Sam and Silas Barnett met at the home of Miss Leila Burns, niece of Burns Fitzpatrick, who was the only juror against the conviction of Curtis Jett. While discussing the course of Juror Fitzpatrick, John Henry Hecker, the friend of Miss Burns, resented what was said, and all soon began shooting. There have been no arrests and no one can tell who fired the shots taking effect.

JULY DIVIDENDS

Will Be Substantially Larger Than Year Ago.

New York, June 29.—The July dividend disbursements at this center will be substantially larger than those at this time a year ago, when the total for leading railroad, industrial and banking corporations was calculated at $125,000,000. But, apparently, they will not be greatly larger than the total disbursements in January of this year, which were at that time placed at about $132,000,000. Taking the detailed compilations on the two previous occasions and making allowance for changes in the rate of dividend or in the amount of securities on which dividend or interest are paid, the total of disbursements for the class of companies included in the previous calculations may be estimated with fair accuracy at $137,00,000.

Although there have been hundreds of millions of dollars of new stocks and bonds issued during the past twelve months by industrial corporations, it happens that nearly all of the large bond issues have interest payable in other months than July and consequently any such payments are not reflected at the present time.

Evidence is ample to prove that the most beautiful women in the world are Americans; 90 per cent owe their beauty to the use of Rocky Mountain Tea. S. F. BOYCE.

VAN SANT GROWS

His Strength as a Third Term Candidate Steadily Increasing.

Capt. Randall Loses Job By Being Member of Legislature.

Among those that are discussing the chances of the various individual who have been mentioned as possible candidates for the Republican nomination for governor, the trend of opinion just now appears to be that Governor Van Sant is a much more likely possibility than a good many give him credit for.

In fact, there are lacking men of good understanding and excellent opportunities for sounding sentiment who say that he is at present the man that would be nominated if the convention were to be held tomorrow.

This sounds a little impossible up here, where the greater part of the anti-Van Sant sentiment is located, and it is not pleasant news to those that are hostile toward him.

In the southern part of the state, however, anti-merger sentiment is as strong as ever, and the voters seem to think that the decision of the United States supreme court, endorsing the position that had been taken by the state administration on the merger, practically forces the nomination of Governor Van Sant for a third term.

On the other hand, there is a natural sentiment against a third term, and it is a question whether the support of the governor for renomination or the opposition to a third term will be the stronger.

Van Sant can hardly hope to get many votes from this end of the state, but he will get some, no doubt, and he probably does not hope for much from this, the "enemy's country." Ex-State Auditor Dunn is very likely to land the vote of St. Louis county and most of the nearby counties as well, if he does not get practically the entire Eighth district, of which he is a resident.

Joel P. Heatwole's denial that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor is taken literally—at this time at least. As a matter of fact, as he says himself, there is not a single avowed candidate for governor at this time. Frank Eddy says he is in the hands of his friends, that he has canvassed nearly forty counties to see how he was taking there. Bob Dunn has not said that he would be a candidate, in so many words, but his actions have spoken at least as loudly as any words he could have uttered in this direction. Governor Van Sant has not spoken, either. He will neither say that he is going to be a candidate or that he is not, but he is encouraging pressure along that line, and likes to be urged to run for a third term. Doubtless he will ultimately recognize that the force of circumstances and his modesty and will enter the field.

Other names have been mentioned, but none of them are worthy of serious consideration.

* * *

Capt. John R. Randall, member of the legislature for the Fiftieth district, has run up against a disagreeable feature of his position. Up to a short time ago he was a weigher in the grain inspection department. When his time ran out the railroad and warehouse commission failed to reappoint him, and when he inquired the reason he found that the constitution prohibits members of the legislature from holding other state jobs. He appealed to the attorney general, who upheld the position of the commission.

While his duties as a legislator are over for this term, he is nominally a member of that august body until January, 1905, and as such is disqualified from holding other official positions.

COOK COUNTY TERM OF COURT

Two Indictments For Grand Larceny Returned By Grand Jury.

Judge W. A. Cant has returned from Cook county where he has been holding a term of the district court at Grand Marais.

The grand jury returned two indictments, one against Jim A. Davis, who was charged with grand larceny in the second degree, the information being that he robbed a man in a Grand Marais saloon of a sum of money. This indictment was discharged as faulty and the court decided to sit again July 16, so that Davis will not have to remain in jail a year until the next regular session in that county.

The second indictment was returned against Charles Johnson who was charged with grand larceny in the first degree. Johnson was permitted to plead guilty to petit larceny and was given a sixty-day sentence in the Cook county jail.

Of the six civil cases on, of the important ones that of the North American Iron company against Paulsen & Johnson, of Grand Marais and Fred A. Brown of this city. The action was relative to the division of some Cook county mining property.

The other cases were in regard to tax titles.

NEW TRACK LAID

In the United States During the Past Six Months.

Unrest In Labor World Caused Work to Be Postponed.

Chicago, June 29.—The Railway Age says: Railway building in the United States has not progressed as rapidly during the first six months of 1903 as had been expected. The unrest in the labor world, due to the epidemic of strikes, and the high price of track material have caused the postponement of much important work, and the difficulty of securing rails has continued, making it impossible to lay track as fast as the roadway was completed. The more important lines which were started last year or earlier are being pushed to completion as rapidly as conditions will permit, but other new projects are making slower progress.

The new mileage completed during the first half of 1902 amounted to 2314 miles, and the total for the entire twelve months of that year aggregated 5684 miles. It has been confidently expected that the track laid in 1903 would exceed 6000 miles, but the figures for the first six months do not make it certain that such a result will be attained. Our returns for the six months are not entirely complete, but it is believed that the reports yet to be received will not materially increase the present figures, which show 2221 miles of track laid from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1903, on 175 lines in 58 states and territories. The following table shows the mileage by states:

|---|---|---|
| Alabama | 7 | 48.47 |
| Arizona | 4 | 25.25 |
| Arkansas | 10 | 103.06 |
| California | 4 | 47.50 |
| Colorado | 2 | 2.25 |
| Florida | 4 | 33.87 |
| Georgia | 5 | 61.50 |
| Idaho | 1 | 2.50 |
| Illinois | 3 | 46.35 |
| Indiana | 4 | 9.50 |
| Indian Territory | 8 | 202.51 |
| Iowa | 3 | 117.09 |
| Kansas | 1 | 11.09 |
| Kentucky | 4 | 68.85 |
| Louisiana | 6 | 70.50 |
| Maine | 1 | 2.00 |
| Massachusetts | 1 | 5.01 |
| Michigan | 7 | 66.82 |
| Minnesota | 6 | 45.88 |
| Mississippi | 5 | 16.88 |
| Missouri | 7 | 63.92 |
| Montana | 8 | 33.09 |
| New Mexico | 4 | 132.51 |
| New York | 1 | 2.50 |
| North Carolina | 7 | 78.20 |
| North Dakota | 2 | 18.97 |
| Ohio | 6 | 48.95 |
| Oklahoma | 6 | 240.26 |
| Oregon | 5 | 20.50 |
| Pennsylvania | 10 | 127.58 |
| South Carolina | 3 | 8.15 |
| Tennessee | 3 | 30.14 |
| Texas | 12 | 204.85 |
| Utah | 4 | 108.99 |
| Virginia | 1 | 6.62 |
| Washington | 3 | 64.69 |
| West Virginia | 7 | 70.31 |
| Wisconsin | 1 | 7.00 |
| Total in thirty-eight states and territories | 175 | 2,221.39 |

These figures are exclusive of many private and logging roads built for temporary use, and do not include any of the numerous interurban electric lines that have been built in many states, some of which contempalte doing a light freight as well as passenger business. There are eleven states which have completed no new road, as follows: New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming and Nevada. The Eastern states mentioned will add very little if any new track this year, but in South Dakota, Wyoming and Nevada new lines are under construction, and in Nevada track-laying is just beginning on the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake from Calfentes southwest to Daggett, Cal., nearly 300 miles.

Oklahoma leads all other states and territories with 240 miles to her credit, and Texas is second with 205 miles, which is 31 miles less than the figures of that state for the first six months of 1902. Indian territory stands third with 203 miles, New Mexico fourth with 132 miles, Pennsylvania fifth with 128 miles, Iowa sixth with 117 miles, Utah seventh with 108 miles and Arkansas eighth with 103 miles. These are the only states and territories showing over 100 miles each. The larger portion of the new work is located in the South and Southwest, although there is considerable activity in the Pacific states, where 269 miles of new line have been completed since Jan. 1. Nineteen states west of the Mississippi river show additions aggregating 1495 miles, of which 956 miles have been built in eight Southwestern states, while the ten states south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi have completed 392 miles. The following tabulation shows the distribution of the new mileage according to groups of states:

|---|---|
| New England states | 7.00 |
| Middle States | 130.35 |
| Central Northern states | 177.56 |
| South Atlantic states | 265.53 |
| Gulf & Mississippi Valley states | 200.82 |
| Southwestern states | 956.24 |
| Northwestern states | 214.85 |
| Pacific states | 269.04 |

Among the large systems which have laid track on important extenstions this year are the St. Louis & San Francisco, 206 miles; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, 120 miles; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, 88 miles; Missouri Pacific, 75 miles; Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, including the Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf, 62 miles. The Rock Island, which has many new lines planned, has expanded by absorption rather than by construction and on account of the acquisitions made in the past few months, the construction of much projected mileage will not be necessary.

Although the track laid this year is less than that shown for the first half of 1902, tracklaying is just beginning on several prominent lines, including the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific, the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake and the Mobile, Jackson & Kansas City, all of which pramise to make extensive additions before Jan. 1. The Missouri Pacific and the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient have much grade completed in addition to that on which track has been laid, and will push the work of tracklaying during the last half of the year. In short, the mileage of roadway made ready for the rails exceeds the length of track laid by many hundreds of miles.

SHE HAD A RIDE FOR HER LIFE

Chased For a Mile By Pack of Wild Dogs.

Havre, Mont., June 29.—Chased for more than a mile by a pack of wild dogs, apparently a cross between the common dog and the wolf, Miss Gertie Sullivan, daughter of a sheepman living on Birch creek, nineteen miles from here, escaped only by spending the night in an old corral and picking off the animals now and then with rifle bullets.

Miss Sullivan was riding her pony across the prairie when she saw, some distance away, perhaps twenty animals, which at first glance she took to be coyotes.

As they came nearer, evidently in pursuit of her, the girl saw they were not coyotes, but wild dogs, of which there are several small packs in Northern Montana and just over the Canadian line.

With the brutes hot on her trail, it became a ride for life with Miss Sullivan. She had with her a small rifle, but the animals seemed so savage she dared not stop and give them battle.

As she began to despair of saving her life she sighted the old sheep corral, and toward this she ran like mad, reloading it only when the pack was but a short distance away, snapping and yelling with rage.

To enter with the pony and quickly close the gate behind her was but the work of a moment. As the gate swung into place the leaders of the pack threw themselves against it.

Snapping and snarling with anger, the dogs tore at the poles forming the stockade, but were unable to gain an entrance into the place of refuge. After recovering her composure and finding that she was safe, the girl began shooting at the animals, which retreated when she fired and returned to the attack when the rifle was silent.

Miss Sullivan was found next morning by her father and her brother, who had been seeking her. The dog pack disappeared when the men approached. The girl had killed several of the animals.

BRUTALITY TO CONVICTS.

The Governor of Georgia Orders an Investigation.

Atlanta, Ga., June 29.—Governor Terrell has ordered an investigation of the misdemeanor camps of Georgia, because of the evidence presented to him that these camps are hotbeds of brutality.

The camp to be first investigated is that of Broach brothers in Oglethorpe county. The governor, in his order, charges that illegal acts are committed there, including cruel and inhuman whipping, infliction of punishment upon convicts by persons unauthorized by law, and failure to provide proper food, clothing, tobacco and sleeping quarters as required by law. It is alleged that the convicts have almost been cut to pieces by whips and that they are huddled together at night like brutes.

Edward McCree, a member of the house runs a convict camp, and he has been charged by a grand jury with holding men in servitude.

GETS HIS OWN PRICE

For Cotton After Thirty Years of Waiting.

New Orleans, June 29.—The Brown cotton corner is bringing a great deal of queer cotton to New Orleans. Cotton has become so valuable that the owners of cotton gins are scraping the floors and have made up several bales of scrap cotton. Perhaps the worst bale, however, is one that arrived here today from Georgia. It is of the crop of 1872 and is consequently thirty-one years old. Its owner held out for 16 cents that year, but when the market broke and cotton went down he swore he would never sell it for less than 16 cents. When cotton went up to 14 cents in New Orleans he shipped it here to be ready for the 16 cents he pledged himself to, with orders to his agent to sell whenever that figure was reached. The cotton has been stored for thirty-one years and is thoroughly dried out, having lost fifty pounds in the process of drying. Experts declare the staple to be as good as ever.

SCARE FOR ROOSEVELTS.

Steam Yacht Smashes Bowsprit of the Sylph.

New London, Conn., June 29.—The steam yacht Sylph, which arrived here with Mrs. Roosevelt and family and a few guests to view the Yale-Harvard boat races, had a close call from a serious collision immediately after the varsity eights struggled.

The various yachts and pleasure craft anchored near the Sylph. The revenue cutter Dallas, the excursion steamer Block Island, and Max Fleischmann's big steam yacht Haida, took up positions close to the yacht with the president's family. When Yale and Harvard had crossed the line there was an immediate breaking out of anchors among the fleet. The steamer Block Island was kicking up a heavy swash and the Haida, close behind, also was under way. The Fleischmann yacht, partly swept by the current and partly by the engines, went broadside on toward the Sylph. The Haida crashed into the Sylph's bow and wrecked its bowsprit. The Haida suffered little damage.

Immediately after the collision a boat was lowered from the Haida, and Mr. Fleischmann went aboard the Sylph and personally apologized for the accident. He said the accident was unavoidable and offered to settle the damages, which will amount to about $200. Miss Alice Roosevelt left the yacht and continued on to South Farmington.

WITNESS WANTED.

Another Raid on Rogers Estate Is Proposed.

New York, June 29.—An advertisement in the papers asks for information about "persons knowing of the marriage in 1848 of Jacob S. Rogers and Bertha Yost, also known as Bertie Yost, daughter of George A. Yost and Betty Yost."

The advertiser asks to learn also the "present whereabouts of surviving witness W. W. Davis, family nurse and physician present at the birth of son George in 1849."

The advertisement refers to another claim against the estate of Jacob S. Rogers, the locomotive builder of Paterson, N. J., by whose will the Metropolitan Museum of Art was made the residuary legatee of an estate whose gross value has been estimated at something more than $6,000,000.

After the eccentric millionaire's death several alleged widows bobbed up, but they were never very assertive. This is the first time that anybody has set up that Rogers ever went through a marriage ceremony. So far as any of his friends ever knew, the old gentleman lived and died a bachelor.

AN AWFUL WRECK

Probably One Hundred Passengers Killed on Bilboa Train.

Coaches Plunged Fifty Feet Into the Nejerilla River.

Madrid, June 29.—Fourteen bodies and fifty injured persons have been extricated from the wreck of the Bilboa train, which overturned at Nejerilla river.

According to official information, thirty persons were killed and sixty others seriously injured. Many of the latter will die. Of the 300 passengers on the train, it is stated that only six escaped unhurt. The train, which was composed of two engines and sixteen coaches, was crossing the bridge when the couplings between the engines broke. The second engine left the track and fell, followed by the entire train, into the bed of the river. Fortunately the water was low. The nearest medical attendance was a mile and a half distant, and those passengers least injured aided the others and did all possible until the arrival of relief trains bringing nurses, doctors and soldiers from Bilboa.

The train fell fifty feet from the bridge to the river bed, the coaches piling up in a mass of splintered wreckage. The scene is described as horrifying. Many corpses were carried down the stream, which was actually reddened with blood. It was found impossible to extricate numbers of the injured, who were pinned under the wreckage. A railway guard was arrested in the act of robbing the dead and narrowly escaped lynching.

It is believed that the official figures underestimate the number of killed, some accounts giving the number of the dead as 100. The full extent of the catastrophe will only be known when the wreckage has been cleared away.

Hundreds of lives saved every year by having Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house just when it is needed. Cures croup, heals burns, cuts, wounds of every sort.

REDS SCARED BY A METEOR

Fell on White Earth Reservation With Stream of Fire.

Fosston, Minn., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—There has been much commotion among the Indians on the White Earth reservation, near Beaulieu, fifteen miles south of here, occasioned by the fall of a large meteor, which created consternation in the hearts of the reds and half-breds residing in the community. Three Chippewa Indians were in Fosston several days ago, and with blanched faces told of the stream of fire and hot stone that had fallen during the previous night, and firmly believed that the "evil spirit" had sent a messenger from his abode in the heavens to terrify the natives.

So scared were the Indians that a drive was made out to the point designated, where it was found that a meteor, weighing several tons had fallen near the home of Simon Beaulieu, partially burrying itself in the ground, and the mass of molten rock was still smoking. In falling the meteor had narrowly missed striking a barn filled with horses. When the meteor fell it made a loud noise, and following in its wake was a stream of fire 100 feet in length.

The Indians who saw the fall, which occurred about midnight, became terrified, and there threatened to be a general exodus of the reds in the vicinity, had there not been explanations made by some white people who visited the scene the same day. The meteor is apparently composed of stone, and at last accounts was still smoking. When the mass of unknown substance has cooled sufficiently it will be investigated.

Gill was with the Ishpeming football team when they played in Duluth last fall. The specific offense of which Gill was found guilty was participation in a Cornish wrestling match about a year ago, in which there was a money prize.

CAPITAL IS QUIET

Owing to Departure of the President For Oyster Bay.

Much Entertaining at the White House By Roosevelt.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the summer capital at Oyster Bay, whither the president removed on Saturday, Washington will, for the next two months, de devoid of interest and will settle down to the quietness for which it is proverbial during the "dog days." Of course men of public affairs, senators and members of congress and those seeking political place and preferment, will take in Washington to and from Oyster Bay. With the dinner given to Sir Thomas Lipton, who is again in the United States for the purpose of taking away to merrie England the America cup, at the White House, on Friday evenign, the social entertainments of the president came to an end and the historic residence of the presidents will once more be in the hands of artisans to complete the work already begun in making the White House comfortable for President Roosevelt's large family. Not in a generation has there been so much entertaining done at the White House than President Roosevelt has done since he assumed his high office. President Roosevelt is a delightful host. He is open and outspoken, and likes to have about him the people who were his friends when he was struggling upward in the world of politics. The president does not care particularly for the formal dinners of state, which he is expected to give ever so often to his cabinet, the judiciary and the diplomatic corps. He likes best to entertain a half dozen or a dozen of his friends, who are selected with a scrupulous regard for the proprieties, and with these as his guests, the president is lost in the man, and his dinners and luncheons have really become famous for their perfection of detail and their culinary art. The president enjoys game dinners. He is fond of terrapin, hugely enjoys a blue wing teal, a mallard or a canvas back, and now and then, when he likes to get back into the old life of the plains and the mountains, has a bear steak cooked to a turn. From a friend of the Roosevelt family it is learned that he pays from $600 to $800 a month to one market man who supplies the larder of the White House with game and meats. From this same source it is learned that the president contemplates a series of unique dinners next winter, to which will be invited the men with whom he was associated, not only on his hunting trips in the West, but when he was a plainsman in South Dakota and Wyoming. These dinners will be made up largely of game from the sections with which the president became familiar in his younger days. To the game courses will be added other features of the sections which he visited in his recent tour of the Western states. And the resources of these states are to be picturesquely served. During his recent swing around the circle he told many of the prominent men with whom he touched elbows that the White House next winter would be wide open, and that he proposed to see to it that the men who had shown him marked attentions on his recent long tour would have similar attentions shown them in the capital city of the nation.

Joseph G. Cannon, the taciturn, as he has come to be regarded since he is the only candidate for the speakership, has been the subject of much inquiry from Washington correspondents as to what he will do with committeeships when he is elected speaker of the national house of representatives. But foxy Mr. Cannon has yet to give any direct intimation as to what his course will be relative to the chairmanships of the prominent committees. To those familiar with the course of legislation, it is a subject of wonder why chairmanships are already being discussed. To those who know, however, how vital a chairmanship is in the making of legislation, it is no wonder, for already Mr. Cannon is being besought on all sides by members of congress for recognition on important committees. It is confidently asserted that in the past three months Mr. Cannon has received a letter from almost every member of the Fifty-eighth congress setting forth what the member would like to have in the way of committee places. Cannon's closest friends assert that he has never divulged a single thought that might be interpreted as meaning who will be selected for choice places, or what his general policy in making assignments will be.

When Speaker Reed first assumed control of the house he exerted a great deal of liberty in making committee assignments, in accordance with his ideas as to the propriety of designating to certain places the men he had selected. Precedent counted only when in his judgment the best men, or the one for all reasons considered, happened to be in the line of preferment. After Mr. Reed had once made committee assignments, he followed to a very large degree matters of precedent in other house reorganizations.

In the case of Mr. Cannon it is expected by those who know him best that he will to a considerable extent ignore the present standing of members on committees. He will look for men on whom dependence can be placed in the carrying out of policies approved by him in a general way, and also approved by the president, for the president and Mr. Cannon will have a thorough understanding as to what the Fifty-eighth congress and its work will be the subject of praise and criticism in the impending presidential campaign of 1904. In the make-up of the appropriations committee Mr. Cannon will use his best judgment, and it is confidently expected some men will be advanced who now hold seats far down the table. In view of the investigations now going on in the postoffice department, a general shakeup in the postoffice and post roads committee is confidently expected. Who the chairman will be is at this time a matter of pure conjecture. In view of the investigation as to the seed contract which Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture has asked for, the committee on agriculture will undoubtedly see some new men therein, although it seems safe to predict that the chairman of this committee in the Fifty-seventh congress, James W. Wadsworth, of New York, will be reappointed, but there are enough men going off that committee to virtually make it in its personnel an entirely new committee. As to the committee on ways and means, there will be probably few changes, many of the old members having been re-elected to the Fifty-eighth congress. It is not expected that anything more than speculation of a very general character can be indulged in by those who are anxious to know the makeup of house committees until Mr. Cannon is actually elected speaker and takes up the reins of office. Before that time, if Mr. Cannon has any program mapped out, he is not likely to confide it to any one.

Admiral "Bob" Evans, sometimes designated as "Fighting Bob" who is in command of the Asiatic squadron of the American navy, has seen fit to rendezvous his ships near the Chinese port of Chee Poo. As usual, the navy department hastens to explain that the assemblage of a powerful American fleet in foreign waters has absolutely nothing to do with impending troubles in China. Fortunately, or otherwise, the annual appearance of the cholera and the bubonic plague has broken out in the Philippines, and thus an excuse is found for getting American ships away from Manila. But on the other hand, the American minister in China and American consuls in various parts of the empire have reported to the state department quite frequently of late that there are many symptoms of outbreaks of the anti-foreign element of the Chinese population. A repetition of the "boxer" troubles of three years ago is daily expected, and the United States proposes to take no chances. Admiral Evans has at his disposal a large force of marines, and American marines have proved their fighting qualities many times within the past few years, and in addition he can, within forty-eight hours from the outbreak of trouble, embark 3000 American soldiers at Manila without seriously embarrassing the military operations in the Philippines.

There may be no need for American troops in China. But if the need should arise, Admiral Evans is likely to act the part of "Johnny on the Spot," and to find at his back a force of American troops fully capable of coping with ten times their number of the yellow followers of the Chinese dragon.

The postal scandals in Washington are likely to have an important bearing upon the postal service of the Dominion of Canada. On several occasions during the past year the Canadian postmaster general and some of his principal assistants have come over the border to inquire into the workings of the rural free delivery service. These gentlemen have expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the workings of as greatly plasr with th workings of the American system of rural delivery, and it has been their intention to attempt to induce the Canadian parliament to authorize a like service throughout the densely settled portions of the Dominion. A final visit was contemplated for next month, but now is is asserted that further investigation has been abandoned for the present, and that Canada will not immediately adopt the American system.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bettorville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had bronchitis for three years and doctored all the times without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me. Equally effective in curing all lung and throat troubles, consumption, pneumonia and grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c, and $1.00.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

William Harden, who lives one mile south of Nashville, Ind., was taken from his home early Sunday by five men and badly beaten. His wife went to his assistance and in the scuffle which followed her arm was badly bruised. Harden claims to know three of the five men. It is said that he was whitecapped on the alleged ground that he would not work. He has a wife and four children.

Charlie Geisler, of West Hamilton, O., shot and killed his brother John, a carpenter, at the former's saloon. The shooting occurred in the presence of the victim's wife and was the result of a prolonged quarrel, in which the brothers came to blows.

Gideon Burts of Angiesia township, Ont., near Cloy, killed his wife Sunday by battering her head with a stove lifter. He was insane. After committing the crime Burts hunted up a constable and invited him to see what he had done.

Heartbroken by the deaths of wife and children, bankrupt in pocket and in hope, Theodore Walkopf, of N. Y., put a bullet through his brain Sunday. His weapon was a French dueling pistol, its handle marked with six deep notches as if in token of as many meetings on the field of honor. Walkop, a man of culture and good family, arrived from Brazil two months ago.

Fire almost completely destroyed the massive plant of the Riddle Coach & Hearse company, at Ravenna, O., early Sunday, causing a loss of $250,000. Of this amount only $18,000 was covered by insurance. The White Hospital is only a few doors away and a panic was created among the patients. Flying sparks and boards were carried two miles, and a dozen smaller buildings were ignited.

The Tyfold Collar

The picture shows how the collar is cut out on each side to allow for adjusting a neck tie without springing the collar open. The collar comes close together in front, it keeps the tie in place and you don t see the cut-out part. Besides the tie is retained just over the button, which is also kept out of sight. Your summer comfort will be increased if you wear one, and you'll thank us for the style. Dealers sell them.

IS CHARGED WITH MURDER

F. Seymour Barrington Said to Have Killed McCann.

St. Louis, Mo., June 29.—A warrant was sworn out yesterday by Mrs. J. P. McCann, charging F. Seymour Barrington with the murder of her husband, James P. McCann. As the alleged crime was committed in St. Louis county, the city authorities gave Barrington over into the custody of Sheriff Hanken, and the prisoner was taken to Clayton and placed in jail.

The body of a man, supposed to be McCann, which was buried soon after being discovered several days ago at Bonfils, was exhumed and an inquest was held by Coroner Koch of St. Louis county. Mrs. McCann positively identified the body as that of her husband, partially basing the identification upon a gold tooth. Others who knew McCann also identified the body.

Coroner Koch made a rigid investigation and returned a verdict that two bullet holes were found in the dead man's head, and bullets were extracted corresponding in calibre to that of the revolver found in Barrington's trunk at the Union station here Saturday night. He also found a deep gash in the throat and deep cut in the palm of the right hand, leading to the assumption that the man had been attacked first with a knife and, in defending himself, had seized the blade, which cut deeply into his hand, that finally his throat was cut, and he was ultimately shot twice in the head.

Barrington maintains his innocence.

FORTUNE TELLER

Cause of Domestic Infelicity of Cleveland Couple.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 29.—Ernestine Schilling commenced suit for divorce from her husband, Godfrey Schilling. According to the wife's petition a fortune-teller is the cause of their domestic infelicity. Incidentally, she says, the principal cause was not the fortune-teller personally, but the fact that her predictions concerning the husband failed to come true.

The clairvoyant, says Mrs. Schilling, once told her husband that his wife, the present plaintiff, would soon die. Added to this gloomy prophecy was the somewhat cheerier one that Schilling would then marry again, and this time become immensely rich.

Despite the words of the prophet, however, Schilling's wife did not die. Neither did he marry again, and thus become rich. But, the petition says, when Mrs. Schilling evinced a reluctance to depart this life as per the fortune-teller's schedule, Schilling become greatly incensed thereat, and she says he became possessed of a determination to take the fulfilling of the prophecy out of the hands of Providence and take care of it himself. The plaintiff says her husband assailed her with a knife, threatened to kill her and used various sorts of missiles on her. In fact, she says he became possessed with the determination to kill her.

The couple were married in Germany Feb. 10, 1874. There are two children of the marriage, one of whom is 22 years old.

COMMENCEMENT DAY

At Villa Maria Marked By Pleasing Exercises.

Frontenac, Minn., June 29.—Commencement day at beautiful Villa Maria was marked by exercises of a most pleasing character. The stage was tastefully decorated to represent a woodland scene, where gypsies disported in true Sylvan style. The quaint, brilliant costumes and gay music with clashing tambourines of the cantata, "The Gypsies' Carnival," produced a charming effect. Miss James Bathgate, N. D., filled the role of queen with marked success. Yankee peddlar personated by Miss Mackmiller, Iron River, Wis., was extremely droll and apparently very easily converted into a lily no means sprightly gypsy, as he retained his limp, amid all the gay rondos and dances. The songs were very well rendered throughout, but the role of fortune-teller by Gladys O'Brien, St. Paul was particularly effective.

The "Jam Pots," sung and acted by the little Misses, including two-year-old Dorothy Koch, daintily dressed to represent what the song called forth, deserved applause. The hymn, "My Faith Looks Up To Thee," with Delsarte poses, was most gracefully and appropriately rendered. "Grandma's Minnet," by two sweet little girls—Irene Leisander, St. Paul, and Katharine Hayden, Duluth, called up many a pleasing reminiscence, and the hearty applause showed plainly it was fully appreciated. Of the piano solos Markel's "Cascade," executed by Miss Mattimore, St. Paul, evidenced careful training, and although some nervousness was apparent it detracted but little from its effectiveness. Miss Maude '03, Nickerson, rendered Godard's "Valse Sentimentale" with pleasing effect. A pretty march and other mandolin numbers by Miss Hortense Smith, Chippewa Falls, Wis., and Miss Rose Miegel, St. Paul, was much appreciated; but Werde's "Waldmuhle," executed with exquisite tatse and technic by little May Holeschcr, Duluth, won the laurels of the day. The vociferous and insistent applause that followed was responded to with Doles' "Capriccio," which, an unusual thing at a piano recital, kept the hall in rapt attention. This twelve-year-old musician's ease and self-possession provoked many a smile of admiration.

A class of eighteen young ladies, gowned in white, rendered a most beautiful song of farewell to their graduating companion. Each one presented a flower, which when bound together formed a magnificent bouquet, expresing in floral language the loving wishes of all. The graduate, Miss Zella Maude, read a most pathetic valedictory essay entitled "The Parting of the Ways." The emotion she felt on bidding adieu to her loved Alma Mater caused several tearful breaks in the continuity of her beautifully worded esay, but seemed only to make it more acceptable. Rev. M. Raleigh, the genial chaplain, of the institution, conferred the gold medal and made some pathetic as well as humorous remarks which were thoroughly relished by the select audience. He dwelt especially on the sigdificance of the closing exercises as a pleasant social reunion. Thus ended the commencement of 1903. After inspecting the very fine exhibit displayed in the corridor, the visitors spent the rest of the day in strolling amid the beautiful scenery of this garden spot of the great West.

CONSUMING POWER

Of the United States Is Shown By Eleven Months' Statistics.

The Growth of Imports of Manufacturers' Materials.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The growth in the consuming power of the United States in this period of business activity is illustrated by the figures of the treasury bureau of statistics showing the importations and exportations by great groups during the eleven months ending with May, 1903. These figures show that while the exportation of manufactures has increased only $2,000,000 as compared with the corresponding months of last year, the importation of manufacturers' materials has increased $60,000,000 as compared with the same months of 1902, and $131,000,000 as compared with the corresponding months of 1901. As it can scarcely be presumed that the manufacturers of the country are importing in excess of their present or immediately prospective requirements, it would seem that the increase in manufactures which this growing importation of materials indicates is being consumed at home, since exportations of manufactures for the year show no material increase.

A rapid increase in the importation of manufacturers' materials has been the striking characteristic of the fiscal year about to end. For the eleven months the total value of manufacturers' materials imported amounted to $451,081,163, against $384,775,764 for the same months of last year, $319,524,257 for the corresponding months of 1901, and $363,455,072 for the same months of 1900. Prior to 1899 the imports of manufacturers' materials had never touched the $300,000,000 line, except in 1892, when they were $300,161,795. Comparing 1903 with 1890, the manufacturers' materials imported have nearly doubled in value, those of the eleven months of 1890 being $242,437,991. Comparing conditions in 1903 with 1900, the year of the largest exportation of manufactures, it may be said that the importation of manufacturers' materials has increased $87,000,000 and exportation of manufactures has decreased $19,000,000 during the eleven months' periods under consideration.

Not only has the importation of manufacturers' materials increased but the home production of the great articles used in manufacturing has also increased. The production of pig iron in the United States in 1902 amounted to 17,821,307 long tons, against 13,789,242 tons in 1900, an increase of over 4,000,000 tons, or nearly 30 per cent, while cotton production shows an increase of over 1,000,000 bales and wool a gain of 30,000,000 pounds, comparing 1902 figures with those of 1900.

The principal articles in which the increase in importations of manufacturers' materials occurs are raw silk, which shows an increase of 1,590,060 pounds, or 13 per cent in the ten months for which the detailed statements are at hand; india rubber, which shows an increase in quantity of 3,500,000 pounds in the ten months over the same period of the preceding year, and manila hemp, which shows an increase of more than 10 per cent in quantity imported. Fibres, as a whole, show an increase of $4,000,000, comparing the ten months of this year with those of 1902. Iron, in a partially manufactured state for use in manufacturing, also shows a large increase.

The following table shows the value of manufacturers' materials imported in the eleven months ending with May, from 1890 to 1903:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1890 | $242,437,991 |
| 1891 | 277,506,036 |
| 1892 | 261,187,889 |
| 1893 | 300,461,795 |
| 1894 | 187,364,314 |
| 1895 | 241,246,725 |
| 1896 | 286,260,715 |
| 1897 | 270,643,124 |
| 1898 | 251,002,953 |
| 1899 | 259,031,611 |
| 1900 | 363,455,072 |
| 1901 | 319,524,257 |
| 1902 | 384,775,764 |

ECZEMA SETS THE SKIN ON FIRE

No disease causes so much bodily discomfort, or itches, and burns like Eczema. Beginning often with a slight redness of the skin it gradually spreads, followed by pustules or blisters from which a gummy, sticky fluid oozes which dries and scales off or forms bad looking sores and scabs. It appears on different parts of the body but oftenest upon the back, arms, hands, legs and face, and is a veritable torment at times, especially at night or when overheated.

The cause of Eczema is a too acid and general unhealthy condition of the blood. The terrifying itching and burning is produced by the overflow through the glands and pores of the skin of the fiery poisons with which the blood-current is overloaded. While external applications, such as washes, soaps, salves and powders aresoot hing and cooling they do not enter into the blood itself or touch the real cause of the disease, but S. S. S. does, and purifies, enriches, and strengthens the thin acid blood and cleanses and builds up the general system, when the skin clears off and Eczema with all its terrifying symptoms disappears.

Send for our free book on the Skin and its diseases. No charge for medical advice.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

In 1896 I experienced at times patches on the inside of my hands that itched and burned, causing much discomfort. As time went by it grew worse, and I was convinced that I was afflicted with Eczema. I consulted several physicians and a number of specialists, and used several external applications, receiving but slight temporary relief. In February I decided to try S. S. S., and in less than a month I experienced a change for the better, and by May all symptoms had disappeared, and I found myself entirely cured, and have had no return of the disease since. W. P. # CANADIAN TRADE

Doctrine of Reciprocity as Firmly Established as Protection.

Hay Says National League Would Extend Trade Through Tariffs.

Washington, June 29.—Eugene G. Hay of Minneapolis, representing the Minnesota branch of the National Reciprocity league, recently wrote a report concerning the outlook for reciprocity with Canada, which was widely commented on in the Eastern papers. By several of the newspapers, more especially those with Republican leanings, it was charged that reciprocity meant a stab at the protective principle. Mr. Hay authorizes the following statement in reply to this criticism, and as a further explanation of the reciprocity situation, as related to Canada:

"Many people who think loosely on economic questions look upon reciprocity as tending toward free trade, and the same class hastily jumped to the conclusion that Secretary Chamberlain's proposition for a British differential tariff in favor of the colonies would mean that Great Britain was to become a protective tariff nation. Neither of these conclusions is correct. Great Britain is a free trade country hence with her commercial reciprocity is impossible, for she has nothing to give in exchange for the commercial concessions she may ask. Chamberlain's proposition, as interpreted by Balfour, was to establish a reciprocity with the colonies by creating a tariff on certain products of other countries that compete with colonial products in the British market; these, of course, would be natural products, chiefly foodstuffs. In exchange for this it was proposed that the colonies should, by discriminating duties, give a preference to British manufactures. This, if accomplished, would be reciprocity between Great Britain and her colonies, and while it is an admission of the impotence of absolute free trade in sharp international commercial contests, it does not mean that Great Britain is to become protectionist to any greater extent than is necessary to establish reciprocity with her colonies; and the chief, if not the sole, purpose is to bind closer together the mother country and the colonies and give to their diverse commercial interests a common purpose of maintaining the commercial supremacy of the empire.

"The mere suggestion of such a policy carries with it the thought that it may be necessary to British supremacy, and is a testimonial in favor of the true principles of the Republican party of the United States as strong as was Gladstone's indorsement of the American constitution. Reciprocity is as fully established as a Republican doctrine as is protection. Protection as a party principle was inherited from the old Whig party; reciprocity as the outgrowth of a protective tariff was originated by the Republican party to meet the changed conditions which came to the country when as a result of matured and established industries, its commerce was seeking foreign markets. The advocate of reciprocity does not have his face turned toward free trade, but away from it. The use of our tariffs to extend our commerce is the most enlightened protection. As to Canada, no interest that is now protected by our tariff and that should be protected under the Republican principle of protection, will be injured by any treaty that might possibly be negotiated. The competition between like interests of Canada and the United States would be no more unequal than between those of Massachusetts and New York, and unless our policy of protection is to be construed as a policy of exclusion—which is not the doctrine of the Republican party—the protective policy cannot possibly be endangered by a Canadian reciprocity treaty. The movement now on foot to secure such a treaty doubtless presents the last opportunity to the friends of reciprocity to have this Republican principle enacted into law. Reciprocity with Canada presents less complications than that with any other country, it would probably meet with less opposition, and it would be far more beneficial. While the Chamberlain preferential policy now seems very remote, its adoption, if probable, would not be incompatable with reciprocity between this country and Canada, and this I know to be the Canadian view.

"Unless, however, the joint high commission shall meet this fall, the actualization of Canadian reciprocity is not probable for many years, if ever. The commission could not hold a meeting next year, for we in this country would then be in the midst of an all-absorbing political campaign. It could not meet the year after, for then the Canadian campaign would be on, and unless something is accomplished before the next geenral election in the Dominion, it is more than probable that the result of that election will materially lessen the possibilities of better trade relations between the countries. The commission will, however, meet this fall, unless the Canadians ask a guaranty of results before joining in a call for the meeting of the commission. If they insist on assurances that such a treaty as may be agreed upon will be ratified by the United States senate before joining in a call for the meeting of the commission, the commission will not meet; for, under our system, where the power which negotiates a treaty and that which must ratify it are so entirely separate, no guaranty of the ultimate adoption of the treaty can be given."

ENJOY A PRIZE FIGHT.

St. Paul, June 29.—A crowd from St. Paul and Minneapolis went yesterday to a point in Wisconsin, near Osceola, where two prize fights to a finish were pulled off. The first match was between Eddie Gardner, of Minneapolis, and Jack Kelly, of Chicago, and ended by Kelly being knocked out in the tenth round.

The second mill was between Hugh McMahon, of St. Paul, and Larue, a colored fighter from Minneapolis, and was for a purse and the middleweight championship of the Northwest. Larue put up a plucky fight, but McMahon had the better of the contest throughout and Larue's seconds threw up the sponge in the eighteenth round.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS

Annual Communion of the Mother Church at Boston.

Boston, June 29.—The annual communion of the mother church of the Christian Science denomination was held in Mechanics hall yesterday, the three congregations aggregating over 15,000 persons. Each service was impressive, especially in the silent communion, when the entire congregation knelt.

At each meeting the readers of the First church, the directors and other members of prominence had seats on the platform. Professor S. Hering, formerly of Johns Hopkins university, and who is a son of Dr. Constantine Hering, one of the founders of homeopathy in this country, officiated as first reader, and Mrs. Eliza E. Williams was second reader. There was no departure from the order of service followed at previous annual communions in the mother church, and it closely followed the service in the individual churches of the denomination.

The sermon was a compilation of Bible readings with corelative sections from the Christian Science text book. Before each service was brought to an end, Professor Hering read a letter from Mrs. Eddy in which she expressed her love for her church and invited communicants to visit her at her nome in Concord, N. H. Many thousands of the Scientists will make the pilgrimage and already numerous special trains have been chartered. It is estimated that about 18,000 members of the denomination have come to attend the services and the Mechanics building, which covers several acres, is entirely devoted in a business way to the accommodation of the visitors. Admission to the mother church, which is situated only a short distance from Mechanics hall, was reserved to members and will be during the week. The communion services yesterday, however, were of a public character.

THE METEOR WINS AGAIN.

Kiel, Prussia, June 29.—The emperor's yacht Meteor crossed the line first in yesterday's race for cruising schooners, class A, and kept the lead all the way over the thirty-mile course, beating the Hamburg in a ten-knot breeze, by one and a half minutes. The empress' yacht Idunia was again twenty minutes behind.

TROUBLE AT BALL GAME.

Salt Lake, Utah, June 29.—A lynching was narrowly averted during the baseball game between Ogden and Salt Lake teams at Ogden yesterday afternoon. In the sixth inning Marshall, of the Salt Lake team, and Hausen, pitcher for Ogden, became involved in a quarrel during which Marshall hit Hausen over the head with a bat, seriously injuring him. There was great excitement among the spectators, who swarmed into the field, threatening to kill Marshall, who was hustled from the grounds and lodged in jail. Hausen was taken to the hospital.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Everything Is Arranged For Convention at Denver.

Denver, Colo., June 29.—The arrangements are complete for the meeting in this city of the twenty-first biennial conference of the Society of Christian Endeavorers next month. The services will be held in tent Endeavor, which will be pitched near City Park, and will have a seating capacity of 10,000. Overflow meetings will be held in several of the larger churches.

Railway rates from all parts of the country will be reduced from one fare or less for the round trip and return tickets will be good until August 31. Tickets from all points in the Western Passenger association's territory will be on sale from July 1 to 10. Special rates will be given to Endeavorers, who wish to make excursions into the mountains. The local committee advises those who anticipate attending the convention to get into touch with their state transportation managers as soon as possible.

WHEAT IS LOWER

Sharp Break Early, But the Loss Is Recovered.

Northwestern Weather Is More Favorable—Flax Fairly Active.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 29.—The wheat market opened weak and lower and declined further but in the last hour had a rally that carried it up to the closing price of Saturday. It could not quite hold that level, however, and closed somewhat lower. In St. Louis and Chicago the July option was weak it closing 1¾c off in St. Louis as compared with a shade lower for September and 1c off in Chicago as compared with no change for September. In the Northwestern markets July was weaker than September though not so much so, the decline in Duluth being ½c as compared with ¼-⅝c for September and in Minneapolis ⅝c for the July and ½c for the September.

It was largely a weather market. There were scattered rains in the Northwest but not heavy enough to be general, however gives promise of rains and this unsettled the bullish sentiment. There was a bearish report on Canadian acreage also that gave the bears some comfort. Private estimates of 9,000,000 acres of wheat for Canada was given. This does not find much credence here, however, being regarded as considerably too large.

The Liverpool market closed ¾d lower, Paris unchanged to ½c higher and Antwerp unchanged.

The world's shipments of wheat were 10,358,000 bus. last week, against 10,161,000 bus. the previous week and 6,159,000 bus. last year. The amount on passage decreased 257,000 bus.

The visible supply decreased 1,061,000 bus. last week and is now 17,459,000 bus. as compared with 19,760,000 bus. a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 495,000 bus., last year 636,000 bus. Shipments, 159,000 bus., last year 183,000 bus. Clearances were of wheat and flour were 164,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis. 319 cars, and at Chicago, 24, a total of 343 cars, against 320 last week and 524 last year.

World's shipments of corn last week were 5,140,000 bus., against 4,759,000 bus. the previous week and 4,446,000 bus. a year ago. The amount on passage increased 1,174,000 bus. The visible supply of corn increased 557,000 bus., and is now 5,967,000 bus. Primary receipts of corn were 861,000 bus., last year 2,200,000 bus. Shipments 557,000 bus., last year 323,000 bus. Clearances were 100,768 bus. Corn early in the day was weaker in the Chicago market but later rallied and closed with an advance of 5¢ over Saturday. The Liverpool market closed ¼d to ⅝d lower. July oats fell sharply, the loss for the day being 1½c.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was fairly active. September opened ½-⅝c off at 77½c, sold at 77⅝c at 9:50, and fell to 77¾c at 9:56. It rallied to 77⅞c at 9:58 and sold off to 77⅜c at 10:15. A moment later it sold at 77¼c, but fell back quickly to 77⅝c. From that point the bulge started and it sold up to 78¾c at 12:30 and then fell back to 77¾c which was the closing price.

Cash prices continued at July price or about 1c over September for No. 1 northern and 1½c under July for No. 2. Sales were 10,000 bushels.

Flax trading was fairly active and the market weak. July sold 2c off to $1.01, rallied to $1.01¾ and then fell back again to $1.01 and closed at $1.01½. This was a decline of ½-¾c and the later options had the same loss.

Outs here felt the severe slump they have undergone in Chicago, a decline of 1½c being made. Rye fell the same amount.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 hard, 85½c; No. 1 northern, 84c; No. 2 northern, 82½c; July, 84c; September, 81½c; December, 78¾c. "Since about a week offers of new wheat are coming on the market, while a few scattered sales were made about a month ago as high as 4½c over Chicago July for new No. 2 red; new No. 2 hard has been offered this week at 1¾c over Chicago September f. o. b. Galveston for September delivery. Exporters are loath to pay this now, expecting a further reduction in the premiums, and if Europe does not come in soon as a buyer, it seems reasonable to expect that American markets will have to adjust themselves accordingly."

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market closed at about unchanged from Saturday. Was weak early and sold down 1c a bus on scattered showers in the Northwest. The rains so far have apparently not been general, but further showers are predicted. The cash position is slow, complaints from Nebraska, continue of rust and there is no improvement in the winter wheat threshing returns. The Northwest situation is still the acute factor. Liquidation has been general and this market has no doubt accumulated considerable short interest. Our sweet feeling on wheat is bullish. The world's stocks are practically exhausted and there is, in spite of the fact that the world's crop last year was a large one, it is pretty certain that the world's crop this year will be materially less. Everything that grows on the farm is worth more money than wheat. The bears are commanding the buyers of wheat a present of the carrying charges and a nice bonus besides. We think the conditions of supply and demand justify present prices, at least, and any improvement in the Northwest situation will add to the strength of the market. We would buy wheat on the breaks.

Corn—The market was weak early and closed strong. Receipts are fairly liberal, but the increase in the visible was small and the cash demand is fairly good. The price is, of course, high and the world could improve under prevailing weather. We have no pronounced view under existing conditions.

Oats—The market is still firm and prices a little better. There is a pretty fair demand for cash oats and fair receipts. The crop is looking well and prospecting fair. Strength in corn has, however, been the principal factor, but prices look pretty high to us with the indications of fairly good crop outlook.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: The dry weather funk 1 1900, when the wheat price moved up from 65c to 85½c began the middle of June, the drought being imminent. The Northwest had very hot weather, as high as 96 on May 15, and the lack of rain was being talked of by that time. The complaints lasted over a fortnight, and into June without having much effect on the price. By the first week in June the government crop bulletins were describing the condition of spring wheat in the Dakotas and Minnesota as improving. By June 10 the wheat price was at 76c, but the government stated the spring wheat condition June 1st as 91.4. By the middle of June, the drought being counted, the wheat price was at 75c. By June 20 the wheat price was over 80c, and Minneapolis thought 25 per cent of the Northwest area would make a good crop, 25 per cent, about three-quarters, 25 per cent half crop and 25 per cent a quarter crop. On June 25 the wheat price reached 85½c, an advance within less than six weeks of about 25c a bu. That was the top, and rains began in good faith. That week the government bulletin declared the "early sown wheat in North Dakota practically dead, and the late own not likely to stand another bad week; not over half a crop was promised in South Dakota," and "ground was being plowed up for other crops in Minnesota." The Price Current declared the "latest information concerning the disaster to the wheat crop of the Northwest confirms the apprehension and dissipates the hope of relief from needful moisture." There was all through early July the narrative of "heavy rains in the Northwest." The price was under 80c by July 10, although the government made the spring wheat condition July 1 only 82.2, suggesting a spring wheat yield of 163,000,000 bu. Before July 20 the price was back to 75c, and in early September at 73c. In October it was as low as 71. The price ended the year in the 60s. In December of that year Minneapolis and Duluth were getting enormous receipts. The spring wheat crop that year was finally estimated at 191,000,000 bu. and speculators have never forgotten the bull disappointments of the year of the great drought.

Chicago Record Herald: Lohrke sees no prospect of help for the wheat price from abroad. He writes his house here as follows: "The demand for our new winter wheats remains disappointingly poor. Those of our exporters who have made sales last spring for August and September shipment are in no hurry to convert the options which they bought against these sales into cash wheat f. o. b. gulf. European buyers are daily sending cancelling or reselling orders, and evidently prefer the cash profit to receiving the wheat.

"The indifference on the part of European buyers must be explained by various reasons:

"1. Heavy stocks on the continent. According to Broomhall the principal continental markets on June 1 had 13,211,000 bushels wheat against 9,036,000 bushels on June 1, 1902.

"2. Continued favorable weather for the growing European crops, which promise to turn out decidedly better than was anticipated.

"3. An estimated available surplus for export in India of 75,000,000 bushels, against an average export from there during the last ten years of less than 14,000,000 bushels.

"France, which has been such an eager buyer of our No. 2 red wheat in March and April, has dropped out entirely. When July wheat in St. Louis sold around 86c our exporters paid up to 79c for St. Louis No. 2 red f. o. b. New Orleans for shipment to France. Today the St. Louis July option sold above 81c and St. Louis No. 2 red f. o. b. New Orleans is quoted nominally 79c, with practically no demand.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Weak Opening In Wheat With Considerable Liquidation.

Chicago, June 29.—Lower cables, prospects of rains in the Northwest and a bearish Canadian crop report combined to cause a weak opening in wheat, July being 1c to 1¼c lower, at 79c to 80c, with September ½@⅝c to ¾@¾c lower, at 77¾c to 77⅝c. There was considerable liquidation in September by both local and outside longs and the price of that delivery declined to 77¼c. Toward the end of the first hour a firmer feeling developed due to less persistent selling although there was no improvement in the demand. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 319 cars, which with local receipts of 24 cars, one of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 343 cars, against 320 cars last week and 524 cars a year ago.

The market was strong the latter part of the day with an improved demand due to reports that the rains in the Northwest were only of light character. September was especially strong and with good local and commission house demand, the price of that delivery advanced to 78¾c and closed unchanged at 78¼@¾c. July sold up to 80c and closed at 79¾c, a loss of 1c for the day.

Corn opened weak on heavy receipts, excellent weather and in sympathy with wheat, with July ⅜@⅝c lower at 49¼c to 49½c, while September was off ¼@⅜c, at 49½c to 49¾c. There was quite general selling early in the day with only a light demand which resulted in July selling down to 49¾c and September to 49⅝c, with a subsequent rally along with wheat. Local receipts were 321 cars, with 29 of contract grade.

Shorts as well as local bulls were good buyers of corn during the last half of the session and with the strength in wheat, prices advanced materially. September closed ⅝c up at 50¾c. July was up ⅝c at 50½c.

The weakness in wheat and corn affected prices in oats and the opening was weak with July off 1c, at 33½c, and September down ⅜c to ⅝c, at 33½c to 33¾c. July was very erratic selling down to 32c within a few minutes and then rallying again to 33½c. September was steady at the decline with only a light trade. Local receipts were 329 cars.

Provisions opened weak on liberal receipts of hogs and lower prices at the yards. Brokers were fair buyers at the decline and the market developed more firmness, with early loss nearly all regained. September pork opened 15c lower, at $15.25. September lard was 2½c lower to 2½c higher, at $8.25 to $8.30, with ribs off from 5c to 7½c, at $8.85 to $8.87½.

ACTIVE IN STOCKS

The Market Closed Strong at the Top Level.

Buying Was Renewed With Vigor During Last Hour.

New York, June 29.—The stock market showed more animation than last week and followed the early London market to a higher level. There were fractional gains throughout the list. The Pennsylvania was most conspicuous, that stock and its affiliated companies rising ⅝ to a point. Sugar advanced 1½.

Business increased largely in volume in the later dealings and there was a further rise following a slight dip after the opening. Reading was the leader of the market, thousands of shares being bought above 150. Other coalers sold higher, Delaware & Hudson showing a gain of 1½ and some of the soft coal stocks a point. The Pacifics and grangers were bought heavily at improved prices and the specialties were also well to the front. Kansas City Southern preferred advanced 2⅝, American Car 2 and Amalgamated, Smelting, Texas & Pacific, Southern Railway preferred, Denver & Rio Grande preferred, Atchison preferred and Realty preferred about a point. New York, Chicago & St. Louis declined 2⅝ and Virginia-Carolina Chemical a point. Prices were a fraction lower at 11 o'clock and the market became quiet.

Reading advanced an extreme 1¾ and other active stocks made some further advances. Northwestern, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Pressed Steel and American Hide preferred rose 1 to 1½ and Sugar 2½. Chicago Great Western preferred and Generela Electric declined about a point. Pennsylvania met pressure at 125 and ruled below that. The market was dull and steady at noon. U. S. Steel seconds 38 were pressed for sale again down to 32. Bonds generally were firm.

Buying was renewed with vigor, carrying prices to the highest of the day and adding many stocks to the list of 1 to 1½ point gains. Reading was lifted 2¾ over Saturday and Union Pacific 2¼. Southern Pacific 2⅛. Sugar 3⅝ and Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Northwestern, Norfolk & Western, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, and Tennessee Coal 1¾ to 2. Pullman rose 3¾. Metropolitan Securities 2½ and American District Telegraph 3½. The closing was active and strong at the top level.

Buying orders appeared in the grain carrying roads and St. Paul, Atchison, L. & N., the Pacifics, Brooklyn Transit, Tennessee Coal and United States Steel stocks rose 1@1¼. The coalers were less active but were maintained at their best prices.

A reaction in Sugar of a point caused a sympathetic easing off all around and trading became very dull. Western stocks got back to the highest again followed by the coalers. Pennsylvania rose above 125 through large selling orders and Reading advanced 2 full points. Pittsburg, C. C. & L. 4½, and Hocking Valley 1¾.

THE TEAL DUCK'S SPEED.

The teal is much the swiftest of all our wild fowl. Its rate of going varies with the necessity for speed. If a flock be flying leisurely into roost from tie feeding ground, not alarmed or hurried in any way, it will make not more than 90 miles in an hour, says the New York Sun. If the wind be at their backs they will cover from 100 to 110 miles an hour. If they have been shot at shortly after rising and are still frightened, though further undisturbed, they will be putting 125 miles an hour behind them without apparent effort.

That is about the limit of a flock's progression, but the speed of a flock is never so great as that of a single individual. The teal never really shows what it can do until it is alone, belated, or lost from its companions, or possessed by some special reasons for getting to the roost in as little time as possible. Then it develops a space-grabbing capacity that is wonderful. In the dusk of an early fall evening, flying not more than 50 feet above the water, 20 miles from the place where it will sleep, and having seen the red flash of a gun further up the lake, it looks to the man in the blind like a small black ball hurled from a catapult. The line it describes is as straight as a ruler in a mile it will not rise or fall a foot; its neck is stretched out as far as it will go; its legs are together and held rigidly pointing behind it, and its wings are going as fast as the wings of a humming bird. The noise that it makes is a mixture of buzz and whistle, with the buzz predominating. It shoots out of the dusk and is gone. It flashes blackly by the hunter, and unless he is an old hand he has lost even the sound of it before the gun is at his shoulder. That teal is doing more than 150 miles an hour, or something like two and a half miles a minute. The sportsman never lived who could kill more than one out of five o fsuch birds; one in ten is good enough for the ordinary gunman.

If a bird going at that rate of speed crosses a blind at thirty yards it will be necessary to swing the gun as rapidly as possible and to hold not less than thirty feet ahead of

BRINGS HIS SUIT

Richard Ferris Sues Metropolitan Building Company For $19,908.18.

Claims Damages of $10,000 and Remainder Is For Special Losses.

A bill of complaint was filed this morning with the clerk of the United States circuit court by Richard Ferris, manager and owner of the Ferris Comedians, against the Metropolitan Building company, owners of the Metropolitan theater, claiming damages to the extent of $10,000, and asking to be reimbursed for further special losses, amounting to $9908.18, together with interest.

In the bill of complaint the plaintiff alleges that he is a resident of the state of Illinois, and is engaged in the business of organizing stock companies and producing plays, and that the defendant is a stock company, existing under the laws of the state of Minnesota.

The plaintiff claims that on Nov. 21, 1902, he entered into a contract with the defendant to bring a company to the Metropolitan Opera house and play for a period of four weeks, with the usual matinees and evening performances, commencing Jan. 5. The management of the theater was to receive 35 per cent of the receipts, and agreed to provide the house, well-lighted, heated, with the orchestra, dressing rooms, piano, stage hands, attend to the bill posting and advertising.

The plaintiff was was to receive 65 per cent of the receipts, in return for which he was to produce plays for six evenings in the week, together with the usual matinees. He was also to retain the right to give two weeks' notice of the cancellation of the engagement. The contract was signed by Manager Reaney of the Metropolitan Opera house, and the plaintiff, Richard Ferris.

The bill of complaint further states that the company arrived on Jan. 5 and opened the engagement, running for the four weeks, according to the terms of the contract. At the expiration of the time the company continued to play in the house of the defendant, on the terms of the contract, but without any definite arrangement as to the length of the engagement. For several weeks matters were allowed to stand in this position.

About the middle of March, the plaintiff alleges, he made a verbal agreement with Manager Reaney, the duly authorized representative of the defendants, to extend the contract to Sept. 1, upon the same terms as the original contract called for. Later, on April 8, Manager Reaney made the contract in writing by inscribing across the face of the contract the words, "This contract extended until Sept. 1, 1903," the statement being signed by both Reaney and the plaintiff.

On May 11, according to the bill of complaint, the plaintiff was notified by the secretary of the Metropolitan Building company to close the engagement. The plaintiff refused and notified the secretary to that effect.

During the night of June 1 and the morning of June 2 the plaintiff alleges that the defendants did wrongfully and against the protest of the plaintiff remove the scenery, costumes and belongings of the plaintiff from the building and refused to allow the plaintiff to re-enter the building or produce his plays there according to the conditions of the contract. The house was then taken possession of by the Wilbur Opera company.

The plaintiff further alleges that the defendant had been notified previous to the extension of the contract that the reasons for the extension were that the plaintiff wished to be able to contract ahead for players, plays and scenery. It is also claimed that the plaintiff had worked up a profitable business and a good reputation for his company among the theater-going public of Duluth by careful attention to the wants of the public and the securing of good actors at considerable expense.

He further claims that he had contracted for players ahead and that the action of the defendants had compelled him to retain these actors at considerable expense to himself, although he could not find profitable employment for them, as he was unable to secure an engagement for them elsewhere for the remainder of the time covered by the contract, and the company was compelled to disband here.

He computes his loss in the reputation which he had built up at heavy expense among the theatergoers in Duluth, together with the loss of his organization and the injury to his standing in the theatrical business at $10,000 and prays that the court award him that amount.

The bill further states that the loss in profits which would have accrued to the plaintiff if the alleged extended contract had been kept amounts to $6590, and the plaintiff asks that this sum be awarded him by the court.

The loss in plays, scenery, advertising matter and costumes, which were rendered practically useless by the action of the defendants, is estimated at $1580 and there is a further bill for freight on a carload of machinery and apparatus which was brought from Minneapolis, amounting to $55.28. These bills are also added to the amount.

The plaintiff estimates the loss sustained by him in salaries which he was compelled to pay actors, who had been contracted for and for whom he was unable to find profitable employment at $1742, making a total of $19,908.18.

The plaintiff asks that the court order the defendants to reimburse him to that amount, together with interest.

Washburn & Bailey are representing the plaintiff in the case.

THE FORBES BROS. AFFAIR

Remains In the Same Condition as on Saturday Afternoon.

"Hello?"

"Hello."

"Is this the office of Forbes Bros.?"

"This is the office of Robert Forbes."

This conversation over the telephone between the Herald office and that formerly occupied by Forbes Bros. in the Manhattan building just about expresses the present condition of affairs in the legal battle between the brothers A. A. Forbes and Robert Forbes, for the dissolution of the partnership and for an accounting.

In other words the situation is practically unchanged from that reported Saturday afternoon, so far as the receivership of Henry S. Ely is concerned.

Robert Forbes, at the order of the court, has turned over part of the books of the co-partnership to the receiver and C. C. Baldwin, attorney for Receiver Ely, said that the attorneys of the parties interested in the matter will get together and agree on a time for the remainder of the books, papers and efects to be turned over.

Mr. Arnold, attorney with George F. Davis, for the plaintiff, A. A. Forbes, is kept at West Superior today to attend another lawsuit and by an apparent tacit understanding of all parties there will be nothing doing until he is able to return and look after the interests of his client.

In the meantime, according to the defendants, there is no such thing as the office of Forbes Bros., and the office formerly occupied by a firm of that name is now to be known as the office of Robert Forbes.

Schedules Not Here.

None of the local railroad offices have received any notification of new rate schedules for certain freight commodities which were ordered reduced by the state warehouse and railroad commission last week.

The commission agreed to the proposition of the railroads for a reduction of 10 per cent on coal rates and 15 per cent of lumber, and some other tariffs were to be altered.

The railway rate men will meet and prepare the schedule of new rates, but will probably not have it in the hands of the contracting freight men before the first of the month.

MORE EVIDENCE OF WRONGDOING

Tons of Groff Fasteners Stored Away at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, June 29.—Evidence which would tend to show that there has been something wrong in the postal department at Washington for the past twelve or fourteen years, particularly in the branch presided over by Col. Machen, superintendent of free delivery, who is now under indictment, came to light in the Milwaukee postoffice today. Stored away in one corner of the basement is a big pile of Groff fasteners that were sent to Milwaukee for some unknown reason, and without requisition, about fourteen years ago. There are two and one-quarter tons of the fasteners in the basement of the federal building which will probably never be used unless they are shipped to Washington. None of them have been used since the day they were received, as they came during the early years of the late Postmaster George W. Porth's term of office. No one ordered them, so far as it has been possible to ascertain, and there was no use for them. There are 1590 sets of fasteners, each set weighing three pounds. The government paid, contract price, $1.25 per set. There is also stored in the basement of the federal building, a lot of galvanized iron mail boxes that are made in Michigan. These were received about three years ago without requisition.

SOME UNEASINESS

Caused By Movement Growing Out of Sermon.

Wilmington, Del., June 29.—Some uneasiness has been caused because of a movement growing out of the sensational sermon preached by Rev. M. W. Thornton, of the First African M. E. church last night, in which he urged the negroes to arm for their protection and to hold an indignation meeting tonight. Chief of Police Black advised leading negroes not to hold the meeting. They told him the meeting was not to discuss the lynching of the race. The chief told them that a meeting even for this purpose would be misconstrued at this time and they promised to try to have it abandoned.

MEMORIAL TO BESSEMER

Influential Englishmen Discuss Matter at Meeting.

London, June 29.—An influential meeting took place at the Mansion house today to discuss the erection of a memorial to Sir Henry Bessemer, the English inventor, toward which Andrew Carnegie recently promised to make a substantial subscription.

In the course of the discussion it was announced that King Edward was heartily in favor of the proposed memorial, which will form an important annex to the earl of Roseberry's scheme for the establishment of a great institution for advanced scientific and technological education at a cost of $1,500,000, towards which sum Werner, Beit & Co., the well-known diamond firm, and others, offer large contributions.

ONE HUNDRED BODIES

Taken From Wreck of the Bilboa Train.

Madrid, June 29.—By midnight 100 bodies had been extricated from the wreck of the Bilboa train which was overturned Saturday night from a bridge in the Negrilla river, and it is estimated that seventy corpses remain in the wreckage. The bodies are badly mutilated. That many prosperous persons are among the victims is testified to by the great quantity of money and jewelry collected by the gendarmes.

DEADLOCK EXISTS

Board of Public Works Divided on the Paving Contract.

The Fight Will Be Between Brick and Bituminous Macadam.

Up to a late hour this afternoon the board of public works was in a deadlock over the contract for the paving of Superior street between Third and Eighth avenues east.

It is said that one member favored vitrified brick, one bituminous macadam, and, strange as it may seem, one favored asphalt. The idea that asphalt had any show had never occurred to the property owners interested and consequently they did not take the trouble to make a protest on it.

However, it is said that asphalt stands very little show of getting the council's approval even if the asphalt member of the board should win over another member to his way of thinking.

The real fight seems to be between bituminous macadam and vitrified brick with the odds in favor of the brick and the price in favor of the macadam.

It is understood that A. Fitger & Co., who owns something like 400 feet of the property to be assessed for this improvement has come out point blank for vitrified brick and other property owners favor it, claiming that they prefer seeing an entire brick street to Eighth avenue east.

Assinine asphalt arguments were made before the board of public works this morning and it is probable that the same dope will be handed the council tonight, but the indications are that the council will turn down asphalt in a manner calculated to put it out of all future consideration.

YO HO! FOR THE GROG!

Harbor Whiskey Dissolves Steel But Saves Life.

Harbor whisky is not noted particularly for qualities that appeal to the connoisseur or the fastidious devotee of Bacchus in this or any other port, in spite of the statement of the famous Kentuckian who declared that all whisky is good, but a rollicking old sea captain, who has roved the ocean for forty-two years, buffeting fair and foul weather, solemnly declares that the same harbor whisky, which is about on a par the world over, has saved his life three times, says the San Francisco Chronicle. No one can substitute from the jolly old captain's story an argument in favor of intemperance; he himself admits that he lost his last job on a bay light ship as the result of overindulgence in the cups; and he is the strongest advocate of the New Year's vehicle known as the "water wagon" which one might find in a day's journey. The story, however, loses nothing from these deviations. Captain Thomas Broderson is known the length of the harbor and water front of San Francisco as an experienced old seaman, who has had a wealth of incidents in his life, in all parts of the globe, in almost every conceivable kind of craft—that would furnish material for volumes of enlivening reading. Spurred from his natural modesty in a water-front oasis to tell of some of his experiences at sea, he related in a simple, unaffected style how he had been saved from sure death three times by the seafaring groggeries of the ports of Hamburg, Germany, and of San Francisco. That the yarn is a true one goes without saying.

"'Twas years aback," said the captain, as he tipped a fresh one into his glass and refilled his lowfer, "and them were the days, I'm a telling you. Money was free and easy and we all had it. I was paid off from an English ship in Hamburg and went ashore with some of my mates, and put up at an English boarding house. I had a pocketful of good, hard money and paid for my board a month in advance. I expected to lark around and have a good time ashore for a few weeks before shipping in another vessel, and the matter of shipping was entirely in the hands of the boarding house master. Some of the men who were staying at this boarding house with me were among my best friends and I had sailed with them all over the seas. For weeks we fooled around that port, and finally it came time to think of getting a job. We had been free with our money and it was fast going the way of many a good sailor's earnings. Old Brady, the boarding house master, came in one night and said that he had found a ship for us and that we were to leave the following day. With that we got our bags packed up and prepared to have a grand time that night, as we were going on a long voyage, American voyages in a story time of year.

"The ship was a fast American-built schooner with a valuable cargo. She was the John Handy, sailing under the English flag, Captain Frank, and carried a big crew. Well, we went out that night and did the town proper. I never saw my bed, and I don't think any of my mates did. I think we went into every rathskeller in the place; but I drank beer first and then whisky. It was the latter which saved my life on that occasion, for I was so drunk the next morning that I couldn't make the ship when she up anchor. I was left, and the John Handy had cleared with all those good fellows in her. I was awful sorry to lose my berth, but there wasn't any help for it. I didn't get any other job in any other ship for a couple of weeks longer. In the meantime, the boarding house master came to me one day and said that I needn't be sorry I hadn't gone in the Handy. I asked him why, and Brady said that she had gone on the rocks off the mouth of the Elbe river, and that all hands were lost.

"When I heard that I drew a long breath and went out and had a few drinks," continued the captain, "and I couldn't help blessing Hamburg whisky, although it wasn't the best I ever took.

"The other times that whisky saved my life were right here in San Francisco, and you could throw stones from here to the places where I bought the whisky which kept me from sailing in ships that were fated. I had a friend here, a young fellow, years ago, that I thought a great deal of. He was a sober, hard-working, industrious sort of man, who had sailed between here and Germany for a number of years in merchant vessels, and he had been saving his money to marry his sweetheart back in Germany. He called San Francisco his home and expected to bring his bride here to live. He used to take me into some of these places along the waterfront, take out her picture and talk about her. I've seen a good many lovesick sailors, but this friend Jack, of mine, was the worst I ever saw. He didn't read German very well, and sometimes he would have to get help to read her letters. I helped him so... at times, and I could see from his girl's letters that she was awfully stuck on Jack and that she could scarcely wait for the ship that would bring him back to her.

"One day Jack came to me and said he knew of a ship that we could both sail in back to Germany, and that we could go aboard at any time and sign articles. She was a fine built craft, and a pretty sight in the water, and we both looked forward to a pleasant voyage. Jack signed up at once and got ready to go; but somehow or other I hung off and wasn't as anxious to get away as he was. I got to hitting up the whisky pretty hard and on the day that she sailed I couldn't have packed my bag if I had wanted to. The mate of the ship sent Jack to find me and get me aboard as quick as I could. Jack found me in such a shape that I could hardly navigate. Jack did his best to sober me up, but it wasn't any use; and he had to skip and leave me behind. He only just got aboard in time himself. The ship went down the harbor with Jack aboard, and that was the last ever seen of her. She got out into the open sea late in the afternoon, and by dark was out of sight of land. Jack's sweetheart wrote to me and to the agents of the ship, but no trace of her ever turned up; not even a body or a piece of wreckage was ever found. So poor Jack went to Davy Jones' locker, and here I am as sound and hale and hearty as I ever was."

The captain poured another libation, looked reminiscent, lit another rope, and observed that nobody could dispute his close call in the second instance when whisky saved him.

"The third time that whisky saved my life was when it prevented me from sailing in the brigantine Tahiti. I guess there are a great many people who remember what happened to her. They wanted a second mate aboard of her on her last trip out of San Francisco and I was recommended for the job. When I showed up aboard of her one morning I was about three sheets in the wind from booze and I didn't care a rap whether I shipped or not. They set me at work first on some sails that needed fixing, but I had so much whisky in me that I could hardly see the stitches while sewing. Finally I quit and went to the mate and said I couldn't do no sewing that night, so he told all right—for me to go in and get my dinner and come down the next day, which was Saturday. I didn't come Saturday, for I was sick from what I had to drink the day before. Sunday I was having too good a time to think of going aboard the Tahiti or any other craft in the bay. When Monday came the mate sent word for me that I was wanted right away. I was ashamed to go then, and got full again. Well, to make a long story short, the Tahiti sailed and months later was found, or a part of her was found, bottom up, north of Cape Horn; some of her was found off Mexico, and there were evidences that she had been in a terrible storm. Every soul aboard her was lost—they never even found a floater. Yes, its the truth that whisky saved me three times."

HIS SENSE OF HUMOR.

The board of school supervisors for the Walnut Ridge district was examining an applicant who desired the position of instructor, says Judge. The young man had satisfied them of his knowledge of geography, arithmetic and grammar. At this point the chairman of the board drew a magazine from his pocket, peered intently into it, and remarked:

"Well, young feller, now we'll see whether you're up in the English language. What's the meanin' o' incomprehensubble?"

"Incomprehensubble?" faltered the applicant. "Why, incomprehensubble means the proximity of the corollary to the molecular ingenuity."

"Uh, huh! An' what does disintegrate mean?"

"Disentegrate means the general consanguinity of the hyperbole when affiliated with the zodiac."

"Jest so," commented the chairman, nodding sagely at the other members. "Now, what is the definin' o' subliminal?"

"Subliminal is when the overplus goes into perihelion with the deductiveness of the instability and produces transfixity of the frangible protoplasms."

"You'll do," announced the chairman. The candidate, overjoyed, shook hands all round, and left to gather his belongings and arrange to move into the neighborhood.

"Purty smart feller, that," observed one member of the board.

"Yep," said the chairman. "Good joke on him, though, me a-makin' him think I knew all them big words, wasn't it?"

And down the road, about half a mile, the candidate was chuckling to himself.

"'Good joke on them. Blamed 'if I don't believe they think I knew what all them long words means."

HORSES WITH GREAT NAMES

It does beat all, the way some of the racegoing public pronounce the names of the horses at the track," said the scholarly looking gentleman at the Morris park one day recently, says the New York Telegraph.

"Now, for instance, I had a tip on one of Mr. Shield's horses, and going up to a bookmaker I asked him to put up $5 on Zoro-aster. That was the way I had heard it at college, anyway. Well, when I said that, the bookmaker looked at me as if he thought I was 'kidding' him, I suppose he would have said.

"'Yo' mean Zo-roaster, I guess,' he said quickly, taking my money. I bet he thought I was raised out in the tall grass.

"Then, again, another day I made a bet on a horse spelled M-i-n-o-t-a-u-r, and the bookie looked at me funnily. 'Ten dollars straight on Miniature,' was the way he called out, and I felt sheepish.

"I remember all last summer nearly everybody I heard called Jockey Lynn as if he was a tree—Lynn. I couldn't see how they got that out of it to save my neck. Then there was Sad-du-cee. I don't believe I ever heard it pronounced any way but 'Sawdesy' in the rign, with the accent on the middle. I heard one fellow call The Musketeer as if it was some of those insects which flies around bothering people at night. I will say, though, I only heard one pronounce it that way. Patronymic was nearly always said with the accent on the second syllable, and nowhere else. I heard Cinquevalli called so many different ways I wouldn't begin to settle down on any. I remember Nemesis was always Ne-mee-sis. Honest, after the jolt I got about Zoroaster it kind of took my nerve away. In the next race I didn't exactly know how the 'bookie' would pronounce the name of the horse, and fearing he might take me for a simpleton, I assumed an off-hand manner, and, going up to him, said: "Five dollars on No. 7, please."

"I remember once an old sailor spelling out the name of a yacht. It was Caprice. The way he got it was from the name of a man—C. A. Price. But, returning to the horses' names—whether the bookmakers know how to pronounce them or not, they evidently know much more about the horses' good and bad qualities than I do. I did not cash a bet."

TWO MOSQUITO YARNS.

They were telling mosquito stories. They had prevaricated right along, to the amusement of the listeners, and each was about to run out of yarns. Each felt that it was time to get in his best yarn, says the New York Times.

"Why, over in Jersey," said the Harlem man, "I was spending the night with a friend near a big swamp. After I crawled in bed I heard a crashing noise near my head, and turned around to find that a mosquito had been perambulating through the hallway, and got mad, and had driven his bill through the ceiling into my room. I jumped up, seized a monkey wrench, and bradded the bill on the inside. Then I walked through a side door, seized a shotgun, loaded it with buckshot, fired the whole load into that mosquito and went to bed again. Later on I heard another noise. Going out to investigate, I ascertained that the mosquito had broken his bill off and had gone out of the house minus a part of his probing aparatus. Three days later I saw that same mosquito eating a chicken it had caught."

"I believe you are a very strict church man," said the other man, "and, of course, you had to tell the whole truth about that story, but I'll tell you what is a fact. Down in the Florida Everglades there is a mosquito that beats yours. I was fishing on a creek one day when I heard an awful buzzing noise overhead. Looking up, I saw a mosquito flying along with a half-grown colored child under one wing and a grindstone under the other. Occasionally he would whet his bill on the grindstone and take a bite of the child. To show you that this story is true, I will cross my heart."

The third liar had prepared to say something, but he saw the threatening looks on the faces of the crowd and desisted.

A WONDERFUL TIMEPIECE.

"When in Japan not very long since I saw as remarkable a timepiece as I suppose the world contains," said Mr. William T. Crews of Newark, N. J., to the Washington Post.

"It was inclosed in a frame about three feet wide and five feet long, representing a noonday landscape of rare beauty. In the foreground appear plum and cherry trees and gorgeous plants in full bloom; in the rear there is a sloping hill, from which a cascade seems to flow, the crystal imitation being of wonderful likeness. A thread-like brook meanders from this point, encircling rocks and islands, and finally disappearing in a piece of woodland. In a miniature sky a golden sun, turning on a silver wire, strikes the hour on silver gongs as it passes.

"Each hour is marked in the frame by a creeping tortoise which takes the place of a hand. A bird of exquisite plumage warbles at the close of each hour, and as the song ceases a mouse sallies forth from a neighboring grotto and scampering over the hill to the garden is soon lost to view."

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION IN MINES AT HANNA, WYO.

Two Hundred Men Imprisoned In Workings.

Work of Rescue Prevented By the Dense Smoke.

Evanston, Wyo., June 30.—A report has just been received here that 200 men have been injured in the explosion that took place today in the coal mines at Hanna, Wyo.

Rawlins, Wyo., June 30.—A terrific explosion occurred in the coal mines at Hanna, Wyo., about 10 o'clock this morning. Nearly 200 men are said to have been in the mine at the time of the explosion. It is said that the mine took fire immediately and the relief force which was organized at once to rescue the entombed miners, have so far been unable to approach the entrance to the mine on account of the dense volumes of smoke. Unless the workmen are soon relieved, it is not believed that any will be found alive. Hanna is on a branch line of the Union Pacific and particulars of the explosion are hard to obtain.

Omaha, June 30.—At the Union Pacific headquarters in this city no details are known of the Hanna mine explosion. A report received here states that 200 men were in the mine at the time of the explosion and that a rescue party has been sent down the shaft. Until the rescuers shall have reached the scene of the explosion nothing will be known as to the extent of damage and the number of casualties. The mines are operated by the Union Pacific Coal company.

WOMAN KNOCKED DOWN AND ROBBED ON MILWAUKEE TRAIN

Was Followed Into Toilet Room By a Woman Who Struck Her With Blunt Instrument, Rendering Her Unconscious and Took $18,500.

Milwaukee, June 30.—Mrs. F. F. Adams, Jr., wife of the vice president of the F. F. Adams Tobacco company, reported to the police today that she had been sandbagged and robbed of $18,500 while on a train enroute to this city from Chicago last night.

Mrs. Adams stated that she had gone to Chicago Monday to draw her $25,000 inheritance from the First National bank, of that city. After paying some debts, she had started back on an evening train with $16,000 in cash and a certificate of deposit for $2500. On the way she went into the toilet room of the car, where another woman entered and struck her over the back of the head with a billy or some other blunt instrument, she says. She was knocked unconscious and robbed. Detective Dennis Sullivan was detailed on the case by Inspector Riemer.

POPE RIDES AROUND THE GARDENS

Rome, June 30.—The pope ascended to the vatican gardens this morning, for the first time this year, and was driven about for an hour and a half. He seemed to enjoy the air immensely, and noticed the changes made in the garden since last year. He was especially interested in the growth of the vines planted by himself and made inquiries regarding the prospects of the vintage. When the pope returned to his apartments he seemed not in the least fatigued and received several bishops.

CHAMBERLAIN'S PLAN GAINS FAVOR

New York, June 30.—The outspoken followers of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain in the house of commons are not waiting for a cabinet inquiry, but are consulting their constituencies respecting the proposed fiscal changes, says the London correspondent of the Tribune. Sir Gilbert Parker spoke before the Conservative club and Workers' party at Gravesend today, and after a discussion of all the issues raised by Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain, secured the unanimous passage of a resolution in favor of an exhaustive inquiry with a view to devising needed measures for checking the increasing inroads upon the home market and the export trade by protected foreign rivals, and for developing trade on a preferential basis between the mother country and the colonies.

Sir Gilbert's speech is a fresh proof that the readjustment of foreign trade by negotiations based on a moderate tariff is the principal object of the new fiscal proposals, and that taxes on imported food will be balanced in various ways.

WEAVING THE NET.

Evidence of Murder Very Much Against Knapp.

Hamilton, Ohio, June 30.—David Loeb, a furniture dealer, was the first witness called today in the trial of Alfred Knapp for the murder of his wife. He said that Knapp on Dec. 26 told him his wife was in Indianapolis. A. Moore, a junk dealer, said that he sold Knapp a box such as that in which his wife's body is said to have been placed on Dec. 22. George Cooley, a tinner, who knew Knapp, said on Dec. 22 he saw Knapp drive into Shollenbarger's livery barn with a wagon at 9:45 a. m. Later in the week Knapp told him that he had sent his wife to Cincinnati. Capt. of Police Lenehan told of arresting Knapp at Indianapolis, and detailed the investigation that lead to the discovery that Knapp's wife was missing, and pointed to her husband as her murderer.

HE MAY LIVE.

Dr. Neff Horribly Burned By Explosion of Gasoline.

Homer, Neb., June 30.—Dr. Neff, of the Sioux Falls, S. D., Dental company, arose early this morning to work over a soldering pot. The gasoline tank attached to the pot exploded and the flames communicated to his clothes. He rolled himself in the rug on the floor, but it was not large enough to put out the fire.

He then ran upstairs to his room and wrapped himself in the covers of his bed. His eyes were swollen shut by this time and he was almost helpless when another guest at the hotel was awakened and put out the fire. His flesh is literally cooked, but he may possibly live.

REMARKABLE OIL WELL.

Santa Barbara, Cal., June 30.—A remarkable oil well in the northern part of this country was opened last night. The first flow was at the rate of forty barrels a minute according to estimates of experts. The oil shot fifty feet above the top of the derrick. The depth of the well is about 2000 feet.

TO CARE FOR JEWS.

Steps Taken Towards Forming an Immigration Society.

Chicago, June 30.—Steps toward forming an international immigration society were taken last night at a meeting called by Dr. A. R. Levi. Resolutions were adopted favoring a federation of societies having for its purpose the bettering of the conditions of man by giving him an opportunity to get away from the cities. The immediate cause for the meeting was to make some arrangements for the handling of the masses of immigrants who are expected to pour into this country on account of the Kishineff massacres. Dr. Levi's plan is to interest the righ men and have them advance the money necessary to settle the immigrants on farms. Speeches were made by Jacob Labosky, Roman G. Lewis, F. W. Monroe, Henry M. Schabad, Raymond Ronebins, E. P. Rosenthal and Professor G. L. Griffiths.

INTIMATION MADE

By Russia Concerning Reported Interference of United States.

Will Know How to Answer Such an Attempt.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The following semi-official statement was issued today:

"There have been no negotiations between Russia and the United States in regard to President Roosevelt's intention to forward to the Russian government, a petition from the American Jews concerning the events at Kishineff, and no communication has been made to Russia by the United States government on this subject. But, had such been received Russia would naturally have known what to reply to such an attempt at interference in her internal affairs. The foregoing note was issued by the semi-official news agency.

New York, June 30.—A special cable dispatch to the World from Hamburg, Germany, reports an interview with the Grand Duke Vladimir, uncle of the czar of Russia, on the Jewish question in Russia. The grand duke said:

"The Jewish agitation is chiefly instigated by influential Jews outside of Russia, such as the members of the society in New York which has presented a petition, and especially the powerful Jews in Berlin.

"I do not in the least condone the civil administration. The governor (of Kishineff) although an old officer, decorated for bravery, appears to have lost his head. But directly application was made to the military authorities who cannot intervene without being requested to do so—the crisis was ended in two or three hours. Military assistance was summoned too late and the governor has since then been removed."

The grand duke was asked what reception would be given the American petition in Russia. He replied: "There can be no question of intervention by America in the purely internal affairs of Russia. Nevertheless I am aware that the relations between Russia and America are of a very cordial nature, especially since 1849 when a Russian fleet visited New York."

St Petersburg, June 30.—As a result of the petition presented by the deputation from the mercantile community of Kishineff which waited on Finance Minister Witte, June 26, asking for a moratorium for bills of exchange and other facilities to rehabilitate the credit of those who suffered from the recent events, the state bank at Kishineff has been ordered to discount bills of Kishineff firms which were protested during the months of April and May.

It is asserted that no less than fifty-seven Russian warships of one sort and another are assembled at Port Arthur. The Japanese reserve officers who were on leave in North China are said to have been called home.

BRING GOOD PRICES.

Strong Competition For the Chevely Park Stud.

The highest price paid was 28,000, by Lord Marcus Beresford, on behalf of King Edward, for the mare Medora, with a bay colt by Ladas.

For Hauteese also with a colt, by Ladas, A. L. Foote, representative of August Belmont stayed longest in the bidding and the mare, which is the dam of the winners Haughty, Hartenbas, Rising Glass and Set Fair, became his at 23,000.

Mr. Belmont's representative also purchased the chestnut mare Fair Gold for $18,000. William C. Whitney's agent took the mare Jeunnse Dore with a filly by Whittier, for $17,500, and Snowy Carrie with a colt for $13,000.

SHIPS SAIL AWAY

Visit of American Squadron to Kiel Has Ended.

Cutter From Kaiser Wilhelm Beats Men From Chicago.

Kiel, June 30.—The United States squadron sailed at 6 p. m. today from Kiel, all the ships saluting and the Americans replying. The flagship Kearsarge, the Chicago and the San Francisco will go through the Cattegat, stopping at Kallundborg, Denmark, for two days. The Machias will go by way of the Kiel canal to Brunsnell, and thence will rendezvous with the other American ships south of Spithead. The squadron will arrive at Portsmouth, July 7.

Kiel, June 30.—The visit of the United States European squadron to Kiel is draking to an end. The last salutes of the imperial standard were fired as the Hohenzollern sailed for Eckernfoerde this morning to accommodate the emperor and empress there tonight, after the finish of the cruiser yacht race. The emperor started for Eckernfoerde on board the Meteor at 7 a. m. The empress was on the Iduna, which also started for Eckernfoerde.

The American naavl officers will attend a series of receptions on board the German warships this afternoon.

The fourteen-oar cutter of the German turret ship Kaiser Wilhelm II beat the United States cruiser Chicago's twelve-oar cutter today in a race over a two-mile course, covering the distance in twenty-three seconds' better time. The winning German cutter, on account of having an extra pair of oars, started fifteen seconds after the Chicago's cutter, and finished eight seconds ahead.

The Kaiser Wilhelm II's cutter is the champion of the German squadron, and won a cup from twelve other German fourteen-oar cutters yesterday. The crew, which was in excellent training, challenged the best boat of the American squadron, which was the Chicago's, the winner of several competitions in Mediterranean ports this spring. After about a mile and a quarter of the course had been covered, the nose of the Kaiser Wilhelm II's boat drew level with the stern of the Chicago's boat, and eventually, inch by inch, passed the latter and pulled away from her. The Americans kept up a losing race most manfully, but they continued to lose ground until the finish.

INDIAN COMMISSIONER JONES NOT CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

Of Wisconsin, Being Perfectly Satisfied With His Present Position as Head of the Indian Bureau and Not Seeking Further Honors.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Washington Post this morning publishes a special dispatch from Milwaukee to the effect that the commissioner of Indian affairs, W. A. Jones, is likely to be the next candidate for governor of Wisconsin. Commissioner Jones said this morning to The Herald correspondent that he was not in any sense a candidate, being perfectly satisfied with his present position as head of the Indian bureau. He said: "I am out of politics and I am not considering for a moment the suggestion that I enter the race for the gubernatorial nomination. I am happy and contented in my present position and do not seek further honors. Should, however, the nomination be thrust upon me, I must say I should feel greatly honored, and, of course, accept its responsibility. I do not desire it, however, and really do not think for a minute that my friends in Wisconsin are seriously considering me as a candidate for such a great honor as the position of governor of Wisconsin."

ALABAMA SHERIFF WOUNDED WHILE DEFENDING THE JAIL

Mob Was After a Negro and Was Held at Bay By the Officer Until Shot—Prisoner Was Secured and Lynched.

Nashville, June 30.—A special to the Banner from Scottsboro, Ala., says: Andrew Diggs, a Negro, was taken from the jail last night and hanged by a mob. The Negro was arrested Sunday for an attempt to assault Misss Alma, the 19-year-old daughter of Dr. B. B. Smith.

The sheriff seized two pistols when the mob arrived and, mounting the stairs, said he would kill any one who tried to come up. The threat was received with a volley of shots, and the sheriff returned the fire. One shot took effect in the sheriff's right leg, and the other in his pistol arm. The daughter of the sheriff ran to his aid, but by threats by members of the mob, who had a pistol, she was forced to deliver the keys to the cell in which the Negro was locked. One of the masked men summoned a doctor, who dressed the wounds of the sheriff, which are not dangerous.

The Negro made a confession to the brother of the young woman and to others who visited the jail after his capture.

PRESIDENT TO WITNESS BIG RACES

Oyster Bay, June 30.—President Roosevelt has expressed his intention to witness the international yacht race between the American defender, Reliance, and the Shamrock III, to be sailed on Aug. 20. He will go to the course over which the race is to be sailed on the Mayflower. Sir Thomas Lipton recently extended to the president a cordial invitation to witness the races from his yacht, the Erin, but while appreciating the invitation and the spirit which prompted it, President Roosevelt felt obliged to decline it.

Governor Hunt, of Porto Rico, Senator Long, of Kansas, and former Postmaster General Wilson Bissell, of Buffalo, arrived here today and were the president's guests at luncheon.

The societies of the Holy Name, of Brooklyn and Long Island will hold an open air meeting here on July 26. It is expected that President Roosevelt will deliver an address to the several thousands in attendance.

The object of the societies is to curb the practice of profane swearing.

SHIPBUILDING TRUST HELD TO BE INSOLVENT

PLATFORM FIXED

Iowa Republicans Are Agreed on the Tariff Plank.

Words Objected to By "Stand Patters" Are Omitted.

Des Moines, June 30.—Predictions made today were that the Republican state convention, which will convene here at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, will be the shortest ever held in the state. It is expected that the convention will adjourn by 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. A full state ticket will be nominated.

The platform has evidently been agreed upon as regards the tariff. It is known that the words that were most objectionable in the platform to the "stand patters" will be omitted. The makeup of the committee on platform has not been fully determined and the committee practically will be evenly divided between the two factions of the party, which might be termed the tariff reformers and the "stand patters." But the makeup of the committee will have little to do with the platform on the tariff as that is in the hands of Senator Allison by general consent. George Perkins, of Sioux City, is the compromise temporary chairman. It was expected that Congressman Hepburn would be permanent chairman, but Mr. Hepburn will be on the committee on platform instead. The Cummins men are bringing forward M. E. Kendall, of Albia, for permanent chairman. There is no particular friction between the factions. The only contest will be on state superintendent of public instruction, for which there are three candidates. The present incumbent, Mr. Barrett, aspires to a fourth term and the opposition to him is on the fourth term principle. The opposing candidates are J. F. Riggs, of Sigourney, and Adams, of Fayette.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, who is a delegate, arrived this morning. Secretary Shaw and Speaker Henderson will not be present.

A Receiver Will Be Named to Conduct Affairs.

Court Says Bondholders Were Not Protected.

Newark, N. J., June 30.—Judge Kirkpatrick today announced to counsel representing complaining bondholders of the United States Shipbuilding company that he had read all the papers in the case, and had decided that the corporation is insolvent, and that its directors had failed to take proper steps to protect the bondholders, and seemed to be without ability to raise funds. "Therefore, in the interest of the bondholders, both those who appear here as complainants and all the others, he said, I shall appoint receivers. I will hear counsel as to whom they may desire to name."

Charles C. Deming, for the defendant corporation, asked if it was not possible to postpone consideration of the actual appointment until tomorrow at 2 o'clock, but both Samuel Intermeyer and R. V. Lindabus objected. It was finally agreed that the order should be signed immediately, and that counsel would have until tomorrow to agree on a suitable person for the appointment, but if no agreement is reached the court will name the receiver tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

VICAR WRITES A SCATHING LETTER TO BISHOP POTTER

He Intimates That the Bishop Is Neither a Christian Nor a Gentleman, and That He Has Violated His Oath to the Church.

New York, June 30.—The Rev. R. C. Fillingham, vicar of Hexton, England, apostle of anti-ritualism, who will sail for England today, has sent another letter to Bishop Henry C. Potter, in which he says:

"I had no idea of making a commotion in this city. Traveling for rest, I attended public worship, not the worship of God, but of a senseless bun at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, on Sunday week, and I felt compelled to call your attention and that of the public to the idolatry of which I am the witness. Your reply was not worthy of a Christian or a gentleman, and I have no doubt but that by this time you are heartily ashamed of it. For my part, I condone a letter evidently written in a moment of hotheaded passion.

"I am, if God spares me, to return to this country early in the new year and conduct a campaign against idolatry here and in other cities of the United States. My American friends do not regard me as an impertinent interloper, but are glad to join hands with one of the Anglo-Saxon race, from whichever side of the ocean he may happen to come.

"I wish to remind you of one thing before I leave. When you were consecrated to the high office of bishop you were asked: 'Are you ready, with all faithful diligence, to banish and drive away from the church all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's word, and, both privately and openly, to call upon and encourage others to do the same?' Solemnly, in the presence of God and the congregation, at the most serious moment of your life, you replied: 'I am ready, the Lord being my helper.'

"I merely want to ask you now, was that a lie or the truth? Were you lying to God when you were consecrated bishop of New York? You know as well as I do that the blasphemous memoirs, the mass and the bun-worship are held by our common church to be 'erroneous and strange doctrine.' Will you do what you promises, calling on God to help you, or will you not?

"That is all I have to ask you. I hope the American public will find by your answer that you are a true man; a man resolved to do his duty and keep his word."

FIRST NEWS FROM THE YUKON BASIN SINCE LAST MARCH

Steamer Brings In Many Passengers to Dawson Who Tell of Rich Strikes, as Well as of Thousands of Miners Without a Cent.

Seattle, Wash., June 30.—A special to the Post Intelligencer from Dawson says: The first news since March rfom the vast stretch of 2000 miles down the Yukon basin from Eagle to St. Michael and Tanana, Koyut and Rampart camps and Kuskowin Water-Shed, came today on the steamer Rock Island from Andreafski. The steamer has passengers from all camps mentioned, mostly from the Tanana. They report hundreds of miners at the mouth of Tanana river with no money to pay fare up, but going down the Yukon. Four thousand people are in camp there.

Indians from Kuskowin, who arrived at Andreafski report that the steamer Anna Wanda, belonging at Lynn's post, was lost when the ice went out. Damage was also done to the post.

A big strike has been made on Hug creek, in the Koyukuk. The camp has 300 men all well supplied.

Mrs. Durffe, better known as Corinne Gray, committed suicide at Rampart by shooting.

Dr. D. C. Medill, formerly of Dawson, was elected mayor of Fairbanks.

Judge James Wickersham and party of five have joined the Cook's expedition.

SKUPSHTINA FORMALLY DISSOLVED

Belgrade, June 30.—At the meeting of the skupshtina, today, Premier Avakumovics read a ukase closing the session specially summoned by the provisional government, June 11. After reading the ukase, the premier thanked the skupshtina in behalf of the government for the election of King Peter, and added that the government had concluded that it was better to postpone all legislation until the new skupshtina was elected. The premier pledged the government to see that the elections were carried out with perfect freedom, so that the result may truly represent public opinion.

The elections are expected to take place in the middle of September, and will doubtless result in a considerable increase in the number of extra Radicals in the house. The king has already promised that the new cabinet shall be composed in accordance with the results of the elections.

CARPET CLEANING NETS $9000

San Francisco, June 30.—The carpets of the adjusting rooms of the United States mint have been taken up and treated to a process for removing the gold dust. A bar of gold valued at $9000 was the result. The carpets were laid six years ago. In the adjusting rooms the coins are filed down to proper weight and the finer gold sinks into the carpets.

LIGHTNING KILLS WORSHIPERS

Chicago, June 29.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Zanesville, Ohio, says: Lightning struck the Presbyterian church at New Concord last night, killing A. H. Alexander, prostrating his young daughter in the same seat beside him, and also Miss Rose Madden, the organist. Olive Alison, seated near, had her shoe ripped off and foot badly injured. A panic ensued, in which several children were slightly injured.

One of the Many Thousand Homes Where Pe-ru-na is the Family Medicine

[Many Women Have Catarrh and Do Not Know It.]

Peruna Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

Mrs. F. Desaulmiers, 211 Dorchester street, Montreal, Canada, writes:

"Peruna is of untold blessing to women. Peruna builds up the entire system and makes you well. I have the greatest faith in it, for I have never yet found it to fail either my family or myself in time of sickness. I have known it to cure cases of chronic catarrh and stomach troubles of long standing. We do not need a doctor as long as we have Peruna."—Mrs. F. Desaulmiers.

For the most acute cases of dyspepsia and the most chronic and stubborn cases of catarrh of the stomach Peruna is an unfailing cure.

Mr. E. E. Gaston, of Milton, Iowa, in a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, says:

"My wife has been sick with stomach trouble for almost three years.

"During that time we doctored with three of the best doctors in this part of the country, but they did her no good. She fell off in flesh from 134 pounds to 9 pounds, and was unable to do anything; in fact, was confined to her bed a good part of the time. Everything she ate she would throw up, even water. The last doctor we had examined her and said she had cancer of the stomach, and said he could do her no good except to give her something to relieve the pain, and that he would not advise us to have an operation performed. This coming from one whom I have always had great confidence in, you cannot imagine my feelings and thoughts.

"It was then we decided to quit doctoring and try Peruna, and from the beginning it helped her. She is now able to do all the housework. She is gaining in flesh, and I think will soon be back to her former weight.

"To make a long story short, we owe her life to Peruna, for I am satisfied had we not tried it she would now be in the grave."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

FIVE LOSE RAISE

Sixteen Postoffice Clerks Instead of Twenty-one Get $100 Advance.

Only One Clerk To Be Added—Six New Carriers Allowed.

The effect of the general reduction throughout the country in the proposed additions to the postoffice force and increases in salaries, is felt in Duluth. Five of the twenty-one clerks whose salaries were to be advanced July 1 will continue to draw the same wages, and only one of the two extra clerks that were expected to be added to the local force will be put on. The six extra carriers will, however, be added.

All the changes take effect tomorrow, which is the commencement of the fiscal year in all the government departments. Sixteen of the clerks will receive a raise of $100 a year in their salaries, six new carriers will be added to the local force and one new clerk, Francis R. Haskins, of 2091 Huron street.

"We have been very liberally treated by the department," said Postmaster Fisher today in speaking of the changes. "Of course we are sorry the other boys did not get their advance in salary, but the Duluth postoffice force is the best paid in the state. Our men receive from $500 to $1100 and, I think, will average better than any other postoffice force in Minnesota. The chief clerks and superintendents receive from $1300 to $1400.

"Our carriers receive $850 a year. When we can get a census of Duluth that will show a population of 75,000 our office will be rated as a first-class office and the carriers will receive $1000 a year. The showing of the state census in 1905 may be accepted by the department.

"Every route in the city will be changed tomorrow. They will all be cut down and we will be able to give better service both in collecting and delivery. The new routes of Park Point and Duluth Heights will be added. I have not yet heard from Washington concerning the Woodland free delivery but expect word any day. That suburb has been recommended and the chances are that it will get it.

"Before a district can obtain free delivery it must have numbered houses, sidewalks and lights.

"The new routes will not be in good working order for one or two days. Our men have to go over the territory and obtain the names of all the residents on the route. In this way we obtain a very accurate census of all new territory.

"We have now thirty-nine carriers and with the addition of the six new ones the number will be forty-five. There are twenty clerks at the head office which will be increased to twenty-one and counting the nine clerks at the sub-stations thirty. There are eight substitute carriers and clerks on the eligible list.

"The increases in the force are fully warranted by the increased business of the local office. Our receipts have shown a very large and steady increase during the past year. This increase has been at the rate of about 25 per cent and I think the total receipts for the year will be in excess of $90,000. Our report for the year is now being prepared and will be made public within a few days."

THE LUMBER SHIPMENTS

June Total Will Run To About Sixty Million Feet.

Notwithstanding the many vessels which have gone out of the lumber trade, the amount shipped from the head of the lakes for June is about 60,000,000 feet.

While not as large a volume as is recorded for the three ports at the head of the lakes, lumbermen say that it is good showing, especially in the face of the general feeling that lumber shipments are off.

Within the past seven days the shipments from the port of Duluth aggregated 13,000,000 feet.

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

Argument In Accident Insurance Case Heard.

In Judge Dibell's room in district court, today, the plaintiff in the action of Jennie Maginnis against the Union Casualty and Surety company is arguing a motion for a new trial. The case was tried some months ago in district court and the court directed the jury to return a verdict for the defendant.

The plaintiff brought the action to recover $250 the amount of an accident insurance policy issued to her son, Christopher Maginnis, who fell on an icy sidewalk on Fifth avenue west, a year ago last winter and received injuries from which he died almost immediately. The defense was that the autopsy showed a deceased condition of one of the large arteries and that death was liable to have happened at any other time from overexertion.

BY OVER A MILE

The Reliance Beat Her Rivals In Second of Series.

Bateman's Point, R. I., June 30.—The second of the present series of races for the cup yachts, was started off Brentano's reef lightship today in what promised to be a duplicate of yesterday's fine racing weather. The early morning conditions, as on yesterday, were anything but propitious, but about 10 o'clock a fine breeze sprang up which soon attained a strength of seven or eight knots. Instead of a triangular course, as was expected, the course was the same as yesterday's—a beat to windward of fifteen miles and a run to the finish line, thirty miles in all.

The preparatory gun was fired at 11:30, with all three yachts at the line. Ten minutes later the warning signal was fired when the boats at the westward end of the line maneuvered to get into position to fetch the lightship on the starboard tack. During the next five minutes the fight for place was sharp and interesting.

The Columbia, however, had by far the best of the start, both she and the Reliance crossing on the starboard tack, the older boat being in a good place on the Reliance's weather quarter. The Constitution, which was to the leeward of the other two boats, apparently left her rivals cross nearly a minute ahead of her and then swing around and headed for the line on the port tack. The starting, as seen from the shore, was as follows: Columbia, 11.45.26. Reliance, 11.45.38; Constitution, 11.46.25.

The wind increased to about twelve knots, and half an hour after the start it looked as if the Columbia was still holding her lead on the Reliance, with the Constitution a short distance astern. The Constitution sailed better than yesterday.

So rapidly did the yachts sail the course that they appeared out in the mist shortly after 2 o'clock. At 2:45 the Reliance, which apparently had a commanding lead over her rivals, was within a mile and a half of the lightship.

In splitting the tacks of the beat down to windward mark, the Reliance seemed to gain on the Columbia. All three of the yachts made frequent short legs, and when the turn was reached the Reliance appeared from here to have established herself in the leading place.

A mist set in which prevented positive identification of the yachts, but from her sail spread it looked as if the Reliance was leading the other two by nearly a mile. The Constitution and the Columbia appeared to be close together.

The Reliance crossed the finish line at 3.00.47, more than a mile ahead of the other two boats, which were, apparently, sailing side by side.

The Constitution crossed the line at 3.08.4; Columbia at 3.06.52.

New York, June 30.—Weather indications were more favorable today for the trials between Shamrock I and Shamrock III and it was believed a good day's work would be possible in the tuning up of the challenger. The Erin took the Shamrock III in tow shortly after 11 o'clock and started past Sandy Hook. They were followed in a few minutes by the Shamrock I in tow of the Cruiser.

New York, June 30.—(By De Forest wireless from the Erin)—Sir Thomas Lipton said today's trial would be a beat to windward and a run back, if there was any wind.

The Shamrocks started at 12:3 p. m. from Sandy Hook lightship. Fifteen minutes after crossing the line something holding Shamrock III's main sheet gave way and her main sail was lowered and she headed for Sandy Hook under jib. Shamrock I. followed her. The accident was not serious. Erin took Shamrock III for Sandy Hook. Today's proposed race was abandoned. It was to have been a 15-mile beat to windward and return. A twelve-knot breeze was blowing at the time of the mishap.

The iron bar which holds the main sheet to the deck on Shamrock III broke. There was no other damage.

IS COMING TO DULUTH

Michael Lynch is the name of the man alleged to have killed Frank Melanda in a fight in a resort a little way out of Buhl, Sunday evening last. County Attorney McClintock and Deputy Sheriff Bates, who went to Buhl yesterday, are expected to arrive in the city this afternoon, and Lynch will be brought back with them for safe keeping in the county jail.

A hearing was held in Buhl yesterday, and Lynch was bound over to await the action of the next grand jury on the charge of murder.

The reports that have reached the city relative to the killing are somewhat different. One story is that Melanda, his brother John, and several were at the resort when Lynch arrived. One of the Melanda party is said to have gone to another room and, returning shortly, announced he had been robbed. His friends then started an investigation and a fight occurred between the Lynch and Melanda factions. Melanda is claimed to have flourished a pistol and a knife, and his brother was armed with a knife.

Another story is that a free fight was in progress with the Melanda party against John McGuire, the bartender, and Lynch and his friends; that Lynch being hard pressed, struck out blindly with a heavy poker and fractured the skull of Melanda, inflicting a wound from the effects of which the latter died within half an hour. Lynch and McGuire are said to have defended themselves by throwingn glasses.

Lynch is reported to have been ignorant of the injury to Melanda until after quiet was restored. The inquest was to have been held at Buhl this morning.

TEN THOUSAND WERE KILLED

London, June 30.—The war office today received a dispatch from Col. Rochfort, one of the British officers serving with the Abyssinians, May 10, after a series of forced marches, struck the Mad Mullahs' forces near Jeld, surprising them at dawn and killing 10,000 spearmen and capturing almost all their cattle and sheep and 10,000 camels.

Col. Rochfort adds that the Abyssinians have effectually closed to the Mullah all the watering places south of the Gerlogui Bi Galadi line and he hopes they will soon be in contact with the British forces and thus be able to co-operate in the pursuit of the Mullah, who is delayed in his movements in the fact that he is crossing a waterless part of the country.

While Love was reading the letter, Hill, without warning, drew a pistol and fired at the comptroller. The ball entered in the region of the heart. Love sank to the floor, when Hill fired another shot, striking Love in the back.

J. W. Stephens, an employe of the department, who was working nearby in Love's private office, rushed in and tried to take the pistol away from Hill. In the struggle the pistol was discharged and Hill was shot in the breast.

ADVANCE IN RATES

Report of Council Committee On Requested Telephone Raise.

Does Not Think Company Can Make Present Rate Pay.

There is every indication that the city will so amend the franchise of the Zenith City Telephone company as to permit a maximum rate of $38 a year for business telephones, but no change will be made in the rate of $20 a year for residence telephones.

The council committee, in recommending it, made the following report, which is of more than ordinary interest in view of the fact that there is strong sentiment against allowing any advance:

"The citizens of the city desire, undoubtedly, to receive the best service possible at the least possible cost, and it is the opinion of the committee that if the said telephone company could continue to do business and make necessary extensions without increasing the rates charged to telephone users that then undoubtedly it would be the duty of this council to refuse to allow any increase in such rates. The committee has considered the entire telephone question and deem it advisable to set forth in this report a portion of the history of the telephone controversy.

"The Duluth Telephone company had a franchise granted by the state of Minnesota, which gave very little power to the council to regulate said company, or the charges to be made for service. In 1897 Mayor Truelsen, in his annual message to the council, called attention to the condition of affairs, setting forth that no telephones were furnished for less than $50 per annum, while many other cities enjoyed a much lower rate. In addition to being compelled to pay an exorbitant price for the 'phones, the users of the same were compelled to put up with a very poor and inadequate service, and in many instances were compelled to pay the cost of instituting service.

"The ensuing year the council passed an ordinance providing for the receiving of bids for a franchise for a telephone system in the city of Duluth, and setting forth the requirements as to rentals to be charged, method of construction, quality of material etc. At this time it was supposed that the franchise of the Duluth Telephone company would soon expire, as the term provided by the act of the legislature would soon be at an end. In response to bids called for under said ordinance the Duluth Telephone company stood on the rights claimed under the act of the legislature, and in their communication to the common council, presented at the meeting of June 16, 1899, stated "that in our judgment the terms or requirements enacted therein as essential to a proposal which would meet the approval of your honorable body render it impracticable for thee company to undertake to keep and peramnently operate first class telephone service in this city."

"The predecessor of the Zenith City Telephone company, R. H. Evans, submitted a proposition conforming practically to the terms prescribed in the ordinance, and he was subsequently granted a franchise to erect and operate a telephone system in the city of Duluth, which franchise was transferred to the Zenith City Telephone company, which proceeded to erect the same, although during that summer the prices of materials advanced very materially, especially the price of copper wire. The Duluth Telephone company has since that time secured a decision of the courts that said company has a right to occupy the streets of the city and to do a telephone business in the city of Duluth.

"The committee is of the opinion that the Zenith City Telephone company has given a reasonable service and has shown much enterprise in building up a system in opposition to the old company, which had very strong financial backing. From correspondence with most of the cities in the United States and from reports received from the secretary of the League of American Municipalities, we find that in very few places as low a rental is charged for telephones as is charged by the Zenith City Telephone company in Duluth and that practically in all cases where there is no opposition to the Bell telephone, a very much higher rate is charged. There are, however, cities in the United States corresponding in size to Duluth, where the rate charged is as low as in Duluth, but these are the exception, and in the opinion of your committee they are cities which offer exceptional advantages for constructing and conducting an exchange cheaply. Duluth is an exceptionally expensive city within which to build a telephone system, being spread out over a large stretch of land and necessitating at least two sub-stations besides the main station, and requiring a greater length of wire and number of poles than most cities and it is more difficult to set the poles.

"In addition to the cheap rates afforded by the franchise of the Zenith City Telephone company, subscribers have the advantage of being able to use the Superior system without cost. By direction of the common council, the city comptroller has made an examination and report to this council of the receipts and disbursements of the Zenith City Telephone company, by which it appears that on the present charges the receipts are not sufficient to pay the cost of maintenance and operating expenses, and consequently no interest whatever on capital invested. We have also secured and submit herewith a statement of cost of construction, maintenance, operation and earning capacity of said plant.

"If the rates charged by said company should not prodice an income sufficient to pay the standing charges and operating expenses of said company, it is not reasonable to suppose that said company will continue the operation of said telephone system, and from past experience the citizens of the city of Duluth would not receive from the Duluth Telephone company the consideration, privileges and concessions which are granted on account of the competition of the Zenith City Telephone company, and if the fact should be established that the plant of the Zenith City Telephone company could not be operated by the rentals authorized by the present franchise, and said company should be forced to sell its interest to the Bell Telephone company, then it would be very doubtful if any other person or company could be induced to enter the field against the old company.

"We are of the opinion that while said company might continue their system as at present installed for a limited length of time, that said company cannot extend its system or make necessary improvements in the way of placing its wires underground without a slight concession from the city as to the rates to be charged. We believe that it would be unwise to allow any increase in the rates charged for private houses. We consider that there is very little increase in the use of the telephone in the private houses on account of the increase in the total number of subscribers, while the proportionate increase in the business 'phones by the increase in the number of subscribers is large.

"We would therefore recommend that the ordinance granting the franchise of said telephone company be amended by providing that said company shall be allowed to charge not to exceed $38 per annum for telephones used for business purposes."

REUNION EFFECTED

Wife and Husband Are Brought Together Here.

The police and hotel employes at the Spalding have just succeeded in reuiting an estranged couple.

The wife came to Duluth several days ago in search of her husband, and reported the matter to the police. They will give out no names for publication.

It was known that the man had received letters addressed to the Spalding hotel, but it was supposed they were forwerded under a fictitious name.

For two days the wife was stationed on the parlor floor, from where she could look down into the lobby and watch for her husband. Sunday she spied him coming in and asking for mail.

She told the officer detailed on the case, and it was found that he was over at Superior, stopping in a hotel, and getting his mail on this side.

The husband was brought into a conference with the wife and the police, and promised to be good and go home to Minneapolis and live happy ever afterwards. They left last night for home.

The man is said to be quite a prominent man in the Twin Cities and is connected with a large publication.

LACKING IN PRIDE

Little Interest Shown In Good Lawn Contest.

Today is the last day for entries in the best kept lawn contest inaugurated by the Women's council and the Commercial club. Interest in the contest has not been quite as much as was anticipated, in fact it is said there are only about thirty people who have indicated a desire to contest for the prizes and at that some of the wards in the city are not yet represented.

The joint committee of the Women's council and the Commercial club will meet at the club rooms Thursday evening to consider the applications and outline plans for looking after the lawns which will figure in the contest.

The Commercial club committee having in charge the phrase contest has not yet held a meeting to select the winner but it is likely that one will be held before the end of the week.

An Expensive Strike.

The strike commission estimates that in the recent great anthracite coal strike the miners, operators and transportation companies lost nearly $1,000,000,000. Strikes are always expensive and the sooner these differences are settled by arbitration the better it will be for all parties concerned. To quickly settle any disturbance of the stomach it is only necessary to take a few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters at the first symptom. It will strengthen and tone up this important organ and cure dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness and liver complaints. You will then enjoy good health. Try a bottle and test it for yourself. You'll be pleased with the result, the same as thousands of others have been during the past fifty years. Your druggist will supply you with the genuine.

ARREST AT WINNIPEG.

Editor of Free Press Charged With Libel.

Winnipeg, June 30.—Much commotion was caused in Winnipeg by the arrest of J. W. Dafoe, managing editor of the Manitoba Free Press, on a charge of criminal libel preferred by D. H. McFadden, provincial secretary in the Roblin government. In addition to this Mr. McFadden has also commenced criminal proceedings against the Manitoba Free Press company.

Mr. McFadden's action is due to the charge made by the Free Press that while he was minister of public works in 1900 he help up the estimates of George H. MacDonnell, a contractor for the Boyne-Marsh company, until the latter paid over $5000 to the Conservative campaign fund. The charge was in Wednesday morning's Free Press, and has been repeated each morning since.

Mr. McFadden was out of the city when the charge was made and did not arrive until Thursday evening, when he published a statement making a vigorous denial of the charges. As the Free Press ignored this statement and repeated the accusation in last Friday evening's edition, Mr. Fadden took the action before referred to, and says he will push the case to the bitter end.

Importance is lent to the charges and to the arrest by the fact that a general election is only a few weeks off. Mr. Dafoe appeared before the magistrate and was released on bail.

CROWN PRINCE

Of Sweden Would Sell His Ancestral Palace.

Stockholm, June 30.—The crown prince of Sweden, presumably under financial pressure, wants to sell his ancestral palace at Stockholm. He has applied to the king to submit a bill to the riksdag authorizing him to dispose of it. This palace was bequeathed in 1753 by the Princess Sophie Albertine to the second son of King Gustave III, Duke Charles Gustave, on condition that the palace should never be sold, and that if the duke should die without heir it should become the property of the successive crown prince. If it is sold it will not become the property of the state, but will be acquired by a banker, Mr. Wallenberg, who has offered $625,000 for it, and intends to convert it into a private bank. The people of Sweden are much displeased over the affair.

ATTEMPT AGAIN

Northern Pacific Again Applies For Abatement of Taxes.

Will Come Before County Board at Next Meeting.

If the Northern Pacific Railway company fails to get an abatement of its taxes on local realty that is not actually used for railroad purposes, it will not be through any neglect on the part of the corporation's tax officials.

The company has already filed with County Auditor Halden a new application for a reduction of its valuation and abatement of its taxes. The application is to be presented to the board of county commissioners when the next meeting occurs, which will be Wednesday afternoon of this week.

The application of the railway company is really the most important thing filed thus far for the consideration of the commissioners at the Wednesday meeting. It will have to go through the same process as the old application, that of being referred to the committee on taxes, which committee will probably report it back to the board with recommendations at the regular meeting of the county board next month.

It is not likely that there will be much, if any, discussion over the application of the railway company Wednesday, unless it be in reference to the situation as it has developed since County Auditor Halden refused to certify the board's recommendation on the old application, to the state auditor.

The new application differs from the application turned down by the county auditor only in that it is made out in the legal form where the former application was not. The reductions asked for are the same as the county board finally voted to recommend to the state auditor.

There is a feeling in the county official circles that the tax committee of the county board will report favorably on the application of the railway company, but in case it does, predictions are freely made that the measure will not receive so strong support among the commissioners as the old application did, and that other taxpayers in the city have been bringing all influence possible to bear on their commissioners to convince them that the city has not assessed the railway company too high, according to the assessed valuation of property adjoining that of the corporation.

Before the commissioners voted on the application that was made by the Northern Pacific company for a reduction of valuation and an abatement of taxes, a protest was made by the Commercial club of West Duluth, and the new application opens the way to further protest if there are any commercial organizations or persons who wish to make the same.

County Auditor Halden says he is not in a position at this time to say what action he will take relative to the new application, as it will be up to the county board first. He has the authority under the law to turn down the recommendations of the county commissioners to the state auditor, but whether he will do so remains yet to be seen.

Mr. Halden did not see the old application nor was he aware of its contents until it was placed in his hands after the board had voted to recommend the abatements to the state auditor. As soon as he discovered that the form of the application did not conform to that required by law, he notified some of the commissioners that he could not certify it to the state auditor.

Charles L. Rakowsky, deputy county auditor, has returned from Lamberton, Minn., where he attended the twelfth annual convention of the Minnesota conference branch of the Young People's Alliance of the Evangelical Association of North America. The convention was held from June 24 to 28, and Mr. Rakowsky says that it was the largest gathering of the association ever held in the state.

The following officers were elected: President, Rev. M. Schoenleben, of Cherry Grove, Minn.; vice president, Charles L. Rakowsky, of Duluth; treasurer, John Isker, of Waseca, Minn.; recording secretary, Mrs. M. Kaibel, of Blue Earth, Minn.; corresponding secretry, Lillian Sydow, of Fairmont, Minn.

The delegates elected to attend the general convention to be held in Waterloo, Ia., from Aug. 6 to 9 inclusive, were M. Schoenleben, Cherry Grove; H. G. Sydow, Farmington, and C. L. Rakowsky, Duluth.

TRAINING GRAVE ROBBERS.

Madam Devere Subjugates Group of Wild Hyenas.

The training of a group of grave-robbing Abyssinian hyenas of the great Ferari Bros.' trained wild animal show, which is to be one of the leading features of the Duluth July fair and carnival, is one of the most remarkable triumphs of wild animal subjugation, and to pretty Madam Devere, the daring little woman who subdued and educated these most savage and repulsive beasts too much praise cannot be given. Of all the animal kingdom the hyena is the worst. He is savage by nature and revels in a feast of dead human bodies which have passed into a state of advanced decay.

He robs the graves of human beings in his native lands, and by reason of his horrid feasts his very bite is poison, like the sting of a venomous serpent. He is cowardly and treacherous and there is nothing too mean for him to do in the way of an attack on his trainer. He is hated everywhere and generally killed on sight, for which reason he is rarely seen in menageries or zoological gardens. For nearly seven months Madam Devere had a daily battle with these beasts and many times she was bitten, and only escaped death from blood poisoning by the most heroic measunres.

Once four of the vicious beasts had her down on the floor of the cage and would surely have killed her had not Col. Ferari gone quickly to her aid with clubs and revolvers. She has not only subdued them, but has taught them a number of pretty tricks, in which they will be seen daily during the Duluth July fair and carnival, July 6 to 11 inclusive. They are the only group of educated hyenas in the world today, and there is a $5000 wager that the contrary cannot be proven.

BOATSMAN'S BOY IS CURED

Another Remarkable Lorenz Operation and a Touching Story.

New York, June 30.—Dr. Adolf Lorenz went to Tarrytown with Dr. Newton W. Shaffer to examine 6-year-old Alvin Black, on whom he operated last December.

The child is in the state hospital for crippled children. He is the son of a canal boatman and was suffering from congenital dislocation of the hip.

Dr. Lorenz pronounced this one of the most sucessful operations he had ever performed.

The manner in which the case was first brought to the doctor's notice is a touching story. Alvin's mother had nearly given up hope of her boy's recovery, when on reading what the Vienna surgeon had done for the Armour child, she wrote an appealing letter to Miss Armour, and sent a wooden doll, made by Alvin, as a present for Lolita.

Mrs. Armour was much affected by the woman's story and wrote to Dr. Shaffer asking him to take Dr. Lorenz to Tarrytown. As a result the poor boatman's son will soon be as lively as any of his playmates.

The boy's mother was present during the operation. When she was told that the treatment was successful she wept with joy. But she was not satisfied with thanking the doctor. She handed him a $10 bill and insisted on being allowed to pay what she could.

Dr. Lorenz accepted the money with thanks and then gave it to Dr. Shaffer to be added to the hospital fund.

Comment of Mining Man on Rainy Lake Gold Region.

"I see that the Rainy Lake and Seine river gold fields are deserted," said a mining man yesterday afternoon.

"Well I am not particularly surprised. I had not heard from there for many months, though I used to have some interests of my own up there, but the last I heard only a few of the faithful were left, and it seemed that it could only be a short time before the field would be deserted by prospector and miner.

"Why is it? It ought to be obvious that it is because it does not pay to mine there, but I know some that are not altogether satisfied as to that. There is gold there, and lots of it, too, but the deposits are neither large, high-grade, nor continuous. The gold-bearing quartz exists mostly in stringers, rather than in veins, and while some of these were found of a considerable size, the best of them pinched out in a short time. I believe that by investing a considerable amount of money in proper mining methods a fair business proposition could be made out of it, but it is not attractive enough to tempt any large amount of capital. The trouble with the fellows that were working up there was that they were all of them men of little or no means, trying to skin along until they could get somebody to put in the money they believed to be necessary. Quartz mining is never a poor man's game, especially when it is of such a hand-to-hand proposition as the Rainy Lake country.

"Some day somebody may put money in there by buying up a lot of territory and putting up a big mill to make a decent return on his investment. But it will never be anything phenomenal, and people expect to get rich so fast out of gold that they will be slow to tackle it.

"The Rainy Lake boom is over long ago, and after nearly ten years of precarious existence, the mills are silent and the works are lonely. It is an end to the hopes of those who thought they saw a glowing and auriferous future for that section. The boom will never come again. No great single amounts of money were put into the range, but many a man put all he had in, and the scanty bricks of gold that resulted were in value but a small proportion to what they cost. Most of the Rainy Lake boomers were sincere in their booking, though, of course, some of them did stock-jobbing stunts that resulted in hornswoggling their fellowmen. The Rainy Lake country has had a checkered and interesting history, but I believe the chapter is closed."

JOKE NOT SO FUNNY.

Became Rather Embarrassing and Ended Expensively.

A story is going the rounds of a young man residing in this city who was married about a year ago and whose attempt in a joke to pass his sister-in-law off as his wife led to such embarrassing complications that he has sworn to be good hereafter.

His wife left the city recently, on a visit, and the young husband and his sister-in-law went over to South Superior early one evening to make calls on friends of the former. It appears that the friends had never met the wife or her sister and, as a joke, the young man suggested that he pass the sister-in-law off as his wife. Subsequently he introduced the relative by marriage to friends as his wife and they accepted it all in good faith.

The evening passed off quickly in social amusements and the young people became so interested that they forgot the time and missed the last car. The friends consoled them with the statement that it was no matter for they could stay all night, that the spare room could be made ready in a few minutes. This put the joke in another light and the situation became most embarrassing to the young man and his sister-in-law. They had carried the matter so far that he did not then dare to own up to the joke and they were in a quandary how to avoid exposure when a happy thought struck the young man and he telephoned to West Superior for a hack.

The ride back to Duluth cost him several dollars and he does not know positively whether he made good the excuses he told his friends in order to get back to Duluth that evening. Then, too, he is living in mortal fear that his wife, who has returned from her visit, will learn of the joke and construe it in another light.

OWNERS TO BE HEARD

Superior Street Property Holders to Determine Pavement to Use.

Report Favorable to Raise of $8 In Annual Telephone Rental.

The council last night:
Decided to give property owners a hearing in selecting paving material for East Superior street.
Received a committee report favoring new telephone rate of $38 for business telephones.
Decided to have the street car tracks on the Grand avenue extension conform with present surface of street.
Confirmed the annual cement walk building contract awarded to Oscar H. Anderson.
Decided to employ a Pinkerton detective to assist local force in Carnival work.

The choice of street paving material on Superior street between Third and Eighth avenues east will be made by property owners to be assessed for the improvement.

The council has designated Thursday evening as the time for hearing those interested, and has withheld approval of the board of public work's action in awarding the contract to the Warren Bros. company for bituminous macadam at a cost of $31,410 to the property.

The board of public works ended its deadlock yesterday afternoon by carrying out the instructions of section 392 of the city charter and awarding the contract to the lowest reliable and responsible bidder.

Still there are many property owners that desired the improvement with vitrified brick, and it was out of consideration for these that the council last night decided to leave the final choice of material to a special meeting to be held at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening, at which all property owners interested are urged to be present.

The asphalt trust not recognizing the fact that the fight is wholly between vitrified brick and bituminous macadam, is supposed to be behind a report given some circulation today that "those that have taken the trouble to inquire into the history of tar-macadam assert that it has been a failure wherever tried."

City Engineer Patton has spent considerable time studying this new paving with a view to installing a municipal ownership plant for its manufacture in this city. When asked regarding this report he said:

"I have not heard of a single instance in which it has proven unsatisfactory. It is being used very extensively in St. Louis, Memphis, Cleveland and other cities. I notice that in Memphis the city has just purchased a plant and gone into the manufacture of bituminous macadam under a municipal ownership system making it the standard paving of the city. As far as we have been able to observe it here, the Duluth teamsters seem universally enthusiastic regarding it."

* * *

The council's special committee, appointed to examine the books of the Zenith Telephone company asking a raise in rates, has made a report recommending a raise of $8 per year in the business telephone rates. The aldermen that have investigated the matter say that the capital invested in the Zenith plant has earned nothing, owing to heavy expenses and unusually low rates, and there is a possibility that the company might be compelled to discontinue unless the city permitted an increase in the business telephone rate.

The Zenith company is a sort of ward of the city, having been used in forcing the Bell Telephone interests to adopt lower rates for service. There is also a provision in its franchise by which the city can acquire the system at actual cost of construction, less a reasonable allowance for wear and tear, after five years from the date of its franchise.

After the reading of the report it was decided to postpone acting on the report until a future meeting. It may be taken up at the special meeting Thursday evening.

* * *

A resolution was adopted authorizing the board of public works to issue an order to have the street railway tracks on the Grand avenue extension to West Duluth lowered to the surface level instead of built along the established grade of the street.

The established grade and the actual surface level of Grand avenue are two very different things—the established grade in places being a foot above the surface.

The new street car track is fully nine inches above the street surface in many places, and this practically bars the avenue for all purposes other than street car traffic. The council's resolution is virtually an order to lower the tracks, irrespective of the established grade on record in the office of the city engineer."

* * *

Two licenses with but a single saloon, two proprietors trying to beat each other. That is the condition of affairs brought about by the council's transferring the liquor license of John Shea from 23 West Superior street to the Merchants' hotel.

Cargill & Kenney have a license in the Merchants' hotel bar and it has six months to run, but their lease on the saloon expired today. Cargill & Kenney refused to give up the license, and Mr. Meinhart, proprietor of the Merchants, succeeded in getting the Shea license transferred there.

* * *

The annual cement walk-building contract finally received the council's approval after having been turned down on three previous occasions, the aldermen claiming that bids of the local cement walk combine were excessive.

Oscar H. Anderson secured the contract on a bid of 15 cents per square foot.

* * *

A Pinkerton detective familiar with crooks that follow up street fairs will be on duty here during the coming carnival. An appropriation for his services was made from an emergency police fund last evening. The Duluth detectives are kept so busy at home that they have little opportunity to familiarize themselves with the faces and work of outside crooks, except through the rather unsatisfactory method of police and detective magazine reading and an exchange of rogues' gallery pictures, so it was thought best to have an expert spotter right on the ground.

A BUILDING LINE

Some Property Owners Would Have It In Residence Districts.

To Prevent Building Flats and Stores to Sidewalk Lines.

In view of the fact that several new flat and store buildings are now under construction in the residence portion of the city, close to the sidewalk line, a number of residence property owners in such portions of the city are eminently in favor of taking advantage of the law passed by the last legislature, which enables municipalities to establish and acquire building line easements along streets, highways, parks and parkways.

Some of those who have examined the new law state that the city council has it in its power to establish a building line in residence portions of Duluth which will practically preclude the erection of store buildings in localities where the rest of the property owners do not desire that class of buildings.

A property owner who is interested in one of the fine residence buildings on East Third street called attention yesterday to a flat building that is being constructed at the corner of the street and a certain avenue clear out to the sidewalk line of the lot. All of the rest of the properties in the block, except that of a church on another corner, have on them fine homes built from 20 to 35 feet or more back from the sidewalk line, giving each adequate room in front for a lawn. The new flat building, while it is regarded by the rest of the property owners of the block as a necessity, is objectionable in its location in their eyes, from the fact that is practically destroys the beauty and symmetry of the whole block. This is but one of many instances where either flat or store buildings have gone up recently in fine residence districts of the city, built clear out to the sidewalk line.

The new law gives the city council authority to establish along any street a building line upon the land adjoining the street, and distant not more than 50 feet from the margin of the highway. The council may also, in behalf of the city, acquire an easement between such line and the exterior street line so that no building or structure shall be erected or maintained upon the land thus acquired.

This is taken to mean that the council may establish a building line, and the owner of the property so affected cannot build between the line and the sidewalk in front of his property. The effect of such a measure will be to give all new residence properties a lawn in front of the building.

"When in Chicago recently on business," remarked an East End residence owner yesterday, "I saw several large flat buildings which had evidently been constructed back of some defined building line, and these buildings, which under the ordinary circumstances would have been ugly structures built clear out to the sidewalk line, were really attractive places, each with its well-kept lawn in front.

"Here in Duluth the idea of the property owner who starts the erection of a flat seems to be to get all the space he can cover with his new building. In down-town districts, where land by the foot is very valuable, this is all right, but I do not believe that prices of building lots in the residence portion of this city have yet reached such a figure that any man is justified in utilizing every foot of his ground to the detriment of the beauty of the surrounding property."

The new law provides that the easement referred to may be acquired by the city council through purchase, by grant or by condemnation. It may also be acquired or created by dedication by indicating such building line upon any town plat hereafter recorded in the office of the register of deeds.

Sentiment is said to be strong for an observance of the latter clause. It is claimed that nothing can be done as to a building line on the plats already filed, but that on others presented within the next few years the council should insist upon it.

The new law, which is known as chapter 194 of the general laws of 1903, is one of the longest passed by the legislature, among its many provisions being the manner of appointment of appraisers in cases where the council proceeds to acquire an easement by condemnation proceedings, their duties, limitations, etc.

Provision is made that no easement shall include or take in any portion of a private residence existing at the time of the passage of the act, except by purchase or by grant.

Chief Engineer of General Electric Company Sees Water Power.

Advising With Great Northern Company as to the Development.

F. O. Blackwell, chief engineer of the General Electric company at Schenectady, N. Y., and J. W. Johnson, general manager of the power and mining department of the General Electric company at Chicago, have been here the past two days in consultation with the resident engineers of the Great Northern Power company in finally determining the general layout of the power station on the St. Louis river.

They spent yesterday in looking over the dam on the St. Louis river near Thomson following down the route of the canal and pipe line, a distance of some three miles to the power house site on the river at the foot of the rapids midway between Thomson and Fond du Lac.

Mr. Blackwell is generally considered to be the most experienced and efficient electrical engineer, more particularly in connection with power developments, in this country if not in the world, having been with the General Electric company some fourteen years at the head of that department and having designed many of the principal power stations throughout the country including the large Metropolitan station in New York city. He is at the present time especially interested in installing the new power development at Niagara Falls on the Canadian side; also in an unusually large water power development in Mexico. His advice in connection with the plans for the power station and the general development of the Great Northern Power company's proposition are naturally considered of great value to the company.

Mr. Blackwell's opinion of the entire proposition is equally favorable with that of all other engineers who have acquainted themselves with all the conditions and the general plans for development as designed by E. A. Cokefair, chief engineer of the company and his corps of resident engineers, is highly commented by Mr. Blackwell.

The latter part of this week Heinrich Jaeger, with a representative engineer from the Escher Weiss Water Wheel company of Switzerland, will arrive in Duluth to consider the introduction of their wheels. These wheels are used at the Niagara Falls plant and several of the largest installations in this country and have been used for many years in high head developments in Switzerland and other foreign countries. It is expected that the final layout of the power house will be determined upon within the next week or ten days and that the work of construction and installation will be pushed rapidly from that time forward to completion.

The work of putting in the tramway from the railroad down to the power house site is under way. A camp has been established and a number of men are employed at the work.

C. C. Cokefair returned a day or two ago from New York where he had been on business connected with the company. It was his third trip to New York this month in connection with the company's affairs.

THE STAGE

A well filled house, good natured and responsive, witnessed the opening performance of "The Mascot" by the Northwestern Opera compay at the Lyceum theater, and the result was that the occasion proved to be one of the most enjoyable entertainments of the summer.

"The Mascot" is one of these light operas—well everyone knows what "The Mascot is, and this was the regular old "Mascot" with Stanley-Felch as Prince Lorenzo, and to fully appreciate what that means one must see him. Stanley Felch is getting dangerously popular around this town, and if he don't stop being so ruthlessly, rollicky, romantically, Romanesquely (as the press agent would say) funny-four-kinds-count 'em, he is in imminent danger of being yank lynched. Felch was irresistably funny last night, and with him he had Dan Young as a running mate. Dan is all right, too, and he has a lot of funny things that make you laugh. He also has a makeup that would make "the hideous eren-thaw" that the side show man was talking about at the circus yesterday, look like a pleasant dream.

This comment is submitted because the principal constituency of the opera is fun and laughs. Both of these valuable, versatile, vociferous comedians, have loaded up on local quips and jokes and they keep the house in a state of uproar or at least they did last night.

There is a matter of special comment, right here, and that is the scenery—not meaning the chorus, which wears tights this time. The stage settings call down great praise on the management.

Now to the singers. Miss Hayden is a quiet and charming Bettina, and was in much better form last night than for a long while, probably appearing so because of the congeniality of the part George Lydling and Sylvain Langlois, as Pipps and Frederick were in excellent voice and Miss Cornish, the princess, was in a happy frame of mind. Every one of the members of the company seemed to be feeling in proper spirit for a good performance, and they had it. The orchestra was great, and Arthur Bell carried a perpetual smile through the evening, excepting when he got to thinking of his rehearsals this morning.

The big number, and the long one was that march of the chorus, prepared by Dan Young and which made a hit in all parts of the house. This is something a little more elaborate than the usual run of amazon marches, and they went through it with grace and ease. The "Prince Heinrich March" was the music for the march.

The performance will be repeatd this vening and tomorrow, there being a bargain matinee tomorrow.

MELVIN GRIGSBY'S SON

Ousted From Office In Alaska For Irregularities.

Tacoma, Wash., June 30.—The federal grand jury, called by Judge Moore at Nome, reported June 13, making majority and minority reports, as the result of which Melvin Grigsby's son was ousted from the office of acting district attorney.

The majority report was signed by Foreman Hill, who made an affidavit that the report had received the concurrence of twelve of the twenty-one members. This report arraigns United States Marshal Richards, District Attorney Melvin Grigsby and his son, George Grigsby, who was left in charge of the office while Melvin Grigsby spent the winter in the east.

Melvin Grigsby formerly occupied a high official position in South Dakota. His home was at Sioux Falls. The jury criticied him for leaving Nome last October to be absent all winer, leaving his office in charge of an alleged incompetent.

Marshal Richards is arraigned for mismanagement, being charged with paying the extravagant price of $1.50 a day each for boarding his prisoners.

The report states that "the conduct of Acting Federal Attorney George Grigsby and the United States marshal and his entire force of deputies has been reprehensible and deserving of the severest criticism and condemnation. These officials not only neglected to perform their sworn duty, but aided and abetted crime."

The minority report, signed by Mayor Rust Gard, took exception to the report signed by Foreman Hill.

WILL STUDY ALASKA'S NEEDS

Senate Committee Sails From Seattle on a Long Trip.

Seattle, Wash., June 30.—The subcommittee of the senate committee on territories, delegated to visit Alaska and study the needs of that district from the standpoint of legislative action at Washingt n, left here on the Dolphin of the Alaska steamship line Sunday night. Senator Dillingham, of Vermont, is chairman of the sub-committee, and associated with him are Senators Nelson, of Minnesota, Burnham, of New Hampshire, and Patterson, of Colorado.

Coy. Randall, sergeant-at-arms of the senate, has charge of the party. They go to Skaguay, stopping on the way at Juneau and other points. From Skaguay they go to Dawson, thence down the Yukon to St. Mochaels, Nome, Seal islands, Unalaska and numer us points along the south coast. On the return the trip from St. Michaels will be by the United States revenue cutter McCulloch.

The committee will embrace every opportunity to get information about the needs and interests of Alaska commercially and politically. Important legislation failed at the last session f congress because the senate felt it did not know what would be best for the district. When this committee returns, there will be a broup in the upper house that will understand Alaska thoroughly. This is no junket.

Seattle would have been glad to banquet the visiting senators, but they cautiously declined, arranging instead for a meeting f representative Seattle men at Hotel Washington Saturday night, where men informed on Alaska and identified more or less with the business interests of the district, were called upon to advise the committee with reference to what congress could do to promote the interests of Alaska.

The choice of a delegate in congress involves a question about which Alaskans differ radically. The question is whether the delegate should be elected or appointed. The latter course is favored by some because of the diffusion of a sparse population over a large area. The committee will devote several weeks to diligent prosecution of an inquiry into all question affecting Alaska returning about the middle of August.

IN THE WHITE HOUSE YARD

Washington Will Celebrate the Fourth With Great Enthusiasm.

Washington, June 30.—For the first time in the history of the government, an old-fashioned Fourth of July is to be celebrated in the White House yard.

It will be one of the most notable and historic assemblages that ever gathered in Washington. Admiral George Dewey, the hero of Manila bay, will read the Declaration of Independence. Maj. Gen. Corbin will be marshal of the day.

The French ambassador, M. Jusserand will deliver an oration. There will be a great military parade formed at the capitol building on the morning of the Fourth. It will march down Pennsylvania avenue to the White House, where a grand stand is now being erected.

All the paraphernalia of a regular old-time celebration is prepared. There will be an elaborate display of fireworks. Lemonade stands will line the avenues, and public and private buildings will be profusely decorated.

It is fifty years since anything like a public celebration of the Fourth of July was attempted in Washington. As a rule it is about the quietest town in the country on the anniversary of the national independence day. The movement for a big time this year originated with District Commissioners McFarland and West.

They talked with President Roosevelt about it, and he became enthusiastic, as he does in every similar movement.

The material is here for a great celebration. There will be marching troops from the regular army, the Spanish-American soldiers, the navy, the marine corps and hundreds of civic societies.

There will be a great influx of visitors.

LOBBIES AT WORK

At Caracas Trying to Defeat the Isthmian Canal Treaty.

French Working to Prevent Consummation of the Sale.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Very meager details of the first work of the members of the Colombian congress have thus far reached Washington, but this fact has caused no surprise, as it was expected that the first week would be devoted to organization.

The administration is advised, however, that the various lobbies opposing the ratification of the canal treaty are on hand in force, and it is expected that every possible argument will be advanced to encompass the rejection of the convention. It is learned that in addition to representatives of the foreign syndicate which is trying to defeat the treaty, powerful American railroad interests are also represented in the Colombian capital with a chest full of money and a whole volume of promises.

It seems strange to hear that the people of France, who were so recently active and energetic in urging the sale of their Panama interest to the United States, should now be engaged in an attempt to prevent the consummation of the agreement of sale. It is explained that up to the time the negotiations were perfected the French company was unable to raise funds for the prosecution of the work. The scandals which had arisen over the proceedings of the De Losseps corporation, followed by the reports, circulated throughout Europe, to the effect that millions of dollars' worth of valuable machinery had been allowed to go to ruin and that hundreds of millions of francs would be required to complete the project had so disgusted the French people that they refused to invest more of their savings. But about the time the offer was made to the United States, the report of the American commission headed by Admiral Walker was published in France. No sooner had it appeared than a revulsion of feeling towards the canal began. Instead of being compelled to beg for funds from the small tradesmen, the peasants and the middle class of the French people, the canal company found itself with offers of financial aid from all over Europe. It is asserted by those in position to know that within ten days from the date of the final rejection of the treaty the French company will be able to control enough ready cash to push work upon the canal to completion, and that it will not be necessary to borrow a single dollar with which to do this.

The present compensation of the board of directors of the Panama canal is but $10 a day each for each meeting. These meetings are held twice a month, so that the "salary" of the directorate is but $240 per annum. Should the treaty fail, these directors will be continued in office at $10,000 or $12,000 each per annum, and they are naturally not so anxious to get rid of the property as they were. The syndicate which, if the opportunity presents itself, will form a sort of construction compatny, has made offers to the Colombian government which are regarded as far more liberal than the terms proposed by the United States, and in addition to this they have employed soulful lobbyists with plethoric pocketbooks to look after their interests.

The opposition of the American railroads mentioned above is purely selfish, and is fuly understood. The same corporate interests have been active in Washington ever since it became apparent that congress would take up the canal project. The American government is taking no unusual steps towards persuading the Colombian congress that the treaty should be ratified. This must be done by the government of Colombia.

Mr. Cromwell, the American representative of the French canal company in the negotiations for the sale of the canal and railroad, expresses confidence that ratification will be secured before the adjournment of the special session on July 20, but this confidence is not fully shared by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay. But the administration is not worried. In any case will take up the ished and the United States will build it. The United States will also control it. It may be that when the work is completed the canal will traverse the republic of Panama instead of the United States of Colombia. This very important question will be decided within the next sixty days.

In the meantime the republic of Nicaragua has shown very clearly that all hope of a waterway from the Atlantic to the Pacific by the Nicaragua route has been abandoned by notifying President Roosevelt that the minister from Nicaragua will be withdrawn from Washington and the legation closed.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

A Small Tornado Carries House Away at De Smet.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

De Smet—A small tornado Monday morning hit Andrew Stankey's residence and carried it 100 feet, completely wrecking it. Stankey and his wife were seriously injured.

Mrs. S. J. Mullen's residence was damaged by timber being driven through the side of the house. Windmills and barns in the storm's path were wrecked and 6-inch trees were broken.

The spire of the Baptist church and part of the roof were carried off. No fatalities reported.

Sioux Falls—A man giving his name as Jake Bateman, and claiming New York city as his home, who came to Sioux Fals two or thre days ago, died at a local hotel as the result of an overdose of morphine, which is alleged to have been given him by an itinerant doctor named Sorelle, who was also a recent arrival in the city from New Orleans. Sorelle has been placed in jail pending the result of the coroner's inquest. The dead man is said to have two wealthy sisters in New York city.

Spearfish—Three new teachers have been engaged for the state normal school. P. F. McCormick, of Michigan, has been engaged as athletic instructor, and will have classes in German, Latin and physics. Professor Lynn P. McCain, of Terry, will teach reading, composition, bookkeeping and physiology. The third new teacher is Miss Mary Madden, who will have classes in German and Latin. Work will be commenced in a short time on the new normal building provided by the last legislature. C. A. Randall, of Deadwood, has prepared the plans.

Mitchell—H. C. Shober, who retires from the office of commissioner of insurance of the state, July 1, and Levi D. Wait, editor of the Armour Herald, are laboring to launch a mutual insurance company early in July. Headquarters have not been definitely decided upon, but they will be either at Armour or Huron. The company will be known as the Publishers' Mutual Insurance association of South Dakota, and its directors will be some of the best known publishers in the state.

Belle Fourche—A good flow of artesian water has been encountered by drillers on the ranch of David Richards, on Hay creek at the depth of 350 feet. The water is being utilized in irrigation and for domestic use.

A. H. Maxwell, formerly engaged in newspaper work at Lincoln, Neb., has arranged to begin the practice of law in Belle Fourche.

Redfield—The trustees of Redfield college elected the same faculty as last year and conferred the degree of doctor of divinity upon Rev. W. H. Thrall, of Huron; Rev. I. P. Patch, president of Redfield college, and Rev. S. B. Matthewe, of Chicago.

Redfield will celebrate the Fourth in great style. Among the attractions will be an automobile race and a baseball game. Several companies of militia will be on the ground and a good ball game will be played between Redfield and an outside team.

Belle Fourche—The last of the cattle purchased in the South this year by Northern cattlemen are being received at Belle Fourche. Many of them were behind the heavy floods in Kansas and Missouri and were held up several weeks in transit.

The heaviest buyer this year has been the Harris Franklin company. This company bought about 20,000 head in Texas, New Mexico and Mexico, and was one of the first shippers, getting all its cattle through before the floods and unloading the last of them here a month ago.

The condition of the range has never been so favorable. Recent rains gave the grass a remarkable impetus. All the winter holes and courses of the country are well filled and there is no danger of their being depleted for several months at least.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—It has been learned that William Knight, who met sudden death here recently by falling under the cars, left bank deposits in Duluth, West Superior and Minneapolis of about $1000. Ferdinand Luger of this city will be named as administrator for the estate and will secure the money for the heirs of the dead man.

Ellendale—Before the state rested its case in the Wells murder trial the skull of the murdered man was presented in court. Sheriff Jones of Sargent county testified to seeing Sherman Wells bank the barn the morning after the disappearance of Carr at the particular spot where the body was found. Only about seven or eight feet of the entire barn was banked and that was where the body was concealed. The bloody undershirt made a sensation in court and evidence was introduced to show that it was discovered beneath an elevator and that it belonged to and was worn by young Wells, the defendant. Olaf Eager, of Forman, who met the defendant in Minneapolis when the latter was being brought back from Michigan, swore that in private conversation and in answer to questions put by him that Wells said it was a serious matter, remarking, "I think I am up against it and will have to hang for it. Oh, you will know all after the trail." The defense was outlined by Attorney W. E. Purcell, who put the murder of Carr entirely upon Jesse Wells, who was killed in jumping upon a train at Forman. Sherman Wells, the defendant, admits burying the body, but says his brother did the killing. He disclaims all knowledge of the bloody shirt.

Jamestown—Deputy Sheriff Eddy brought William Wood from Bismarck. Wood was arrested on a charge of having robbed Jay Wilcox of the Northern Stock yards of $240 and a watch.

Sheriff John P. Bornick of St. Cloud, Minn., arrived yesterday and left for Dickey, La Moure county, where Peter Cremer and Lizie Rosen of St. Anthony Minn., had located. They were placed under arrest and will be taken back to St. Cloud. Cremer had been married six years. Miss Rosen is about 17 years of age and is a pretty girl.

The state Free Methodist camp meeting closed Sunday evening and the members left for their homes. About fifty were converted.

Grafton—Fire Sunday night damaged Dr. J. P. Ryan's residence about $1000, with no insurance. His two little sons, sleeping in an upper chamber, were barely rescued. Mrs. Ryan escaped with burns about the neck and face.

Grand Forks—Floyd Gile, Floyd Luras and Roy Soby, aged about 10 each, were frightfully injured Monday by a power explosion. They had poured powder into a tin can and were bending over it when the explosion occurred. The boys will probably recover but it is feared that their eyesight has been destroyed.

Bismarck—A writ of error in the Rooney murder case was filed with the clerk of the supreme court Monday pending an appeal of the case by Attorney Stambaugh for the prisoner, to the supreme court of the United States. The question involved that of exposto facto legislation, it being claimed that the legislature's act changing the place of punishment and the term of imprisonment violates the constitution of the United States. The case was certified up to the supreme court of United States Saturday afternoon.

SHOT HIMSELF

Because His Wife Danced With Other Men.

Vincennes, Ind., June 30.—Because of jealousy William Miley, a farmer at Iona, attempted suicede by shooting himself. Three doctors worked several hours to save his life, but they declare he will probably die.

Miley and his wife attended a dance at the home of Charles Gibbs and it is said Mrs. Miley paid considerable attention to two other men, which caused Miley much anxiety, and he protested against her dancing with other men. She chided her husband, told him she would dance with whomever she pleased.

This so enraged Miley that he declared he would whip the wh le crowd. He started to execute the threat, but was knocked out in the first round. This stopped the dance and Miley and his wife went home.

Afterwards the couple quarreled and Miley picked up his shot gun, went to the barn, turned the muzzle against his breast and pulled the trigger, the shot taking effect in his left shoulder and tearing it almost to pieces. Before any one could get to him he fired another shot into his left side, inflicting a dangerous wound.

SHIP IS SEIZED.

THE WELCOME RAINS.

Much needed relief to many localities in the wheat district of the Northwest has been brought by the showers of Sunday and Monday, and further rains in all sections are predicted by the weather bureau. Indications are that the entire spring wheat country will be thoroughly soaked, and damage to the crops made imminent by the continued dry spell will be averted.

These rains will bring joy to the farmers of Minnesota and the Dakotas, because they ensure a bumper crop. With sufficient moisture at this period, a bountiful harvest may be confidently expected. With the total yield seriously threatened by drought, there was naturally much anxiety, and the rains have caused much rejoicing not only among the wheat-raisers, but among the business men of the Northwest, who know that a large grain crop will continue the prosperous conditions that now prevail. Indeed, the value of a heavy rainfall to the whole Northwest is almost inestimable, and if the predictions of the weather bureau are fully verified, one of the largest grain crops on record in the Northwest will be assured.

SHOULD BE ABOLISHED.

The glorious Fourth is near at hand and the tetanus epidemic is due to follow it as regularly as the day itself appears. Taking the country as a whole, there always are some violent deaths due to the celebration of Independence day, but they are not large compared to the subsequent development of disease from wounds at the time thought to be minor in character. Tetanus is the dread disease from which many suffer, following wounds received on the great national holiday.

The sale of the deadly toy pistol should be strictly prohibited. The mayor of Minneapolis has issued a special order to the police of that city to arrest any and all persons discharging cannons, guns, pistols, revolvers or other firearms or cannon crackers. This is an excellent move and a similar order should be issued in every other city in the country. But it does not go far enough, probably because there was no law or ordinance under which the mayor could act. The sale of cannon crackers and other dangerous explosives—including the toy pistol—should be prohibited. In Pittsburg ten deaths have, within a short time, resulted from blood poisoning due to toy pistol wounds, and the board of health of that city is taking action to prevent the sale of this particularly dangerous plaything. The records of other cities show many deaths from the same cause. The New York Times says that the sale of dangerous toys should be as specifically prohibited as the sale of poisoned candy, and that New York "might with advantage and propriety take the lead in this matter by prohibiting the sale at wholesale or retail of paper caps which contain poisonous ingredients." It is as essential that the toy pistol should be abolished in Duluth as in New York, and our city council should pass an ordinance prohibiting its sale without waiting for action by New York or any other city.

CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATION.

It is very probable that congress at its next session may order an investigation of all the executive branches of the government. This prediction is made from the expressions that have been made by members of congress, in regard to the present scandals in the postoffice and other departments. There are many rumors of irregularities and even fraud in still other departments, and it is felt by many that a general investigation is the only thing will satisfy the public, whether one is needed or not. While there is always more or less friction in the departments and plenty of charges against officials and bureau chiefs who may be for any reason unpopular, there is no apparent reason for any uneasiness about the conditions of any of the departments other than those now under investigation. There is no hint of trouble in the treasury department, nor in the war, state or navy, although general charges of extravagant expenditures are always circulating in connection with army contracts.

Jealousy of officials in the different army and navy bureaus furnish a basis for rumors and insinuations, but the investigations that have been held by officials of the different branches of the military service have not developed any warrant for the general charges that have been made.

In the interior department several investigations have been held under the direction of Mr. Hitchcock and a number of abuses corrected. He has had a scandal of considerable proportions in the land office, but has cleaned the affair up by a rigid inquiry and the removal of a large number of offending employes and agents of the department. He has reorganized the entire land department, and has made changes in the Indian service which have removed many sources of complaint.

The agricultural department has an investigation in progress over the free seed distribution, and evidence is being offered to show that the government has been pretty systematically bilked in its purchases in that line. The foreman for the firm that has the contract for supplying seeds for distribution has made an affidavit in which he asserts that the contractor gave him specific orders to furnish light weights. The contract called, for instance, for sixty-four packages of beet seed to the pound, but the contractor insisted upon making them run eighty to the pound. In other cases seeds of an inferior quality was used, and cheap seeds substituted in packages for high-priced ones. In this contract the government has a bond of $35,000, and if the investigation warrants it will seek to recover damages from the contractor.

It will do no harm at all events, to make a complete investigation of all departments. If there is nothing wrong the officials will be better off from the overhauling; if there is, then the result aimed at will be accomplished. Let them all be investigated.

BRICK OR MACADAM?

It is not surprising that the board of public works decided in favor of a tar macadam pavement for East Superior street between Third and Eighth avenues. It would not have been surprising had the board reported in favor of vitrified brick. It was a choice between these two kinds of pavement, and there were strong arguments advanced in favor of each. In view of recent experience, there was hardly any possibility of asphalt being favored by the board, and there is little probability of the council voting in favor of an asphalt pavement, though it may give the preference to vitrified brick as against tar macadam. Several of the largest property-owners on the section of the street covered by this contract favor the brick pavement, and their wishes may be potent in influencing the council in that direction. On the other hand, many property owners prefer the tar macadam and it may be decided upon at the adjourned meeting of the council on Thursday evening. The council desires to have a further expression of views by the property-owners on this point, and it was for this purpose that the question was made a special order for Thursday's meeting.

The asphalt men will, of course, exert all the influence at their command to secure the rejection of both brick and tar macadam, and the adoption of asphalt. They are adepts in the art of influencing aldermen and misleading property-owners, and they can be depended upon to keep up the fight until the end. At this writing there appears to be very little chance of their efforts being successful, but it would be well for all interested to keep a close watch on the asphalt trust's representatives and be prepared to meet their claims and arguments.

PROGRESS OF THE SOUTH.

The progress that is being made in the South is really wonderful and almost beyond belief. There are several localities where railroad officials a few years ago refused even to build stations, that are now doing an immense business in growing and shipping rice and are extremely prosperous. This great development, taken in connection with the advance in oil interests in Southwest Louisiana and Texas has shown a rapid and almost marvelous increase in business. The passenger receipts at Beaumont now average $40,000 a month, against $700 a month three years ago. A number of companies have already been organized, one with a capital stock of $6,000,000, another with a capital stock of $9,000,000, for the purchase of immense bodies of land aggregating in the latter case 300,000 acres, which will be developed with great irrigating canals and utilized for the growing of rice and other agricultural products. So active is the development in that section that immigration offices are to be opened in Holland and Japan. In another section of Texas the peach and trucking industry is assuming large proportions, and one orchard of 20,000 acres is now being developed, with many smaller ones in the same territory. At the other extreme of the South the Norfolk-Virginia trucking district is burdening the railroads and steamship lines with an immense crop of potatoes, which are reported as bringing prices higher than for the last eight or ten years. Between these two points, Virginia and Texas, there are everywhere seen signs of an increasing diversity of agricultural interests, even if the development has not been quite so pronounced as at these two points.

Turning from agricultural to manufacturing interests, progress in every direction is even more pronounced. New cotton manufacturing companies are being organized nearly every week. In West Virginia and Kentucky the activity in the development of coal mining and in oil is greater than ever before. West Virginia will this year produce nearly 30,000,000 tons of coal, or about three-quarters as much as the total bituminous coal output of the United States in 1880.

From its inception, the Isthmian canal will require coal. From the nature of it the work will be mainly done by machinery. To drive this machinery will require enormous quantities of coal. Further, large quantities will be required to propel the shipping to deliver the tremendous amount of machinery and supplies which will be called for in a project of this magnitude. This increase in demand for coal will again be trivial compared to that which will inevitably arise on the completion of the canal, which, with the unlimited capacity of the United States available for the work, should be at no distant date. Southern progress has been rapid and the prospects for that section are as bright as for any in the United States.

The popularity of the rural free delivery mail service is as great as ever, in spite of the scandals connected therewith. The demand for routes continues as lively as ever. The renewal of the extension of the service, which was suspended at the time of Superintendent Machen's removal, has caused general satisfaction and the applications for new routes are constantly increasing. Some idea of the way this business is growing may be gathered from the statement that there are now on file in the office of Mr. Bristow over 10,000 applications for routes. In addition to this there are 2000 proposed routes which have been inspected by special agents and found ready for putting on the service. All that is necessary in the case of these 2000 proposed routes is to authorize the service to begin, appoint carriers and go ahead. Each of the 10,000 applications for routes bears the indorsement and signature of a member of congress.

New York girls employed in offices and business establishments down town have petitioned the elevated road managers for special cars for women. "Night after night," says one of them, "have I waited patiently for five, ten or even fifteen minutes on the very verge of the platform in the hope of obtaining a place or a seat in an incoming empty train. And then as the gates were opened I and women around me have been dragged aside and driven back in a maelstrom of ruffians striving, it would seem, to crush us weaker ones out of their way." Evidently this girl could never have been in a bargain counter rush.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

The crowd around the St. Louis hotel, which was on the qui vive, are off it now.

They remained on this mythical eminence for two whole days and had money wagered.

This morning George W. May returned from the Brule river, where he was fishing, and he announced at the desk of the St. Louis that the fishing was not.

"Never had worse luck in my life—in fact, this is the worst luck I ever had. I didn't get anything more than a pound in weight."

That was what he said when asked regarding his expedition, which was the subject of so much talk around the hotel for the past several days.

Mr. May is a soap man. That is, he sells soap. There are a lot more soap men down at the St. Louis, five or six having arrived here in the past few days, representing the big soap manufacturers of the country.

Well, J. W. Gilboy went over to the Brule with Dr. Boyer the other day and caught some trout, among which was a large one which weighed dressed, — pounds. The figure runs from 2½ to 7 pounds, per report, and according to the circumstances surrounding the person who tells.

"There is some as says" that it only weighed two pounds, but then it isn't policy to believe everything one hears.

When Mr. May started for the Brule the guests around the hotel hunted up the quivive and have been hopping around on it for the past few days.

Now Mr. May is a recognized sportsman of large calibre, and one who may always be depended upon to break records, dishes and fishing lines, etc., and that is why there was so much interest. He said when he started out that he was going to duplicate or surpass the most rosy story of the Gilboy fish.

The assertion became a topic of common conversation, and the folks around the hotel began to quarrel about what would be the outcome. Finally, for self-preservation, Manager Butchart was compelled to make a book on the lone fisherman, and fixed up an auction pool scheme, which kept the noisy ones quiet.

It is a fact that there will be upwards of $100 change hands on the result of the trip, which came to an end last night and upon which Mr. May reported this morning.

Backers of Mr. May wagered that he would equal or beat the catch of Mr. Gilboy. The Gilboy forces were taking the field, and they win.

Conductor J. W. Kelly of the Omaha was at the Spalding this morning, after his first run up on the Twilight limited with the new "club car" attached. This car makes the train one of the best anywhere in the country, it is said, and the make-up of the train now is a diner, chair car, club car, two ordinary coaches and a baggage car.

"There won't be any trouble about making the time," said Mr. Kelly, "not with the engines used on this run. They are capable of hauling a longer and heavier train and keep on time. We hauled the new club car up last night for the first time, and it seemed to make quite a hit with the patrons."

Conductor J. W. Kelly is the one man on the Omaha who stood perfect in the examinations made by order of the Northwestern officials, changing the regulations and signal system from the old Omaha method to that of the Northwestern system.

The trouble with Mr. Kelly is that he won't tell anything about it. All the conductors on the system who run on this division, he was the only one who knew the whole of the new system and was letter perfect when it came to an examination.

The laundry at the Spalding hotel is back on a working basis again. Laundry employes swarmed in last night and this morning, and Manager Emery had the satisfaction this morning of folding his arms and looking proudly over the field of operation, for the mangle machine and the other paraphernalia were working for further orders and all the places are filled.

He is a warm advocate of the gentlemanly game of golf and came up here loaded with clubs and several gross of balls. He used to be a member of the Newspapermen's Golf club in Milwaukee till he got too speedy to remain with them and then he started to develop professional tendencies. Mr. Rolleston expects to play golf on all the links in the Northwest before he returns to his desk at the Pfister house. He is around shaking hands with old friends between games.

"Not at all," she replied promptly. "I really prefer chocolate and orange ice."

Chicago Tribune—"Well," said the man at the office window, "if you haven't anything but an upper berth I'll take that, I've got to have a good night's sleep."

"We don't guarantee the sleep," replied the austere man inside the window. "We only furnish you the berth."

Washington Star—"Don't you think there is a lesson to be learned from the Servian episode?"

"I do," answered Senator Sorghum. "It teaches us to be very careful about trying to exercise power individually instead of organizing corporations."

JUST A REMINDER.

Could a man be a baby
For a little while each day
Could he say when comes the gloaming,
"I have had enough of play—
Take me, arms of her who bore me,
Soothe the worries all away;
Tuck me in and
Croon above me
Words that prove you'll
Always love me.
Hold my restless, play-worn fingers
In your own so restful, strong,
While your lips breathe forth the cadence
Of some old, sweet evensong."

Brother, you may drop your burden
At the closing of the day;
In the Father's eyes your labors
Are but prattling babie's play
And He longs to show his mercy
And to soothe your cares away,
Hear that soft voice
Croon above you;
"Peace, my careworn
Child, I love you."
Then the arms called Everlasting
Slip beneath you—tender, strong,
And your tired heart ceases sighing
While your lips send forth a song.

Where Sympathy Is Wasted.

Chicago Inter Ocean: One of our German agricultural visitors has expressed the opinion that the American farmer is a slave because he works hard. Yet the American farmer is not complaining that his industry is unprofitable, nor beseeching his government for special favors, as his German critic is.

A Sound Reason.

Lippincott's: At a rural watering place the guests were sitting on the front piazza which overlooked the street.

A rustic, who was greatly under the influence of liquor, found his way up there and became offensively "agreeable." Being admonished to desist from his attentions many times, he persisted, and at last approached one of the ladies and commenced to annoy her with crude attempts at smartness.

A gentleman who had been watching him closely, but saying nothing, now swiftly approached him and tossed him over into the wet sand below.

He got up, pulled a much-soiled handkerchief from his pocket, wiped the sand from his eyes and mouth, and then, looking up as he swayed back and forth, addressed the man who did the deed:

"Yes, —— you! I suppose you think you're smart, but I don't. I expect you think I don't know what you done that fer; but I'll let you know that I do. Blank your buttons! the reason why you throwed me over them banisters was that you don't want me up there, —— you!"

HER PERFUMED HAIR

By Leslie W. Quirk.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

I woke up suddenly with a queer pain in my head. It throbbed and throbbed till I could have cried out at the torture. Lashing around in my bed, I turned over and looked into the face of a girl, close at hand.

She was undeniably pretty, with black hair and eyes, a red mouth and two delicately pink cheeks. She smiled when I looked at her.

"Well, Jack, how goes it this morning?" she asked.

"I—I beg your pardon," I said. To the best of my knowledge I had never seen the girl before. Yet here she was, at my bedside, speaking to me with the familiarity of an old friend.

"I am glad you are better," she whispered, almost in my ear. Then she added another word that made me open my eyes wide—"sweetheart!"

I suppose she saw the startled look on my face, for she sat up with a merry little laugh and beckoned to a nurse. I looked around in dismay. On either side of me was a row of white cots, with nurses moving silently among them. I was in a hospital.

"Well, old man, alive to the world at last!" said a hearty voice, and I saw a man bending over me. "Rose was beginning to think you would never know her again." He pinched the cheek, teasingly, and she turned away with a little blush.

I stared at him blankly.

"We are going to take you away from here," he went on. "And do you know what day it is?"

I shook my head.

"Thursday, the 30th of May, 1902."

"What?" I raised myself out of the cot in my excitement.

"Thursday, the 30th of May, 1902," he repeated. "Don't you remember? It is your wedding day!"

The queer pain was racking my head frightfully now, and I sank back on the cot. Was I crazy? The last thing I remembered was returning home from the club last night—or, rather, on the night of the 3rd of June, 1901, nearly a year before. And this was to be my wedding day. Why, it was impossible. I was not engaged, I—who was the girl? Then I caught a pair of roguish black eyes looking at me, and I lay very still, pondering, not at all ill pleased.

Two men took me out to a closed carriage, supporting me as I walked, for I was very weak. They opened the door carefully, and I climbed in and sank back on the soft cushions. Then an arm—a soft, warm, plump arm—crept about my neck, and I was drawn toward a woman. Her hair smelled of wild flowers that was tender and caressing. The perfume crept into my brain and intoxicated me, and I leaned over and kissed her full upon the red lips.

At last the carriage stopped, and I was helped to the ground. The man who had spoken to me at the hospital, and who had been riding outside, paid the driver and dismissed him. Then he and the woman and I went into the building, which proved to be a hotel.

My head was getting clearer now, and I looked about me wondering what it all meant. We took an elevator to the second floor, and were ushered into a hand some parlor. Hardly had the door closed upon us before the girl looked up at the man inquiringly.

"Shall I dress now brother?"

"Yes, Rose."

She laid her hand in mine for a minute, and then walked toward a door at the other side of the room. The swish, swish of her dress seemed to beckon me on, and I started after her.

The man held out a restraining hand. "Wait," he said, with a smile; "she will be yours in an hour."

After she had gone, I turned to him. "What does this all mean?" I asked.

"You have been sick for a month," he said slowly, "and I am afraid you have suffered a lapse of memory."

"Sick?" I repeated, dully.

"Yes. At one time we despaired of your life. Your brain seemed on fire, and you were filled with all sorts of queer fancies. You did not know me, nor Rose—"

"Rose?"

"Yes; your fiance."

"My fiance! Why, man, I never saw her before!"

He smiled, a little sadly, and said, gantly, as he might to a child: "You have been very sick, and you have forgotten many things. You have been engaged to my sister for nearly six months, and you set today for your marriage. Can't you remember?"

I pressed my hand over my aching head. "No," I said. "Does she expect me to marry her today?" I nodded toward the other room, and thought of the laughing black eyes and the hair that smelled of flowers that bloom in the springtime.

"Of course," he said. "You see, she wishes to be your wife, even if you can't remember all that has happened."

I said nothing. I was mad with love for the girl, and yet I felt I had no right to make her marry a man who had lost all memory of having known her in the past.

"Does she want the ceremony to take place?" I asked.

"Does she? Why, man, can't you see the love light in her eyes, and the passion in every move she makes? Can't you feel it when she takes your hand in hers? Don't you know it by her very presence?"

"Then," I said, looking him full in the face, "then all the men in Christendom can't keep us from becoming husband and wife."

"Jack," he cried, "I am proud of you. There isn't another man in the whole world I'd rather have for a brother-in-law. I'll get the preacher at once, and we will have a quiet ceremony here in the parlor."

Rose came in from the other room just then. Straight to me she walked, and placed her two hands confidingly in mine. The man leaned over us with a "God bless you, children," and then slipped out into the hall.

The preacher, white-haired and saintly, came back with him, and we stood up, ready to be married.

I don't remember when I heard the noise first. I think I was watching Rose's brother, and that his frightened face was my first intimation of the trouble. Then I heard a tramp of many feet, and a knocking on our door. I threw my arm protectingly about the girl.

"Come in!" I shouted.

Before I had spoken the words, the door opened. The first man to enter was my brother. After him came two burly officers of the law.

"My God, Jack," he cried, as he saw our position, "it isn't too late?"

"Too late for what?" I demanded, white with anger at the interruption.

"You aren't—aren't married?"

"No," I said, "but I will be in five minutes. Stand back, and let the ceremony proceed."

He sprang forward. "You will never marry that woman," he declared. "Can't you see, you fool, that she is no fit wife for you?"

"But she loves me," I said, weakly, seeking an excuse.

"Yes," he sneered; "she loves you as she loves any man who will bring her money. And you, with your inheritance of uncle's, will make a capital husband for her."

"My inheritance?" I repeated, pushing away the girl to look at her; "my inheritance—"

Then, like a flash, it all came back to me. I had been notified of the death of my uncle, with a will that left all of his rich property to me. I had heard of it only yesterday—or was it last year?

"What day of the month is this?" I demanded.

"June 24, 1902," answered my brother. Then I saw the trick. It had all been planned, from the smallest detail. In some way they had learned of my inheritance, had calmly kidnaped me from my own lodgings, and had put up the cock-and-bull story of my sickness, after drugging me with some memory-destroying concoction. The plan was so bold that it had almost succeeded.

I looked at the girl. The brown eyes leered at me malevolently, the red lips and the pink cheeks were plainly painted, the black hair was snarled and stiff, and smelled of sickening perfume.

"Rose," I said.

"Not 'Rose,'" interrupted an officer, stepping forward and snapping the handcuffs on her wrists, "but Mag Smith, variety actress, confidence woman and—worse."

And they led her away.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press:—It is hard to convince oneself that an innocent widow was once a married woman full of guile.

You can often tell by the color of a woman's garters a lot of other things about her that you ought not to tell.

Generally it is the man who looks as if butter wouldn't melt in his mouth that is trying to squeeze some girl's hand under the table.

The sooner a man understands after he gets married that his relationship to his house is the same as a cashier's to his business firm, the greater a success he will be as a good husband.

"A Grotesque Farce."

Kansas City Star: The cry for harvest hands which Kansas has raised is a demand for help which can be made without casting the slightest reflection on that commonwealth. But a state that is compelled to call in outside force to harvest its crops should never countenance the grotesque farce of passing the hat.

The Colonel Wants to Know.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The Kansas building at the World's fair is to be surmounted by the figure of a woman carrying a sickle. What state will do honor to the old-fashioned woman carrying a sickle?

A Slight Overcharge.

Philadelphia Press: According to John Mitchell, the labor leader, the man who has brought suit against him for $200,000 for counsel fees will have to throw off $199,990 before he will get anything. What is left after that won't pay the expenses of a suit.

It being necessary to work members of the hospital corps yesterday, Duluth lost the first game of the Fargo series.

Gehring, whose pitching hand was badly injured recently, was put in to twirl, but after three bases on balls and a wild pitch in the second inning, McGaughey, who nearly had his twirling hand taken off in the first battle of Winnipeg, was substituted. In his first inning he allowed three bases on balls and a hit and two errors gave Fargo four runs. After that McGaughey settled down and pitched an article of ball that was really an eye-opener.

Duluth got busy in the third bunching three hits, which, with a combination of three errors, let in three runs.

In the ninth with two men out and two on the paths, Mehl deliberately filled the bases by passing Lambert who had been hitting him hard all afternoon, preferring to take his chances with Quilian. The foul strike rule worked in favor of Fargo in this crisis and the little second baseman after fouling twice was called out on a strike. The score:

Fargo is giving the Cardinals a hard run for fourth place. If the Dakotas win today's game it will shove Duluth down into fifth place, but with Shaw pitching there is no good reason why Duluth should suffer the humiliation.

Two fast teams met before an immense crowd at Cloquet on Sunday the home team defeating Hinckley by a score of 12 to 3. The pitching of Sheey and the fast fielding of Roy at first for Cloquet were features of the game. The paper-makers also kept up their reputation for hard hitting, batting two Hinckley pitchers out of the box.

An aggregation that recently defeated the police department team through special courtesy and privileges extended by the officers intimates that there is $50 to back it against The Evening Herald team. An effort is being made to induce the News Tribune men to read over very carefully, a recent work by Tim Murnane, entitled: "How to Play Baseball," paying particular attention to that chapter entitled: "How Not to Aspire too High at First," and it has also been respectfully suggested that the News Tribune team go out and get a reputation by at least scoring three runs on the Iron River team. Any strong team that would play that outfit for $50 ought to be indicted for grand larceny. Taking money out of a baby's bank would be philanthropy compared with it.

TO SEIZE PROPERTY.

Drastic Measures to Force Collection of Taxes.

The forced collection of the delinquent personal property taxes was begun today when Deputy Sheriffs Levi and Wesenberg were given lists with instructions to seize personal property of the delinquents.

Sheriff Butchart has had the delinquent list in his hands for collection for some time and a large part of the bills turned over to him have been collected without the necessity of a seizure of property, but collections are now so difficult that the extreme provided by law must be resorted to.

The sheriff may seize furniture or other effects and these unless redeemed will be put up at auction and sold, the money derived to be used in covering the delinquincy.

Adjudged Insane.

John Murphy has been adjudged insane in an examination held in probate court yesterday, and Judge Middlecoff has issued an order for his commitment to the state asylum at Fergus Falls. Murphy is a woodsman, and was brought to the county jail some days ago as an unsafe person to be at large. It is claimed that he was at one time a prosperous business man in Michigan, but that the misfortunes and loss of money and friends have caused him to brood over his troubles and his mind became affected.

FIVE MORE TO PLAY.

Patrick Nine Has Finished Half the Schedule.

The statement that the F. A. Patrick & Company baseball team of the wholesalers league has finished its games in the schedule is incorrect. It has played just half its games and has therefore five more to play.

The schedule originally announced was for five games for each team, but this was just half the schedule for the year. There will be no games next Saturday, that being the Fourth, but after that there will be games every Saturday and on most of them there will be three contests.

SLOW BUT GOT THERE.

Young Man's Rescuing Act Nearly Ends Disastrously.

Fond du Lac just escaped having a hero last Sunday afternoon. A young man, accompanied by two young ladies, were in a party that spent the day at Duluth's famous summer resort, and it was in the act of crossing the river that the opportunity came for the young man to distinguish himself.

The party decided to cross the river in a small rowboat instead of the regular ferry boat and, while the boatman was assisting one of the ladies into the little craft, she lost her balance and dropped out of sight in the water between the boat and dock. When she came to the surface the boatman caught hold of her clothing and was on the point of pulling her into the boat when the young man with her, suddenly realizing that his opportunity was being lost, jumped in the river to the rescue. In his efforts he managed to overturn the boat and matters looked serious for a few minutes. The three persons, the young lady, her would-be rescuer and the boatman were finally pulled out of the water by the people on the dock.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

A New Endowed Journal Will Treat of Them.

Chicago, June 30.—The Journal of Infectious Diseases, said to be the only endowed publication of the kind in the world, will be issued in the fall, edited by Professor Ludwig Hektoen and Professor Edward O. Jordan, of the university of Chicago.

The expenses, which, it is estimated, will amount to $5000 annually, will be paid by Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick. This agreement is made for an indefinite term and amounts practically to $125,000 endowment.

Since the death a few years ago of their son, Jack Rockefeller McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. McCormick have formed the institute for the study of infectious disease connected with Rush Medical college. The Journal will give to the scientific world the results of work done there and in other laboratories.

Young Boy Killed In Planning Mill at the Sault.

Sault Ste. Marie—Joseph King, son of Albert King, was instantly killed in his father's planing mill. He was caught in a belt and whirled rapidly around a shaft and probably never realized what was happening. It will probably never be known just how the accident came about. He was alone in that part of the mill where the pumps are located at the time, and no one saw it. His father was working in the mill and heard a noise that sounded as if the main belt was going to break, and he rushed out only to find the lifeless body of the boy whirling around the shaft. The machinery was stopped immediately. The body of the lad was horribly mangled, and blood was spattered all about the room. A hole eight inches deep was dug in the ground by his feet as they struck. A terrible wound was inflicted in the head and bones in the body broken. Mr. King is of the opinion that the small pump belt came off and the boy tried to put it back on.. He probably was caught while doing this so quickly he had no time to cry for help. He was between 14 and 15 years of age.

Calumet—The Hermina Mining company, limited, has been organized by Lake Superior capitalists. The company is capitalized at $2,500,000, divided into 500,000 shares of a par value of $5 each. The property is located in Salter township, Algoma district, Ontario. Development work has been done and the showing is excellent. Four distinct veins outcrop the entire length of the property, and assays show that the ore carries 25 per cent copper and $2 in gold to the ton. A large force will be put to work.

Mrs. Anne Tunney, aged about 60 years, residing with her son, Frank, on a farm near Granite Bluff, Dickinson county, was attacked by a bull last week. In the first charge Mrs. Tunney had three ribs broken and in the second her shoulder blades. Mr. Tunney finally succeeded in driving the enraged animal into another field.

Iron Mountain—In an encounter at Metropolitan, near Iron Mountain, the other day, Charles J. Solberg, a well-known citizen, was badly beaten by Fred Smith. Solberg had his right arm broken and was badly pounded about the face and body.

The German Lutheran congregation at Iron Mountain has let a contract for the construction of a church, and the work is already in progress. The building will be a frame structure, 46 by 26 in size, and will cost about $2000.

Quinesec—The Corrigan-McKinney mine at Quinesec has been closed down and will remain so until a market can be procured for the ore. The fact that sales were slow prompted the suspension of operations. Some time ago the hands were laid off temporarily, but last week they were laid off permanently, and at the same time were paid in full. Seventy or more men were employed at the mine.

COWBOYS DROWNED.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 30.—Fred C. McCarthy and William Woods, cowboys of the Two-Bar ranch were drowned in the North Platte river while attempting to ford it.

PALLIUM TO BE CONFERRED.

New York, June 30.—Most Rev. John M. Farley, D. D., who was recently created archbishop of New York, will be invested with the pallium July 29, by a special messenger from Rome. The pallium will be conferred with elaborate ceremony at the cathedral here. Invitations to attend have ben sent to all the dignitaries of the Catholic church in the United States.

A PLAGUE OF LICE.

Albion, N. Y., JJune 30.—A plague of lice has visited the apple orchards in Orleans county. The growers have sprayed the trees with whaleoil but without effect. If the lice are not checked the apple crop of the county, valued at more than a million dollars, will be ruined.

IS AGAIN A WIDOW

After a Most Remarkable Career Is Mrs. Izora Kingery.

Had Five Husbands and All Were Hopelessly Crippled.

Hagerstown, Ind., June 30.—Mrs. Izora Kingery, of Rocky Ford, Colo., now visiting friends here, has received information from there that her husband, James Kingery, aged 70 years, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. This leaves Mrs. Kingery a widow for the fifth time. A peculiar fact in relation to Mrs. Kingery's marital experiences is that all of her husbands were hopelessly crippled.

Mrs. Kingery's maiden name was Izora Smith, and she lived near Hagerstown. She was of a romantic disposition, and when she announced that she was engaged to marry Abram Houser, a well-known citizen of Hagerstown, hopelessly crippled, her friends could hardly be made to believe it. Nevertheless, she married Mr. Houser and took excellent care of him until he died, five years later.

Her second venture was, if anything, more remarkable than the first. J. Roher, an aged man, proposed and was promptly accepted. He was almost helpless, but she proved a devoted wife to him and cheered his journey to the tomb. After waiting a suitable time the widow accepted a Mr. Himes, with whom she lived peaceably and happily until his demise a year later.

Her fourth husband was Oscar Pierson, of New Jersey. Mr. Pierson was bedridden, so crippled in his legs and back that he could not rise from his bed. He learned needlework, and made a living by selling the products of his skill. His sad fate caused him to despair, and he indited the story of his life and rolled the paper in a bit of fancy work and sent it out in the world upon its mission. That piece of fancy work was carried to Indiana and right into the hands of the very person, who, of all others, would likely be ready to sacrifice herself to relieve the poor sufferer. Mrs. Roher bought the piece of goods and found the bit of paper in the lining. When she read the story she did not hesitate, but immediately wrote Oscar Pierson a long effusion which breathed her interest and sympathy. The reply was prompt and all that could be desired.

Mrs. Roher decked herself out in fine array and visited the unfortunate man. Arriving at his home, she found him, indeed, bedridden and almost helpless. His spirit and helplessness appealed strongly to this woman of quick sympathy, and when he asked her to marry him the ceremony quickly followed. In all things she was a dutiful wife to him, and when death claimed him within a few months she put on widow's weeds and sincerely mourned.

But the habiliments of mourning were little suited to this remarkable woman, who felt that life was to be used rather than merely endured, and for the fifth time she essayed matrimony, again with a man whose career on earth was nearly finished. James Kingery, of Rocky Ford, Colo., attracted by the fame of her willing ministrations as a wife to helpless husbands, proposed by letter and was promptly accepted in the same manner. Mrs. Pierson traveled alone to Rock Ford and married him. Their married life was pleasant for two years and it seemed that at last Izora had encountered her true destiny. A few weeks ago she left to revisit her old home in Indiana. She left her aged husband in good health and received letters from him regularly. One day a telegram was handed to her, in which it was announced that Mr. Kingery had been killed. With overpowering sorrow Mrs. Kingery received the sad intelligence. It was the fulfillment of a belief or impression, that had possessed her that this husband would be removed by such a cause.

The fatalistic influence still possesses her. She will follow where it leads her. Should she be called upon to assume the care of a sixth husband whose infirmities remove him from the all but universal sympathy of the world she would not hesitate, it is believed, but would take up the burden and discharge her duty heroically and uncomplainingly in the full belief that such was her destined end.

BRANCHES ARE SNAKE-LIKE

Blossom Like a Tarantula and Have Deadly Chloroform Odor.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 30.—A wonderful tree of unknown variety has been discovered in a mountain canyon in a spur of the San Jacinto mountains, down near the Mexicon line. It was discovered by a party of prospectors who penetrated the canyon in search of water. A branch of the tree and its blossoms were brought to this city for classification, but it is unknown to botanists in this city.

The leaves of the tree resemble, in size and shape, the fig leaf, but they are of a vivid purple color and the underside of the leaf is thickly covered with stiff hairs which stand out from the leaf fully half an inch. These hairs are sharp and thornlike, and easily penetrate the skin, and when they do they are poisonous, causing swelling and much pain.

The blossoms are as peculiar as are the branches and leaves. They are of a rusty red color, and are about two inches in diameter. In shape they are a very good representation of the tarantula. There is a huge hairy bulb, in shape resembling the abdomen of the poisonous spider, and there are several chives or stamen corresponding to the legs of that insect.

The most peculiar features of the plant, however, remain to be told. Whenever one approaches the plant or when the wind agitates the branches of the tree the flowers give off an abundance of perfume—heavy, sickening and deadly. This perfume has the quality of chloroform, and a few inhalations of the odor produces unconsciousness. The prospectors who made the discovery of the plant were rendered insensible upon approaching the tree to examine it.

As the plant seems to have no botanical name two names have been suggested by the qualities of the plant itself. One is "Tarantula Plant;" the other "Chloroform Tree."

NOW COMES THE BIWABIK

This Mine Will Enter the Million Class the Present Year.

The list of Mesaba range iron mines that ship 1,000,000 tons of ore a season and upward is slowly but steadily growing.

Last year there were five mines in this whopper class, and this season there will be six. The sixth mine will be the Biwabik, which is expected to ship about 1,100,000 tons. The others are the Mahoning, Fayal, Adams, Stevenson and Mountain Iron.

Afair estimate is that these six mines will, between them, ship 7,500,000 tons of Mesaba iron ore.

The Biwabik, which is located at Biwabik, will enter this class for the first time this year. It has been capable of shipping 1,000,000 tons for several years, but has never done so because the demand for ore has not been large enough to warrant it. In 1899 the Biwabik shipped 907,000 tons, thus narrowly escaping the 1,000,000 mark. Last year it only shipped 623,127 tons. It began shipping in 1893 and has shipped more than 4,000,000 tons.

The Fayal will this year again head the list with the biggest shipments of any mine in the Lake Superior region. There will probably be a seventh 1,000,000-ton shipper in 1904, if the conditions of the iron and steel market continue favorable. The Stephens mine will be in a position to pass the mark of seven figures next season. The Burt mine, near Hibbing, is also in a position to enter the 1,000,000-ton class whenever the furnaces want that much of its use in a season. It is now a steam shovel proposition as well as an underground one. The Stephens is a stripper.

ST. PAUL TO DULUTH

By Wireless Telegraphy Is Plan of Twin City Men.

Not Expensive to Establish Stations at the Two Ends.

St. Paul, June 30.—A movement is being inaugurated for connecting the Twin Cities with Duluth by Marconi wireless telegraph. G. J. Whellams, secretary of the Northwestern Manufacturers' association, and H. P. Hall, secretary of the Jobbers' association, returned from a brief visit to Chicago. Mr. Hall was seen by a reporter at his office and talked readily on the topic. He said:

"We went to Chicago to meet by appointment Mr. Munroe, of New York, of the firm of Munroe & Munroe, Broad Exchange building, New York, who came West to confer with us. Munroe & Munroe are the underwriters for the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company of America, which has a capital of $6,500,000.

"It is really surprising when one comes to investigate," said Mr. Hall, "to see how much has been accomplished by this wonderful young man, who has already proved himself the genius of the century. Edison has for some years been working on the problem of wireless telegraphy, but he now says that Marconi's discovery is a success, and he has joined the Marconi company, turned over such patents as he had already secured and accepted the position of technical engineer of the Marconi company. It is a matter of wonder how so much has already been accomplished, but it can be positively stated that Marconi wireless telegraphy has passed the experimental stage, and is now a commercial proposition with a greater future for profit than the telephone, electric light and other propositions ever offered to the public, though they were marvelous in their financial results."

"Marconi is but 29 years old, a native of Italy. Prior to 1896 he experimented at home. He then went to London and sent messages from the tops of buildings. In 1897 he had so far progressed that he sent messages five miles and soon thereafter sent them from the Isle of Wight to Poole Harbor, a distance of eighteen miles. Messages are now sent over a distance of 3000 miles, and there is practically no limit to the distance they can be transmitted. As the vibrations flash through space at the speed of 187,000 miles a second, distance is a minor factor in the wonderful work. A regular service has been established between England and Italy, a distance of 1550 miles, and New York and England are correspondingly united. Italy has placed $150,000 at Marconi's disposal to connect that country with South America.

"The possibilities of wireless telegraphy," said Mr. Hall, "are almost more than the human mind can grasp and vivid as one's imagination may be, it will be more than realized within five or ten years.

"Already twenty-three ocean liners carry the apparatus and Lloyds' Underwriters' association of London has made a fifteen-year contract for all the shipping in which that great company is interested, which practically all the shipping of the world. The system is in operation in the Hawaiian islands, conecting all of the islands. The United States government has contracted with the company to connect Seattle, Wash., and Juneau, Alaska, by wireless telegraphy.

"The stations of the Lloyd company carry it around the world. There are besides fifty stations scattered along the coast of England. In fact, the demand is absolutely overwhelming, and the only delay in installing stations is in the manufacture of the instruments. A factory at Chelmsford, England, is being worked to its utmost capacity, while a school for operators at Baylon, L. I., and though only three weeks' schooling is required, the operators are not being pronounced rapidly enough. Every one steps into a position with a salary ranging from $75 to $100 a month, the moment he has received the education. The discovery is bound to revolutionize the cable service. Not that it will destroy the present cable companies, but it will so increase the volume of business that the cables and Marconi combined will be taxed to the their utmost capacity. There are fourteen trans-Atlantic cables connected with the United States, and all are fully occupied at a charge of 25 cents a word. The Marconi wireless system sends thirty words a minute across the ocean at a cost of 10 cents a word. The estimated profit of one Marconi station working one-half of the time for a year is $830,000, and for fourteen stations, matching the number of cables, over $10,000,000 profit.

"It costs between three and four million dollars to lay a cable, while the trans-Atlantic Marconi station can be installed for less than $100,000. Every cable company has to keep a patrol vessel with a crew of at least eighty men, to constantly cruise to keep the cable in order. All such expenses is avoided by the Marconi system.

"A congressional committee of the Fifty-sixth congress reported that it would cost $25,176,780 to lay a cable from San Francisco to Manila. Six wireless stations could be established at a cost of $100,000 each or a total for all of $600,000. Add the cost of instruments and the total cost of the six stations would not exceed $800,000, as against over $25,000,000 for one cable. I could go on by the hour to cite the advantages of the Marconi system, which insures its rapid adoption everywhere, but I have given reasons enough to show why its growth will be the most marvelous which has followed any invention the world has ever seen. Marconi has between 150 and 200 patents, and he has covered every country in the world that issues patents. He not only has the patents, but is absolutely in the field ready for and securing business.

"When the Bell telephone was exhibited at the centennial in Philadelphia in 1876, it was treated as a toy, and its stock went begging. It could scarcely be given away, much less sold, but results show that if a man had invested $100 in 1878 in Bell telephone stock and had clung to it to this date, he would now have a fortune of $260,000 to show for his investment.

"When Edison's Illuminating company tried to introduce incandescent lamps into buildings in New York, they had to agree to furnish light free for six months and give bonds to owners of the building against damage resulting from wiring, and also agree to remove the wires if demanded. Starting with $1,000,000 capital, the Edison company now represents $30,000,000 capital. In one year a $100 share of this company advanced to $4000.

"It took ten years after it was perfected to get the typewriter on the market. So it is with everything that is new, and when you consider how the Marconi system has leaped into the commercial arena in three or four years' time, it shows that it must have substantial merit. If it was not meritorious, men like Edison and Professor Pupin, who were working along the same lines, would not have turned their work over to the Marconi company. They know, as scientific men, that he is the real discoverer of wireless telegraphy. In a few years the only use for the mails will be for social correspondence. All business will be done by wire or wireless.

"It would not be at all expensive to establish stations in the Twin Cities and Duluth. Mr. Whellams and myself visited the Chicago station connected with Milwaukee on Saturday. It is located on the lake front on the North side, and consists of a mast 250 feet high carrying the wires and a small building perhaps 16 by 20 coutaining the instruments. The simplicity of the work is marvelous. We both sent messages to Milwaukee. The operator pressed a key, in appearance much like the ordinary telegraph key and instantly there was a crash like a pistol shot and a great flash of blueish light. With each movement of the key great sparks jumped two inches between the two silvered knobs of the induction coil. One knob of the coil is connected with the earth forming the ground connection. The other with the wires leading to the high mast, outside the building. Each spark gave an oscillating impulse to the areial wire and that in turn gave the impulse to the other which sent our messages to Milwaukee with the rapidity of a flash of lightning.

"When messages were sent across the English channel a severe test was given the system. Mr. McClure, the editor of McClure's Magazine, was permitted to send a message. He thus describes it:

"'It was about two years later on that Marconi succeeded in sending messages across the English channel, and he allowed us to send the first outside message in this manner. In order to make the test complete and to establish in the public mind our faith in the achievement, we devised a message in which the words were spelled backwards. It read: "McClure, Dover: Gaiteerg morf cnarf ot dnalgne hguorha elt rehte. Moffett." And meant: "Greeting from France to England through the ether." Without a single error, the message was received at Dover, and the following reply was sent at once:

"'Moffett, Boulogne: Your message received. It reads all right. Vive Marconi.'"

"The transmission is recorded on a tape by dots and dashes similar to the Morse alphabet. Continued Mcllall:

"I understand that some of the railroads are considering putting in stations connecting their St. Paul and Chicago office and also their moving trains. There is practically no limitation to what will come from this great invention, and almost no limit to the enormous profit which will accrue to the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America. The company has absolute control in every state and territory, including Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines. The Cuban government has also granted similar rights.

"The company is favorably considering the Twin City and Duluth proposition and its only a question of time when such stations will be installed.

"Mr. Munroe promised us that he would bring Marconi to St. Paul the coming autumn to look over the ground for himself. When he arrives, I bespeak in advance for him the grandest reception and ovation which this city has ever extended a private citizen. In so doing St. Paul will honor herself, by honoring a man, the memory of whose resplendent genius will last until time shall be no more."

PRINCE WHO LOVES WORKMEN

Ousted By Kaiser From the Governorship of Silesia.

Berlin, June 30.—The resignation of the duke of Trachenberg, Prince Von Hatzfeldt, from the governorship of Silesia, has not surprised any one. In fact, it has been looked for for several months, and it was known that the kaiser had intimated to the prince that if he did not resign immediately after election, he would be dismissed. There are many reasons for his falling from grace. He had no ability as a politician; was too outspoken to suit the emperor. He had always underrated the strength of the Polish Nationalists and was too lenient with the leaders of this party to suit the emperor. He was personally loved and respected by all parties, and the Polish element looks forward with great anxiety to the coming of his successor, who they fear will be an ultra-German.

The prince was very liberal in his views and once caused a sensation in the upper house of the Prussian congress by boldy stepping forward in defense of the working people, who, he said, should not be expected to stand at attention, hat in hand, and receive commands from their masters, as in days of old. The kaiser has not yet definitely settled who will succeed the prince as governor, but it is thought that he will appoint either Prince Albrecht of Wurrtemberg or Heinrich XXX of Reuss, son-in-law of the crown prince of Saxe-Meinengen.

Diseases Cured!

PAY NO MONEY IN ADVANCE.

Many sick people have suffered so much from unskilled and unscrupulous specialists that they have lost all faith in doctors. Many have paid large fees and have taken medicine for years to no benefit. They want to get well and are willing to pay a good price to be cured, but they very justly object to paying a large fee in advance. They want a trial treatment. To all such I make this—

REMARKABLE OFFER:

Simply write me, giving your name and address and stating as clearly as possible your trouble. When I have made a careful examination and diagnosis of your case and entered it in my case book, I will send you one package of medicine on trial, which you can take at my risk. If it gives any relief the cost will be $5. If it fails to help you it costs you nothing, and you shall be the judge.

ALL THE RISK IS MINE.

Can anything be fairer than this? I am making an offer which no other physician will make. They can't afford to. I refer to any bank in Duluth as to my financial standing and responsibility. This offer proves that I have great faith in my remedies. I KNOW they will cure, otherwise I wouldn't dare make this offer. It would ruin me, as I ship a hundred packages every day. I have tested this system for twenty years and I know that nine people out of ten are willing to pay where they get any benefit.

NO CURE, NO PAY.

is my motto. I do this to convince you who hesitate—who doubt all men's claims. I carry a line of specific medicines which cannot be had anywhere else in the state. Their power to cure disease is simply marvelous.

Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Skin Affections, Disease of the Kidneys, Stomach, Liver and Bowels, Nervous Troubles, Sexual Weakness, Varicocele and Throat and Lung Troubles cured as if by magic.

PLANS OF REYES

Colombian General Would Lead Revolt Against Marroquin.

Desires to Secure Independence of Province of Panama.

London, June 30.—The Morning Advertiser publishes on authority of the consul general at Colombia, a statement concerning the situation between the United States and Colombia with regard to the Panama canal. The statement is as follows:

The signing of the Hay-Herran treaty by the Colombian minister in Washington had been the object of American pressure and intrigue for many months. Every effort has been made to prevent the opposition party, headed by Gen. Reyes, gaining sufficient power to defeat the passage of the bill, but Gen. Reyes is in possession of sufficient arms and men to proclaim a revolution and unseat President Marroquin. He does not desire that the United States should not construct the canal, but he does desire fair treatment. Gen. Reyes considers that the terms of payment are insufficient and as a protest he is prepared to fight to the end.

As another means of gaining their end, for many months American agents have been inculcating a spirit of revolt against Colombian control into the minds of the people of Panama, and today the people are ready to rise when called to do so by the American agitators and proclaim their independence. This will be done if Gen. Reyes, the vice president of the Republic, is successful in inducing Colombia to refuse to sell. Panama will rise and claim its independence with American guns and ammunition purchased with American money. Once again America will step in and assert the independence of a downtrodden people as she has done in the past to her own increased and lasting benefit. Then, the American government will build the canal, enforcing its own terms on the helpless people.

WAGON RECORD BROKEN.

Lou Dillon Trots a Perfect Mile In 2.04 3-4.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 30.—Lou Dillon yesterday afternoon broke all records for a mile to wagon for trotters, going the distance in 2:04¾. The race was at a matinee of the Gentlemen's Driving club at Glenville track. The horse was driven by her owner, C. K. G. Billings. The race was made with the encouragement of a runner, who went ahead about five lengths and who maintained that position until about the three-quarters pole was reached. The mare had been going like a veteran all the distance. At the three-quarters pole the runner was pulled to allow Lou Dillon to come up alongside. The stretch was entered at great speed, the 1500 spectators who had been timing at the quarters had become excited as the watches indicated that all records had been broken, and, as the trotter passed the stand, arose en masse. The mile was made in 2:04¾, the horse finishing strong and seemingly ready to cover the distance a second time.

The new record beats that made by the same horse a couple of weeks ago, 2:06¾. The fractional time was 31¾, 1:03¾, 1:34, 2:04¾.

In a later race Mr. Billings drove The Monk the fastest mile credited any gelding this year, 2:08¾. Fractional time: :31, 1:04¾, 1:35¼, 2:08¾.

A runner was used to pace The Monk.

BIG SMELTER CLOSES.

Threatened Strike of Men Said to Be Cause.

Butte, Mont., June 30.—The big smelter of the Amalgamated Copper company, at Anaconda was shut down yesterday for an indefinite period, throwing 1500 men idle. The company announces that the shut-down is for the purpose of making repairs, but the men allege that it is done to forestall a probable strike to enforce a demand for higher wages. The strike was to have started on July 1. The mines at Butte, from whence the Anaconda smelter drew its ore supply, will also close, affecting over 2000 more men.

OLD FARMER GOES INSANE.

Altoona, Pa., June 30.—John Claar, a farmer, 75 years old, while temporarily insane, attacked his wife with a butcher knife while she was in bed. He stabbed her four times, inflicting fatal injuries. He then attacked his son Justin with an ax, but the son overpowered him after a struggle and took the weapon from him. The son ran from the house and informed neighbors. On returning he found that his father had hanged himself to a tree near the house. He was dead when cut down.

NOT MANY WILL GO

Duluth Veterans Will Not Be Numerous at San Francisco.

Rather Long and Expensive Journey For Veterans to Make.

The annual national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic is to be held the coming fall in the far West, at San Francisco. This will prevent the attendance of a large number of veterans who would like to go to the national reunion. The cost of the journey to the Pacific coast city will be large enough to deter many from going, and the long journey would be very fatiguing to many of the old veterans.

This will be especially true of the Eastern members of the organization. The prospect of traveling for from four to six days to reach the place of reunion and as many more to get home will dissuade many from going.

Duluth is as favorably located with reference to the encampment city as most cities, and yet the attendance from here will not be large, so far as can be judged at present. One of the members made the statement a day or two ago that he knew of but one Duluth veteran who had determined to go. There may be more when the time comes, of course, but usually the planning begins before the summer is reached. At this time last year there was much interest in the encampment which was to be held at Washington, but scarcely anything is heard of the San Francisco meeting.

As the members of the Grand Army grow older these encampments become more important and dear to them. They do not like to miss one. The next one it likely to be held in the East, probably Boston, as that city has formally invited them. It is about fourteen years since an encampment was held in Boston, and the memories of that one are reported to be very pleasant. There was some talk of holding the encampment in St. Louis, so the veterans might have a chance to visit the exposition, but that has been practically abandoned. It is felt that a lack of hotel and transportation facilities would mean hardship and unnecessary expense to the visitors. Some plan may be devised by which the old soldiers may go to some place near St. Louis, as Kansas City, from which place they could make trips to the exposition if they so desired.

WINNIPEG MAY COME.

Shamrock Lacrosse Team Would Visit Duluth.

Secretary Cargill, of the Duluth Lacrosse club received a letter last evening from the management of the Shamrock lacrosse team of Winnipeg asking for a game in Duluth at some date during the summer. The Winnipeggers are willing to come for their expense money only.

The matter will be considered by the local club. The expenses of bringing the Canadians here would be very heavy and the present finances of the local club would not warrant the outlay. No definite reply will be sent to the Winnipeg club until after the game with Fort William next Saturday. If the home team makes a good showing against the men from the north shore and if the experiment of bringing them here proves a financial success it is likely that a favorable answer will be sent to Winnipeg.

The Winnipeg team is one of the strongest in Western Canada ranking second but very few of the teams in the Dominion to the North. A recent game with Duluth's old rivals, St. Paul, resulted in an even break on the home grounds of the Saintly City men and Duluth will find the Canadians dangerous opponents.

The game with Fort William scheduled for July 4 is at present occupying all the attention of the home players who are making every effort to put a winning team in the field.

SON OF MILLIONAIRE

Has Spent a Fortune and Is Disowned.

Paris, June 30.—The police were surprised recently when one morning they arrested a ragged-looking tramp asleep on one of the benches of the Avenue des Champs Elysees and heard him say that he was the son of a millionaire. His appearance was entirely against him. His hair was long and unkempt, his beard had not been cut for an age and his clothes were in tatters. The tramp said that his name was Henri Teutch, and that he belonged to the great Teutch family, known as one of the wealthiest in Paris.

On inquiry, the tramp's declarations were found to be true. His father lives in a sumptuous palace almost opposite the very bench where his son was picked up in rags. The father of Teutch said that he would no longer acknowledge him; that his son had within a short time spent a fortune of 2,500,000 francs, and had in addition sold the magnificent furniture with which he had furnished an apartment for him in the Rue General de Foy.

Henri Teutch now says that since he has had a taste of the pleasures of tramp life he will always remain a tramp and become a modern Diogenes.

AS AN ASTRONOMER

President Loubet Will Pass Time After Retirement.

Paris, June 30.—President Loubet will resume his study of astronomy as soon as he lays down the cares of state. The president will retire altogether from the field of politics and devote himself to the favorite study of his school days, so that Camille Flammarion will have to look out for his laurels.

An observatory is being built on the grounds of the chateau which the president recently purchased. The villagers of Montelimar are delighted at the prospect of the return of M. Loubet, and much of their time is devoted to the discussion of the best means of doing him honor.

He used to be their mayor, and the majority of them think of offering that office to him again. President Loubet will be made to feel as if he were beginning life all over again. He is another Cincinnatus.

THE TENNIS CONTEST

Tournament Nearing the End With Three Players Still In.

Shamrock Lacrosse Team of Winnipeg Would Come to Duluth.

The tennis tournament of the Endion club is drawing to a close, but three contestants remaining in the race.

Grady showed his ability to win games by other methods than defaults of opponents, pulling out a victory in a pretty contest with Palmer by the score of 6—3 and 6—4. Hopkins won from Peck in two straight sets by the decisive score of 6—1 and 6—2.

Ames won his game against Gridley Saturday.

The contest between Graff and Ingalls proved to be one of the prettiest of the tournament. It was the first three set match that has been played, Graff finally winning out by the score of 6—0, 3—6, and 6—2.

Hopkins, Grady, Graff and Ames were thus entered in the semi-finals.

Grady and Hopkins came together yesterday afternoon in one of the finest exhibition of tennis seen on the Endion courts this year. The first set was a deuce set, the score mounting from five-all to six-all and seven-all without either player gaining any material advantage. At this point Hopkins weakened and Grady ran the two games necessary to win. The second set was won handily by Grady. Hopkins evidently being discouraged by the result of the first. The score in the second set was 6—0.

Graff and Ames will come together this afternoon. If the weather permits, in what promises to be one of the hottest contests in the tournament. The winner will go into the finals with Grady for the handsome racquet which is offered as a prize to the winner.

The final game will probably not be played until Thursday when it will be made somewhat of a society event, the friends of the members being invited to attend and witness the contest.

The tournament has proved a very successful one, the interest in the contests increasing as the players were gradually eliminated. It has had the effect of bringing out a number of good players and proving the relative strength of the different men.

Hints To Advertisers

White's Sayings: Advertising, like the water that runs the mill, must be kept constantly flowing.

The fact that a store does not advertise is taken by many people as sufficient evidence of its being an undesirable place in which to trade.

A Duluth merchant recently sold a big bill of goods to a man who had read the firm's announcement in a Duluth Evening Herald obtained in Montreal, Canada.

Jed Scarboro: In gambling it is well to quit playing when the game is at its best. In advertising it is best to go it all the stronger when returns prove that it isn't a game of chance, but a means to an end.

What fuel is to the furnace and steam is to the engine, so advertising is to the wheels of trade. But a poor announcement is a broken cog.

Progressive Advertiser: Advertising turns stock over and over with wonderful rapidity, no matter whether the merchant or the manufacturer does the advertising.

"Multum in parvo"—little Herald want ads.

All cannot afford to use page ads, but the business which does not advertise in some degree, certainly does not impress the prospective buyer as a place where benefit would be derived in trading.

Printers' Ink: Rules for advertising may be wise, but no rules have as yet been found which it would not at times be wise to disregard. Every advertiser must be a law unto himself. He must shape his own policy and make his own laws. His own experience will be worth more than the experiences of all the rest of the advertisers in the world. This is not to say that he shall not study the methods and announcements of all the other advertisers. Nothing that he can gather on the subject is useless, but in the science or art of advertising, precedent is no fetich.

NAMES GIVEN WAIFS

By London City Guardians Rouses Notables' Ire.

London, June 30.—If the immortal author of "Oliver Twist" were now alive he would be delighted to observe that the problem of selecting names of foundlings is still as embarrassing as it was when Mr. Bumble invented the alphabetical order scheme. The city guardians are wrestling with it, because of complaints from great people that their names have been bestowed upon the city waifs without their permission.

It will be remembered that recently a foundling boy was named Eric Farrar and certain guardians said this was an unwarrantable use to make of the late dean's name.

Once the names of two of the board's officers—Mr. Drake and Mr. Buncombe—were used, and a poor foundling is now struggling through the world with John Buncombe for his name.

In 1897 a girl was found on the steps of Bishopsgate church and was given the marvelously ridiculous name of Victoria Marlborough, after the queen, and because of the fact that the Bishop of Marlborough was at the time rector of Bishopsgate. The bishop was highly indignant and the name was changed to Victoria Bishop.

GREAT EVENTS FACED

By Europe, Says Writer In London Truth.

London, June 30.—A writer in Truth is convinced that Europe is on the threshold of momentous events. He says it is the opinion of many who have been behind the scenes in current history that we are entering on a period which will be more interesting than any other of modern times. We have come to a meeting of systems. The mediaeval system and the modern cannot run together any better than a donkey and an automobile. Throughout Europe there are signs of fast approaching trouble. It is scarcely possible a decade will pass without those troubles coming to the front. It is probable they will come much sooner. For those taking an intelligent interest in interesting things this is the time to live. But it is America that is making history. The independence of the individual, the wealth of the country, the enterprise and energy of Americans and the fast growing power of the United States are having an enormous influence on the present situation. If the Americans are like this, why are we so unlike them? is the question which millions in the old world are asking. It is not the character or climate, but political conditions which give them these advantages, they argue.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. J. E. Waggoner, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I can most heartily recommend your Castoria to the public as a remedy for children's complaints. I have tried it and found it of great value."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the case with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

Dr. F. H. Kyle, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "It affords me pleasure to add my name to the long list of those who have used and now endorse your Castoria. The fact of the ingredients being known through the printing of the formula on the wrapper is one good and sufficient reason for the recommendation of any physician. I know of its good qualities and recommend it cheerfully."

BREAK THE PRICE

Rains In the Northwest Cause Sharp Slump In Wheat.

Northwestern Markets Are Firmest—Flax Also Has a Break.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 30.—The rains came to the Northwest as they almost invariably do after a crop scare has run a certain length of time, and with them went a good slice of the advance that has been made. Chicago and St. Louis lost heaviest, the former declining 2¼-3c on the July and 1½c on the September, and the latter 2c on the July and 2-3c on the September. In the Northwest the decline was not quite so much. Minneapolis showing losses of 1½c on the July and 1¾c on the September and Duluth 1½c on the July and 1⅝c on the Setember. New York declined 1½c on both options.

General and better rains were reported throughout the Northwest, North Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Manitoba all reported good amounts of rain and at most points the weather was still threatening this morning. The Kansas state report also gave little comfort to the bulls, for it predicted a yield of 100,000,000 bus. The cables did not affect the market much either way, but were steady. Liverpool closed ½d higher, Paris 1c to 1½c higher, and Antwerp 1½c lower. There was a little better cash demand in the local market, shippers selling about 25,000 bus to Eastern millers.

Primary receipts of wheat were 368,000 bus, last year 509,600 bus. Shipments 155,000 bus, last year 45,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 179,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 222 cars, and at Chicago 41, a total of 263 cars, against 298 last week and 301 last year.

In the Chicago market corn was somewhat weaker, the July option showing a loss of ⅝-¾c. In the Liverpool market it closed ½@¾d higher. July oats continued their decline, making a loss of 1c. Primary receipts of corn were 873,000 bus, last year 322,000 bus. Shipments 325,000 bus, last year 117,000 bus. Clearances were 352,000 bus.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was fairly active, September opened with an asked price of 77¾c, but the first sale a moment or two later was at 76⅝c. It sold up to 77¾-⅞c at 9:55, fell to 76⅞c at 10:25, rallied to 77c at 10:50 and fell steadily after that to 76¼c at noon. After a rally to 76⅝c it fell again and closed at 76⅛c. This was a decline of 1¾c.

Cash sales were active, aggregating 50,000 bus, July price was paid for No. 1 northern and this ranged from 6 to 6¾c over September. For No. 2 the price was 11c under No. 1.

There was heavy trading in flax and the market slumped. Early in the day it sold 3c off to 4 and then rallied to $1.07¾, but could not hold the gain and fell to $1.06. From there it rallied to $1.06¾ but again turned weak and closed at 96¾c. This was a loss of 11c. The later options all declined 10c. Minneapolis reported 20 cars and Duluth 46. Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive: No. 1 hard, 81c; No. 1 northern, 82¾c; No. 2 northern, 81c; July, 82½c; September, 76⅝c; December, 75¼c. Flax in store, 98½c; to arrive, 99¾c; on track, 100¾c; July, 96¾c; September, $1.04½; October, $1.01¾; Nov. $1.02. Oats—To arrive, 37@37½c; on track, 37@37½c. Rye—To arrive, 56½c; on track, 56c. Barley, 35@37c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 45; last year, 97; oats, 24; rye, 2; barley, 6; flax, 46; last year 14.

Receipts—Wheat, 58,953; oats, 11,337; rye, 451. Shipments—Wheat, 30,543; oats, 1128; flax, 72,034.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

General Rains Again Cause Weakness In Wheat.

Chicago, June 30.—General rains in the Northwest caused weakness in wheat at the opening today, September being ¾@¾c to ⅞@1c lower at 77¼c to 77½c. While the weather conditions in the spring wheat belt were the main influences, the Kansas state report showing a record-breaking yield, 100,000,000 bus., was also a factor in creating a bearish sentiment among traders, and many longs and commission houses sold freely early in the day. Cables were firm but being late in arriving this influence was not felt until trading was well under way, but toward the end of the first hour the market had regained much of the early loss. Duluth and Minneapolis reported receipts of 222 cars which, with local receipts of 41 cars—two of contract grade—made total for the three points of 263 cars against 298 last week and 301 a year ago.

Liquidation by local longs was the feature of trading throughout the entire day and the market though temporarily supported by the strength in corn soon yielded to the selling pressure and was weak. September sold off to 76¾c, and closed at 76¼@¾c a loss of 1¾c for the day.

Corn opened fairly steady on strong cables and a good cash demand although the weakness in wheat caused some selling of September at the start but the demand was sufficient to absorb all the offerings. September was a share to ¼c lower at 40¾c to 40⅝@¾c, but later advanced to 41¾c with little on the market. Local receipts were 582 cars, with 77 of contract grade.

The weakness in wheat had a depressing influence late in the day and the market was about steady, September closing a shade lower at 40⅝c.

There was very little trading in oats and opening prices were a trifle easier on favorable weather, September being ⅛ to ¼c lower at 33⅞c to 34c, but later, on the strength in corn the price advanced to 34⅜c. Local receipts were 318 cars.

Selling of pork and ribs caused an easier tone in those products at the opening and with a dull market and little support prices declined still further. September pork opened 10c lower at $15.90, September lard was unchanged at $8.45 and ribs 2½c lower at $8.77½.

Close: Wheat—July, 77@77½c; old, 77¾c; September, 76¾@¾c; old, 76⅝@¾c; December, 76c; old, 76⅜c; May, 79¼c. Corn—June, 39c; July, 39@39½c; September, 40⅝c; December, 40¾c; May, 48⅜c. Oats—June, 29c; July, 32c; September, 34c; December, 34½c; May, 36¼@¾c. Pork—July, $15.32½; September, $15.32½. Lard—July, $8.10; September, $8.30; October, $8.22½. Ribs—July, $8.57½; September, $8.65@8.67½; October, $8.45. Rye—July, 51c; September, 51½c. Flax—Cash, N. W., $1.02; S. W., 99c; July 99¾c; September, $1.00. Timothy—June, $9.85. Clover—June, $11.50. Barley—Cash, 42@53c. Cash wheat—2 red, 78¼c; 3 red, 76@78c; 2 hard winter, 78c; 3 hard winter, 75@76½c; 1 northern spring, 79¼c; 2 northern spring 78@80c; 3 spring, 75@78c. Corn—No. 2, 41@41½c; 3, 40¾@41c. Oats—2, 38@39c; 3, 37½@38c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald:—Crop troubles have been the factor in the market since May 1, when there was the freeze through the Southwest. There has been the typical experience since. Through May there was no way of establishing whether there had been loss to the winter wheat or not. There was not much change to the price through that month. By June 1 the southwestern trade began to claim losses in the winter wheat belt, and its news and its buying began to affect the market.

A week ago there was a note of alarm over the spring wheat condition because of dry weather. The market responded promptly to this because there had been such incredulity and delay in acting on the southwestern claims.

Since June 1, under the double incentive of the southwestern and northwestern news, prices have advanced about 10c at Chicago and 12c to 17c at St. Louis, he close last week showed Chicago up 7½c over June 1, Minneapolis and Duluth up 6c to 8c, St. Louis up 10c to 16c and New York up 7c.

Influences other than the crop condition have been more and more ignored during the past six weeks of crop uncertainty. The American markets have drawn away from the foreign. While there has been an advance of 7c to 10c on this side, Liverpool is up 2¾ to 1¼d on its spot prices and 1½ to ¾d up on its futures, the latter equal to 1c to 3½c a bushel. Everything has got out of joint in an export way. Wheat is offered for resale a Galveston several cents cheaper relatively than at Kansas City, and wheat is offered at New Orleans as cheaply as it was when St. Louis was 10c lower.

But when crop damage becomes the motive in a market it does not pay the speculator to be too logical. All is uncertainty until there is something definite as to the extent of the crop loss, and at the present time there is no deciding whether the situation will force the foreign markets up or the American prices down.

Crop scares usually run to extremes, but conservatism on crop scares has often proved costly. In 1900 there was an advance of over 20c on dry weather in the Northwest, all accomplished within a few weeks; it took the market six months to realize there had been exaggeration and to lose the advance. With so vast a wheat area as in this country the crop situation, especially at a time of unpropitious weather, is beyond any one, even beyond the authorities whose business it is to investigate.

At the present time the conservative view, the opinion of those whose lines are the most numerous and far reaching, is that the spring wheat situation is not worse than "critical," and that, conceding all the losses, there will be about 50,000,000 bushel winter wheat over last year.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market is active and lower. The approaching delivery day on July wheat caused a good deal of liquidation by holders and added to the weakness. Reports concerning the amount of distribution of grains are conflicting. It is safe to say considerable relief has been afforded. Cables indicate only a steady market. Cash situation is slow. The threshing returns from the winter wheat country still have a disappointing tone and tendency. We are inclined to think the reaction from the high prices of last week fully discounts whatever influence the dry weather in the Northwest may have had on the market. We are still inclined to expect that the general government will be bullish. We may be wrong, but we are not looking for low-priced wheat. We think wheat bought on the breaks from this price will be pretty safe and whatever the market may lose temporarily it will regain later.

Corn—Market strong early and advanced sharply but lost the improvement before the close. The weakness in wheat no doubt contributed to the reaction but weather in the corn belt is generally favorable. The cash demand is on the whole very good. We can only say that the prices is so high that we do not feel like advising its purchase. At the same time weather conditions must be almost perfect over a long period to insure an average crop. A good many of the best local traders are bullish.

Oats—The action of this market was about the same as in corn and for the same reasons. Cash demand is hardly so good. General reports indicate that while the oat crop is a little downward and uneven, it is making fairly good progress.

• • •

Chicago: Statistician Snow, who is just back from the Northwest, says rain in the Red River valley is badly needed and the situation is critical. Good rains at once, he says, would bring full relief but local showers will not be enough. The Canadian Northwest promises, he says, twenty-five million bushels more wheat than last year. Flax in the Northwest has held its own better than wheat.

CROP CONDITIONS

As Shown By Weather Bureau's Weekly Summary.

Washington, June 30.—The weather bureau's weekly summary of crop conditions is as follows:

Throughout the central valleys, lake region, Atlantic coast districts and the northern portion of the southern states the week has been decidedly cool, and the Atlantic coast and east gulf districts have suffered from continuous rains. While too cool for rapid growth, crops have made favorable advances in the central valleys where the general absence of heavy rains has been favorable for cultivation and harvesting. Warmth and dampness are greatly needed in the Atlantic coast and east gulf districts. Drought conditions in South Dakota have been largely relieved, but continue with damaging effects in North Dakota and northern Minnesota. Rain is needed in the central portion of Washington, while work has been interfered by rains in western Oregon. Elsewhere on the Pacific coast the conditions have been generally favorable. Further improvement in the condition of corn is generally reported, and while the crop is somewhat late it is making growth over the western portion of the corn belt the condition of the crop in Iowa now closely approximating the average. In the middle Atlantic states, corn has made slow growth, is very backward, and much in need of cultivation.

Except over local areas, the weather conditions have been very favorable for winter wheat harvesting in the central valleys, but the work has been interrupted by rains in the middle Atlantic states. A marked improvement in the condition of winter wheat is reported from New York and Michigan and the crop is maturing rapidly in good condition in Nebraska.

In North Dakota there has been a decided deterioration in the condition of spring wheat as a result of drought, which has also proved damaging in portions of South Dakota and Northern Minnesota. Generally, however, South Dakota and on uplands in Southern Minnesota, the crop is in a thrifty condition and it continues promising in Wisconsin, Iowa and Nebraska. A decided improvement is reported from Washington and Oregon except in Central Washington, where drought is causing injury.

Except in North Dakota and portions of South Dakota, Minnesota and the Upper Ohio valley, the oat crop has made very favorable advancement. Harvesting is in progress as far north as Southern Missouri.

The condition of cotton is very generally improved throughout the belt, but continued late and is suffering from cultivation in the eastern districts where low night temperatures have checked growth. Lice and rust have caused injury in North Carolina and Missouri, and in Texas boll weevils are spreading and are more injurious. The crop is also suffering from cultivation in portions of Louisiana and Central and Northern Texas. Sunshine and heat are generally needed, especially in the central and eastern districts.

In the tobacco districts the weather conditions have been very favorable for this crop, which, however, is in need of cultivation in Maryland.

A fine crop of hay is being secured in the Central valleys, and the condition of grasses in the Middle Atlantic states and New England is much improved.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Market Eased Off and Hardened and Closed Unsteady.

United States Steel Scored a Good Advance From Monday.

New York, June 30.—Yesterday's advance in stocks was carried further in London this morning but there was some profit taking there before our opening. First prices here were generally a small fraction above last night. Sugar and Metropolitan securities rose a point and Pacific coast second pfd 2½. There were large dealings in some of the leading stocks, notably Erie, in which there were running sales of 4000 shares at an extreme advance of ⅝.

Considerable stock was met around the opening range of prices, but the market absorbed all offerings and rose higher in spots. St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western, Reading and Missouri Pacific made the best gains and were likewise the most active. Some sharp gains were made in usually inactive stocks. Detroit Southern pfd and Malting rose 2. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo 2¾. Detroit United Railway 2½. Long Island 3, and Pittsburg, C. C. St. L. 4¼. Advances of 1 to 1½ were also scored in Hocking Valley, Northwestern, Cleveland, C. C. & St. L., Denver & Rio Grande pfd and Kansas & Texas.

The market eased off and then hardened again. Reading and B. & O., Norfolk & Western and Missouri Pacific went a fraction higher than before but generally the previous level was not exceeded. Smelting rose 1½, Pump pfd 1¾ and Reading second pfd 3. A number of minor stocks rose a point. The market then became dull and easier. United States Steel second fives rose 1¼ and Wabash debentures B's fell 1⅞. The bond market otherwise was dull and firm at noon.

The midday movement of prices was narrowed and hesitating until just before 1 o'clock when the grangers and Pacifics were taken in hand again and lifted upward. St. Paul, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Rock Island and Reading all reached a higher level than the forenoon. United States Steel was bought freely and rose a point, while Western Union gained nearly 2. Trading was active and dealings in some stocks quite heavy, while the demand was on.

Substantial advances continued to be made in some of the less known stocks. Pacific Coast second preferred rieing 4½, Minneapolis & St. Louis and Railroad Investment 2½, and Consolidated Gas and Great Western preferred B's 1. Northwestern reacted a point.

The taking of profits in the final hour cost the speculative leaders practically all of their earlier gains and some of them fell to below last night's level. International Power rose 8¾. Minneapolis & St. Louis 5, Norfolk & Western preferred and Southern Railway 1, before the drift of prices turned decidedly downward. The market steadied about last night's level and United States Steel preferred was then marked up 2¼ over last night with slight hardening effect on the list. Locomotive rose 1½. The close was dull and unsteady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The market has begun to discount good conditions, and higher prices should prevail all the week. The advance started just about on schedule time with stocks a purchase Friday as predicted. There may be some recessions today, but I am not in favor of taking profits before Thursday. If not already long buy any of the active stocks on recessions of about one point.

Waldorf to Coe Commission Co.: The semi-official announcement from Philadelphia that all the new Pennsylvania stock had been taken and that 90 per cent of it has been paid up in full is viewed as a strong bull card in the general stock market. The feeling is strong that before the successful outcome of this affair which at its inception was used with effect as a bear argument marks the beginning of recovery which, while it will be interrupted by reactions will carry prices to a much higher level. Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Reading and Erie stocks are the favorites of the railroad list, while among the industrials Copper and the Steel stocks are the favorites and considered to be good for a considerable advance. Sentiment continues to reflect a more cheerful tone and there is no question that the passing of the Pennsylvania stock issue and the U. S. Steel conversion plan has removed a heavy load for speculation. With these things out of the way attention is being diverted to those favorites which for traffic and earning. Much satisfaction is evidenced over the rainfall in the West and the resultant improvement in the Northwest crop outlook. This has undoubtedly started fresh strength to the railroad list and if cotton should collapse, as some very shrewd operators believe it is certain to do, the effect would be lost. All further encourage the belief in higher prices for good securities. Aside from crop influences, however, it is likely that individual stocks will have important upward movements and the talk is that Reading common will be conspicuous. There has been for over a month quiet buying of these shares by powerful interests; it is known that the earnings of themselves are sure to furnish effective ammunition for the bulls.

Dow Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: During the past week, H. H. Rogers, William Rockefeller and the Lewisohns have been steady buyers of Amalgamated. They began about three weeks ago, just before its break to 51. It is current report that the next dividend will be one per cent.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The Chronicle says: "Wolverine's annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, will show a cost of less than 8c per pound of copper. In this respect the mine stands alone in the lake group. The June product will break all records. The company can easily pay $6 per annum at 12c copper. The present refined copper contants are a trifle less than thirty pounds per ton of rock."

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The Chronicle says: "Wolverine's record standing record of 503 tons daily for one week stands unequalled in that district. Shafting is about to be resumed at both shafts. Ground has been commenced on the west lode and the rock secured is paying expenses. Drifting north on this lode encountered a poor ground so that work in this direction was discontinued and a drift started south."

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 30.—A sensational break occurred in the prices of cotton this morning. July contracts broke 53 points and August 34 points.

For a long time such a decline has been predicted and numerous theories were in circulation in explanation of remarkable losses. One was to the effect that there were international dissensions in the pool ranks, and another that a certain element of the New Orleans contingent was "leaking cotton." After the first rush of liquidation, however, there was a partial rally and many bullish evidences of value support, but the market remained very nervous.

Bull support was continued all the forenoon and prices were almost uninterruptedly forced upward until at midday the near months showed declines of 5 to 10 points, while the new crop positions were unchanged to 2 points higher. Then came the weekly review of the weather bureau which received a bullish interpretation and further gains of from 5 to 8 points were scored with the market displaying great nervousness and considerable activity.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 25 points lower; middling uplands, 13.00; middling gulf, 13.25, sales, 36 bales. Cotton futures closed steady; July, 12.80; August, 12.79; September, 11.72; October, 10.80; November, 10.02; December, 9.96; January, 9.91; February, 9.86; March, 9.85.

CROPS DAMAGED

By Wind and Rain Near Madison, S. D.

St. Paul, June 30.—A special to the Dispatch from Madison, S. D., says: A hard storm of wind and rain passed over here during the night and most of the grain is flat on the ground. All of the crops were looking fine and corn was coming to the front. Barley especially was heavy, most of the grain will not rise again. Nearly two inches of water fell.

WIND AT LA CROSE.

La Crosse, Wis., June 30.—A severe wind storm, followed by a flood of rain, did considerable damage in Western Wisconsin and Eastern Minnesota this morning. Hundreds of acres of corn in this immediate vicinity were laid low by the wind and the rain was so heavy that many crops on side hills were almost entirely washed out.

The Steamer T. D. Stimpson Burned Near Star Island.

Schooner Kolfage Has Been Released By Tug Owen.

Detroit, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer T. D. Stimson, down, is afire near Star Island. News of the disaster came to Detroit by telephone Shortly before noon the ship was reported to be blazing from stem to stern and nearly burned to the water's edge. She was at that time opposite the Riverside hotel, whence the news of the fire came. The Stimson is a wooden vessel, built in 1882. She is 160 feet long and of 31 feet beam. The boat is owned by A. B. Slyfield, of Port Huron. The vessel is used in the lumber trade.

LUMBER RATE LOW.

Vessel Owners Say There Is No Money In It.

Te Koher Lumber company of Detroit, which is one of the largest lumber firms on the lower lakes, owning a big fleet of lumber carriers, has chartered outside vessels to carry 3,000,000 feet of lumber, claiming that it is cheaper to charter outside vessels at the present lumber rates than to operate its own with th high price of labor and the increased cost of coal.

President Kocher, of the Kocher company, who is a member of the board of managers of the Lumber Carriers' assocd ation, declares that the association made a mistake in contracting with the seamen's union for help on small boats. Under no circumstances, he claims, would owners have to pay more than the union wages, while there are chances that they could get men for less.

Vessels owners are predicting a rise in rates before many weeks and many claim that before such a rise is forthcoming, they will lose money this season.

The Lake Carriers' shipping office in Chicago, which has been used for years to supply crews for vessels, has been closed and J. W. Hanson the shipping master, discharged. The work of the office was done away with when the association made contracts with all the labor unions last winter.

CARNIVAL NEWS

Railroads Are Making Excellent Rates For the Week.

Couple Wanted to Be Married In the Lion's Den.

The time for the big Duluth summer carnival is drawing near, and preparations are going on smoothly, with every prospect that they will be entirely complete when the opening day arrives, next Monday, July 6.

The Ferari Bros. show, which is the only one of the entire exhibition, is now at Sioux Falls, S. D., and it will arrive in Duluth at 5 o'clock on the morning of the opening day. Owing to the time necessary for the work of putting up the different shows, there will be no afternoon performances on Monday, but the gates will open at 7 o'clock Monday evening, and after that they will be open from 1 o'clock p. m. to 11 o'clock p. m. every day.

Work on the grounds is going ahead rapidly. The fences are all up, and had it not been for the rain today work would have begun on the booths that are to be erected for concessions. The show ground is below London road, between Twelfth and Fourteenth avenues east, and it comprises a space 600 feet by 320 feet, with the entrance on London road. The shows will be arranged in a semi-circle, with their backs to the lake front and facing London road. In a straight line parallel with and next to London road will be the booths that will be used by various concessionists, including local merchants with displays of goods. In the center will be the handsome illuminated arched entrance. Between the line of booths and the semi-circle of shows will be an open space in which the five free shows will be located.

Ambitious couples intending matrimony and wishing to commit it under glorious and fame-winning auspices should communicate with the carnival committee.

One of the features that has been planned is a wedding in the big lion's den. The couple that will do this will get an outfit of furniture for their trouble, besides being the center of attraction and the most famous wedded couple that ever started down the pike of matrimonial bliss together. The big cage, containing five handsome, big lions in charge of their trainer, will be pulled up to a platform. The minister will stand on the platform, and will communicate the marriage service to the couple within the cage.

One of the compartments in the line of booths will be made a newspaper headquarters, a sort of rest house where people who get tired of walking around and looking at the sights can sit down and rest up. Telephone service will be installed there.

The committee has arranged to have an old-fashioned general store, where anything from a paper of pins to an automobile can be bought. There will be an element of chance in it, too, that will provide a lot of fun. The merchants are donating goods for this purpose very liberally.

There is no question about the attendance, providing the weather holds good. Besides local patronage, all of the railroads have fallen into line with carnival rates, and there will be an excursion or two or three.

The Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Omaha and South Shore roads have agreed to give a rate of a fare-and-a-third for the round trip from all points within 20 miles of Duluth. The Iron Range and Missabe road give this rate for Monday and Friday, and on Wednesday there will be a big excursion with one fare for the round trip, when 2000 to 3000 people are expected in.

The Northern Pacific will bring in another big excursion from Jamestown, N. D., Staples and Brainerd and intermediate and adjacent points, one of the longest routes ever covered in any of these excursions. The trains will arrive here at 5:05 o'clock p. m. Friday, and a rate of $5 for the round trip from Jamestown, with lessening rates for nearer points, will be given.

The Great Northern is also figuring on an excursion, which has not yet been definitely decided upon.

The contest for the coveted position of queen of the carnival is waxing warm. At carnival headquarters in the Manhattan building today it was announced that a dark horse had entered the race, and that the lady is giving the present leader in the contest a close race. Her name, at her own request, is withheld for the present.

"THE CHARITY BALL."

Sale of Seats Promises Large Audience.

The sale of seats opened this morning at the Metropolitan theater for "The Charity Ball," which will be given again Wednesday evening, and from present indications the beautiful play will be greeted by another splendid audience.

"The Charity Ball," has been a greatly talked of play since its production recently, many theater-goers have regretted that they were unable to witness either of the two performances, and the announcement of a reproduction for the benefit of St. Luke's hospital, has been received with much pleasure.

The great drama will be put on with the same care, the same beautiful settings and furnishings as given at the Lyceum two weeks ago. The Silberstein & Bondy company is to have entire charge of the stage furnishings, sending its own artist to do the shaping and worth of antique furniture, bric-a-brac, oriental rugs and draperies used in the first act, the library in the rectory of St. Mildred's church. The same beautiful gowns and jewels worn in the ballroom scene at the first presentation of the piece and which created so many favorable comments, will be worn again tomorrow night. The third act of "The Charity Ball," the library of the rectory immediately after the ball, is supposed to take place at 2 o'clock in the morning. When the curtain rises on the beautiful scene, there is no one on the stage. Through the windows overlooking the church, a fierce snow storm is seen, the church chimes peal out the hour, and old Mr. Betts, the organist of St. Mildred's, can be heard playing an anthem in the church. In this act takes place the great scene between the rector, John Van Buren, Ann Gruger, Phyllis Lee and Dick Van Buren, in which the brothers are just in the act of striking each other, when from the bedroom, the voice of the blind mother calls, "boys, boys," and makes one of the strongest and most beautiful climaxes ever written.

Mr. Hestor, the character actor of the new Metropolitan Stock company, arrived from New York yesterday, and will take the part of Judge Knox, Leslie Hubbel, who played the part two weeks ago, having been injured in a ball game last Saturday.

Between the second and third acts, William Bingham Ayers, who has come here to join the new company at the Metropolitan will give a reading.

Mrs. Lettie Cole, living at 512 Second avenue east, says: "During five or six years I suffered a great deal with my kidneys and at times was very bad, especially if I caught cold or overexerted myself. My health was generally run down and I felt used up. There was a constant, heavy dull aching pain across the small of my back and in my kidneys. The secretions from these organs were unnatural and deposited a heavy sediment. I tried different remedies at different times, but did not succeed in getting anything to help me. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended, I procured a box at W. A. Abbett's drug store and began to use them. They helped me at once, and I boldly grew better and stronger. I do not speak too highly of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I unhesitatingly recommend them to others."

SHIPMENTS FALL OFF

June Ore Shipments Will Not Equal a Year Ago.

Over-Supply and Delays at Lake Erie the Cause.

The month of June will be a disappointing one in iron ore shipments.

The shortage of boats at this end and the inability to unload them rapidly enough on Lake Erie has set ore transportation back.

It is estimated today that the ore shipments from the head of the lakes for the present month, which will be compiled tomorrow, will hardly equal last year's shipments in June.

The mines on the range are not being worked to their full extent, and the docks are filled at Duluth, Allouez Bay and Two Harbors, waiting for boats.

For two weeks there has been a serious shortage of boats at Two Harbors. Boats that have been billed into that port have been diverted and sent to other docks for other grades of ore, and the result is that the dock superintendents and the captains hardly know "where the art at."

The ore transportation business has never in its history been so complicated and difficult as it is this year, and as a result the shipping may fall far short of what was expected.

The Steel corporation, Pickands, Mather & Co., and all the independent companies are letting up on shipments from the head of the lakes. There is an obvious reason for this.

During the latter part of last year the shipment of ore from all quarters was immense and the cargoes were placed on the docks on Lake Erie and stayed there all winter. This spring, when the ore traffic began again, the winter's supply still occupied the docks.

Practically speaking, not a ton of ore shipped this year has been placed on a dock on Lake Erie. The companies are unloading it from the boats onto the cars and hauling it to the furnaces. The method is naturally slower than it would be to dump the ore on the docks. It holds the boats longer at the dock, and sometimes the boats have to wait for trains to be made up and hauled back from the furnaces, because the transportation facilities at the lower end of the haul are not as good as those out of the head of the lakes, which bring the ore to the lake.

The result is that the dock men cannot figure on when a boat will come back. They cannot figure it will go to their dock, even if billed to it, for the distribution of grades of ore to the furnace has to be watched more carefully than ever before.

When the furnaces want a certain grade of ore and a boat isn't in with it or on the way, the first light steamer nearly up the lakes is hailed and sent to the nearest place where the required grade can be secured.

This has been the situation up to date, and as a result the mines are sluggish, the range roads and the Great Northern are not doing the work in transportation that they might, and the month, and perhaps the season, will not show up nearly so well as hoped for.

It is the opinion of iron men here that there will have to be large extensions made on the lower lakes in docks, transporation facilities and furnaces if this large amount of ore on the docks is to be moved and a place made for new shipments.

The result of the present conditions are not being forecasted, but the iron trade at the head of the lakes is looking for the reason for the present situation.

TWO WILL DIE.

Victims of Heinz Factory Accident Cannot Live.

Pittsburg, June 30.—After careful examinations by the physicians at the various hospitals today, it was said a number of the victims of the Heinz elevator accident were more seriously hurt than at first reported, and that two will probably die within a few hours. Those in a critical condition are Otis Thompson, a clerk at the Heinz plant, who was acting as guide to the visitors; John Cherney, of Allegheny; Mrs. E. P. Holeman, of Mt. Holly, Ohio, and Mrs. William Mitchell, of Paris, Ky. The other victims, including all the Cleveland visitors, rested easily during the night and will likely recover. The accident was caused by the breaking of a shaft, letting the elevator fall five stories.

TOM JOHNSON AND HERRICK

Will Be the Candidates For Governorship of Ohio.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 30.—Tom L. Johnson, mayor of this city, will be the Democratic nominee for governor of Ohio, and Cleveland will thus furnish the two men who will race for the highest office within the gift of the buckeyes this fall.

Democrats who are in position to name the slate have decided that the Cleveland mayor and famous single-tax advocate shall be Herrick's opponent, and, realizing the futility of trying to overcome the normal Republican majority in Ohio, will wage the whole fight on the legislative ticket.

Mr. Johnson is not desirous of running for governor this year, but the convention will force the nomination on him and he will accept. This was ascertained a few days ago, when W. L. Finley of Kenton, representing the Johnson wing of the party, was sent to Cleveland to discover how the mayor stood on the proposition.

While Johnson would not announce himself a candidate, he admitted that he would accept if the convention unanimously asked him to be the leader. That this program will be carried out is certainty unless vetoed at the last minute by Johnson himself, as his faction is in control of the state and already has enough counties in line to make his nomination a one-ballot affair.

SMITH MEMORIAL HALL.

Chicago, June 30.—The dedication of the George Smith Memorial hall has taken place on the Ferry hall campus in Lake Forest. The exercises were attended by many alumnae and friends of the institution. The building, which cost $50,000, is the gift of James Henry Smith, of New York, the heir to most of George Smith's vast estate. James Smith is a native of Illinois, but has lived in New York for many years.

AT WEST DULUTH

The wedding of Miss D'Aoust and M. J. Filiatrault occurred this morning in the Church of St. Jean Baptist, Eleventh avenue west, at 11 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Guillet, of that church. Wallace D'Aoust, a brother of the bride, acted as the best man, and a sister of the bride was the bridesmaid. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion, and a large number of the friends of the young couple were present at the ceremony.

Miss D'Aoust is a well-known and popular young lady of the West End, residing at 1807 West Superior street. Mr. Filiatrault is a prominent business man of West Duluth.

Mr. and Mrs. Filiatrault left shortly after the ceremony for a wedding trip to the southern part of the state, which is the old home of both the bride and groom. They will return Monday and take up their residence in West Duluth, where they intend to make their home. Several out-of-town visitors were present at the ceremony, including Mrs. Le Sage, a sister of Mr. Filiatrault, from Virginia.

During their absence A. J. Hazeltine will have charge of Filiatrault's business in West Duluth.

INJURED BY CAR.

Mrs. Wadleigh Thrown to Pavement By Collision.

Mrs. W. A. Wadleigh, of West Duluth, will have cause to remember circus day for many months to come.

Mrs. Wadleigh was alighting from an East Fourth street car yesterday at Eighteenth avenue west, when a West Duluth extra, which was immediately behind, laden with circusgoers, crashed into the rear vestibule, throwing Mrs. Wadleigh to the ground. Her head struck against the pavement with much force and she sustained severe cuts and bruises.

The collision is believed to have been due to a defective brake on the West Duluth car as the motorman was unable to stop it in time to prevent the collision.

With blood flowing from a number of scratches, the lady was carried into a nearby building, where Dr. David Graham was called to attend her.

Mrs. Wadleigh is 26 years of age and has one child living in West Duluth. Her husband is at present in Washington.

It is not thought that her injuries will be serious unless internal complications develop.

WEST DULUTH WINS.

The West Duluth ball team returned yesterday from Hibbing, where they played Sunday, winning handily by the score of 8 to 7.

The game was closely contested from the start. Hibbing drew first blood, scoring three in the first inning and two in the third. The West Duluth boys, however, made a strong finish, scoring in the seventh, eighth and winning the game in the ninth. Hibbing's three in the first came from a single, a two-bagger and a home run.

The game was a fast one and marked by clever fielding on the part of both teams, West Duluth having two errors and Hibbing three. Larson pitched a pretty game for the winners after the third innings. The line-up and score by innings is as follows:

| West Duluth. | | Hibbing. |
|---|---|---|
| M. Bouska .... | catcher .... | Kieffern |
| Larson ..... | pitcher ..... | O'Brien |
| Doyle ..... | first base ..... | Meisner |
| Summers .... | second base .... | Skinner |
| Coughlan ..... | short stop ..... | Logan |
| Faubister .... | third base ..... | McCoy |
| Bouska ..... | outfield ..... | Dwyer |
| Steinlaub ..... | outfield ..... | Sly |
| Brotherton .... | outfield ..... | Holland |

West Duluth ..... 0 0 0 1 2 0 1 2 1—8
Hibbing ..... 3 0 2 0 0 0 0 2 0—7

West Duluth has now played ten games this season, winning seven games and losing three. The team will go to Grand Rapids on July 4 to play a second game with the fast nine from that city. In the former game Grand Rapids won by the score of 7 to 5.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS

To Avoid Accidents In British Auto Race.

New York, June 30.—Every precaution has been taken by the Automobile club of Great Britain, says a Herald dispatch from Dublin, to guard against accidents in the great race on Thursday. The competition will probably be one of skill and nerve of the drivers rather than the speed of the machines.

High speeds, that is, of more than eighty or ninety kilometres an hour, are well nigh an impossibility, and on the major portion of the route would be in fact suicidal.

There is a ghastly significance in the fact that the stands appear to have been erected along the course just at the most dangerous spots.
